Unwilling to divest

By Maureen Azzato
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The Retirement Board has voted unanimously to allow the city union employees to decide whether or not the board should divest its holdings from American companies doing business in South Africa.

Despite pleas to divest from two local lawmakers and dozens of high school students and citizens, the board members said they do not plan to divest from companies that abide by the Sullivan Principles, a code of conduct that calls for fair labor practices and active participation by American companies in South Africa to abolish apartheid.

"The board's funds do not belong to us. They belong to the employees and retirees of the city," Comptroller Lawrence Marino said. "It's up to them to decide what to do with the board's holdings."

Board members said this would mark the first time employees would be asked to decide a policy question. Employees are slated to vote on the issue in September.

The issue was decided by the board within the first five minutes of last week's meeting and later the floor was opened for discussion. State Sen. Jack Backman, D-Newton/Brookline, called the lack of discussion before the vote an "outrage."

"To first have a vote and then ask for discussion is a warped way to hold a public meeting and I find it insulting," Backman said, angrily throwing his papers and folders on the floor. "I am shocked and chagrined at the way your pension board operates."

Before taking the vote, Marino said statistics prove that divested portfolios are more "risky and volatile" than non-divested ones.

Mann favors divestment

NEWTON - Municipal employees and retirees would be supporting America's tradition of equality by forcing the Retirement Board to get rid of South African related investments, according to Mayor Theodore D Mann.

"This is consistent with my own principles and those of American government," Mann said at his weekly press conference.

The board decided last week that city employees and retirees should decide, in September, whether it should divest holdings in American

From crystal sets to silicone chips

NEWTON UPPER FALLS — The cluttered little repair shop in Pettee Square might as well be a museum of technology.

In one corner, by the door, are 21-inch split-screen, stereophonic televisions employing the latest in video electronics. Scattered around the room on benches, shelves and in corners are tubes, bodies and knobs from radio sets Grandma used to listen to Fred Allen. It is a place where the age of the homemade crystal set crashes headlong into the age of the silicone chip.

Every museum needs a curator and the only person who could serve in that capacity is 85-year-old Robert Turner. Until April of this year, he was the proprietor of this little shop of wonders. Turner, who prefers to think of himself as "20, four times around," decided to sell his business because ever-advancing technology was "getting out of hand." Like the old tubes in his shop that still work despite the fact that they went out of style 20 years ago, Robert Turner just could not keep up.

'If I stayed up late enough, I could even get stations from Australia. Not bad for something that wasn't supposed to work.'

Robert Turner

It is still called Turner's Repair Service. Afterall, "Mr T," as his friends and associates call him, built up quite a reputation during 43 years of fine-tuning various whatsits and rewiring assorted doohickeys.

David Webster, the 26-year-old Needham man who bought the place, says people come from as far as Medfield to get their televisions — and now computers and video recorders — fixed because they know the Turner name. That, he says, is testimony to the skill and know-how of the man whose name still adorns the sign above the door. To change it would be as unlucky

MBTA's 'junkyard'

By Les Orsini

AUBURNDALE — An MBTA storage area behind Riverside station has become a dumping ground that encourages youth vandalism, according to some Auburndale residents and Alderman Polly Bryson.

In response, an MBTA spokesman said the authority hopes this summer to get rid of the 14 broken-down trolley cars stored there and clean the site.

But since the MBTA purchased the cars with federal dollars, Washington must approve scrapping them, said Peter Dimond, MBTA public information officer.

The cars are stored in a roughly quarter-mile stretch of train track behind the Jordan Marsh warehouse. The ground there is strewn with broken glass, jagged metal, rusty beer cans and other debris.

"I just feel feel that it's been made a dumping ground," Bryson said.

Vandals have so damaged many of the 14 cars - each of which has two passenger sections - that the area looks as if it were

Firefighters object to drug testing language

By Les Orsini
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The city's insistence on the same drug testing language agreed to by police is blocking a contract settlement with firefighters, according to the union president.

Kevin McArdle, president of the Newton Firefighters Association (NFA), said city negotiators are demanding his membership either agree to drug testing language or accept a smaller raise than that recently granted to police.

City negotiators are offering firefighters a 20-percent hike over four years should they refuse police testing language, McArdle said.

That raise would be 3 percent less than the four-year pact police accepted April 2, he said.

The last negotiated firefighter agreement ended in June 1984.

The union president questioned the sincerity of the city's fight for drug testing. If officials truly cared about drugs and employee safety, they would not propose to back off the testing language in exchange for smaller raises, McArdle said.

"It's hypocrisy," McArdle said. "That bothers me very much."

McArdle said he could not recommend and his membership would be unlikely to support the city's current offer because it contains the drug policy in the police contract.

'If there's going to be drug testing ... it should start with Mayor Mann.'

Firefighter Kevin McArdle

That drug language could lead to harassment because it would give a chief too much discretionary power, McArdle said. A chief or the city could use that power to harass an employee for personal reasons, he said. Some police officers have questioned the policy on those same grounds.

The police contract gives Chief William Quinn the right to seek drug tests when there is "reasonable cause" to suspect an officer.

Any fair drug policy should emphasize education and rehabilitation for the first offender, said McArdle. The city wants the right to take punitive action instead, he said.

"They're talking about a sledge hammer," said McArdle. "They're talking about discipline, not rehabilitation."

The issue of drug testing has put an unfair stigma on the police and firefighters, McArdle said.

"The immediate perception is there must be a drug problem," he said. "In my department,

Teen Suicide

One of the problems is a lack of stereotypes

By Jeff Peterson
In Focus Editor

Early last week, Cornelius Allen Trevino, a 14-year old from Laredo, Texas shot himself to death on the grave of an older brother who died in 1984 of a drug overdose. According to a family member, Trevino had told at least 21 people he planned to kill himself. Apparently no one took him seriously.

Last month, a 21-year-old woman just arrested for driving while intoxicated attempted to hang herself in a Watertown jail cell. Only quick action by a local officer aborted the attempt.

Last year, a young Westwood man succeeded in hanging himself with his shirt in the Dedham Police station lockup following his arrest for possession of drug paraphernalia and a $50 traffic voilation.

Three different cases. Three different communities. Two different outcomes. The single common denominator is that all were young.

"There is no single stereotype of a suicidal person," says Dr. Douglas Jacobs, assistant professor of psychiatry at Harvard Medical School and director of The Cambridge Hospital Center for the Study of Suicide. "That's one of the problems."

These three deaths represent a growing number of youths in this country who choose to end their lives through suicide — a phenomonon experts say is a good barometer of the feelings of despair and hopelessness being experienced by adolescents today.

"There's no question there is a very big increase in the numbers of suicides among young people," says Kay Tiffany, who runs a stress-depression workshop for teachers and counselors in the Winchester Public Schools. "The statistics bear this out."

In Jacobs' eyes, these statistics — particularly among adolescents — are "alarming." In 1960, 3 of every 100,000 adolescents committed suicide. In 1980, the rate had quadrupled to 12 per 100,000. According to the American Academy of Pediatrics, 6,000 teens or young adults killed themselves in 1984 — 14 each day, one every 90 minutes — making it the third leading cause of death behind accidents and homicides in that age group.

The rise in suicides among youth is not limited exclusively to adolescents. According to Dr. Herbert Hendin, director of the Center for Psychosocial Studies at New York Medical College, the rate

Dissenters cite racial makeup

'Celtics fever' is not unanimous

By Les Orsini
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Fan hysteria will mount as the Celtics climb towards the NBA championship, but a local sports expert says one ethnic group wants the Lakers or the 76ers or anyone to knock them off the playoff ladder.

Boston College professor Andrew Buni has concluded that black fans, in general, root against the local men in green.

But a prominent Boston sports columnist said if Buni's observation is correct, the Celtics may well be the victims — rather than the cause — of racism.

Buni — who teaches courses on the history of American sports and the history of blacks in American sports — recently asked a class of 160 students if they favor the Celtics. The 15 or so black students all wanted them to lose. Buni pressed one to explain why.

"Oh, you know," the student said.

"You tell me," Buni pressed him.

"They just don't take care of the brothers," said the student. "The word is out on the Celtics among blacks who know basketball."

Their dislike appears to be a reaction to the racial makeup of the current Celtics — eight white and four blacks. This is the lowest number of blacks on any NBA team.

But black fans' dislike of the Celtics may stem from a much deeper cause, Buni observed. Racial tensions that have existed for decades in the metropolitan area make it difficult for blacks to get behind the team, said Buni, who has followed the Celtics for the last 30 years.

Integrating the Boston public schools led to violence and a busing crisis that lasted from 1967 to 1974, said Buni. Boston is now "licking its wounds," while the suburbs remain white bastions indifferent or even hostile to blacks, he said.

Celtics General Manager Jan Volk declined to comment on the issue. "I don't feel qualified to talk about the sociological implications of this subject," he said. "I have a tough enough time putting out a good team. I hope that's sufficient."

Alluding to regional racial tensions, two black stars from this year's BC basketball team said they are rooting against the Celtics.

"I'm always looking for someone to knock them off," said senior guard Dominic Pressley.

Roger McCready, last year's leading scorer, echoed his teammate's sentiment.

"Blacks aren't as well represented (on the Celtics)," he said, "and possibly not as much appreciated."

Celtic crowds are largely white and the atmosphere is inhospitable for many black fans, said Pressley. "You go to the Boston Garden and see basically a lot of Irish people," said Pressley. "You don't really feel comfortable in the Boston Garden."

The Garden audience mirrors the city's unwritten racial code, which says some places are for whites and others for blacks, said McCready. Blacks feel unsafe walking the streets of South Boston and whites feel the same in Roxbury, he observed.

Other cities are working toward racial harmony, but Boston remains divided, Pressley said.

A game between the Celtics and Los Angeles Lakers — whose starting lineup is mostly black — appears to mirror the different racial attitudes of the two cities, noted Pressley. "You can almost view it as black versus white," he said.

Garden audiences are not as quick to acknowledge the superior play of black players as they are of whites, said Pressley. "If you look at Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and all the things he's done, he doesn't get appreciated in Boston," he said.

Local sports analysts have uncovered a variety of opinions about the best and the whitest team in the NBA. File photo

On this and other points, one long-time Celtics watcher took exception. Bob Ryan, who has covered the Celtics for over 15 years as a Boston Globe reporter, said Garden fans have expressed great appreciation for such black stars as Julius Erving, Magic Johnson and Dennis Johnson.

"You tell me DJ (Johnson) isn't appreciated?" Ryan said. "Nonsense."

In fact, Jabbar wrote a letter to the Globe expressing his appreciation, Ryan said. "For 15 years, I have been visiting Boston Garden and, while I may have never been a crowd favorite, it was most gratifying to hear and feel your ovation," the Laker great wrote.

While Ryan agreed few blacks attend Celtics games, black attendance in all NBA cities is low. "The economics preclude most black people from going to the games," Ryan said.

In his more than 15 years covering the Celtics, Ryan noticed only Cobo Arena - which used to house the Detroit Pistons - had a large black audience.

"It was refreshing to know they would come," Ryan said. "Why there?"

He decided to look into the matter and discovered a healthy Detroit auto industry was placing blacks in foremen and middle-management positions.

The Pistons now play in Pontiac, an industrial community outside of Detroit, and the black audience is considerably smaller, the Globe writer said.

The Celtics have an exemplary record on racial issues, said Ryan, a point on which Buni agrees.

The team had the first black NBA player - Chuck Cooper in the early 1950s - and the first black coach, Bill Russell, Ryan and Buni both pointed out.

Ryan said current Celtic President and former coach Red Auerbach insisted on pairing a black and white player as road roommates wherever possible. Jo Jo White and Dave Cowens, Tom Sanders and John Havlicek, and Don Chaney and Don Nelson all shared rooms, Ryan cited as examples.

In addition, the Celtics and Philadelphia 76ers simultaneously started the first all-black teams in 1965.

Despite this history, the Globe writer said Buni's observation - that many knowledgeable black fans do not like the Celtics - is plausible.

"Without any question, this is a supportable premise," the Globe writer said. "What it demonstrates is racism is a two-way street."

Black fans should keep in mind the Celtics' race record and judge the team on its court play, said the Globe writer. "The only issue would be if they had white players and they were an inferior team," he said. "Then they would be subject to every form of legitimate criticism."

But the current Celtics team may be one of the best ever. "It's a good test of the tolerance of black people," Ryan stressed.

Some sociologists would argue that this Celtics team is not a test of tolerance but evidence of "racial stacking" - a concept which says teams reserve for whites positions of control and authority that require intellectual ability.

A white would be more likely to be named a quarterback or a pitcher than a black of greater talent, according to the theory.

BC sociologist and Newton alderman Michael Malec - who teaches a course in the sociology of sports - said the concept seems illogical in that it would have teams acting against their own best interests.

There is, however, strong evidence to support the theory, Malec pointed out.

Well over 90 percent of the pitchers in major league baseball were nonblack in 1985 and there were no black catchers.

Almost all pro football quarterbacks were white in 1984. Blacks were prevelant only at running back, wide receiver and defensive back.

More than 70 percent of the NBA guards and forwards in 1984-85 season were black, but at center - arguably the most important position in the game - half the players were white.

In his 1979 book "Second Wind," former Celtic great Bill Russell commented on racial stacking without actually using the term.

"As far as I know, there has never been a black offensive center in professional football," Russell wrote. "There are plenty of huge black guys elsewhere on the line, but none actually hiking the ball. In the coaches' minds, center is a white position because it requires intellect and leadership."

Malec's students performed an exercise which showed NBA rosters from 1977 to 1984 tended to reflect the size of each city's black population.

The eight NBA cities with the smallest population of blacks had 17 percent more white ballplayers than the five NBA cities with with largest population of blacks.

"The data is there," Malec said. "It's hard to say it's merely coincidence."

Whether or not the Celtics are evidence of racial stacking, Malec, Buni and BC history professor Paul Breines think some fans are taking extra pleasure in the team's whiteness.

"Most of us are more comfortable with categories of people who are similar," said Malec.

"The fact is the whiteness of the Celtics now is what makes them attractive as an enterprise," said Breines, a sports fan of 30 years. "There is a sense of black/white clash in Celtics games."

"To me, it's so simple it's mind boggling," said Buni of some Celtics fans. "They don't like blacks."

Do the Celtics have any responsiblity to ease black/white tensions among local basketball fans?

The Globe's Ryan argues they do not. "I think the only obligation to either community is to put the best team they can on the floor," he said.

But Malec says all pro teams have a social obligation. They receive special antitrust exemption from the federal government because they provide a benefit to their communities, he said. And teams justify their existence, in part, by offering athletes as ideals to the young, Malec pointed out.

"A big part of the discussion of drugs (in sports) is the issue of role models," said Malec. "Whether they want to be or not, they are role models."

If Celtics management wanted to promote racial harmony, they have the perfect vehicle for doing so, said BC psychology professor Joseph Cautela.

When the Celtics players used BC's facilities last summer to get in shape for the fall training camp, the rapport between blacks and whites was obvious. This team of eight whites and four blacks has a racial harmony generally lacking in American society, observed Cautela.

The Celtics might be able to promote that harmony as a model for fans, he said.

But how much incentive team management has for such a promotion is another question, Cautela observed. The Celtics have sold out 264 consecutive home games dating back to a Dec. 19, 1980 game against the Houston Rockets.

"If it is true that the Celtics have a poor image among blacks, what can they do about it?" he asked. "And do they want to, since the place is always sold out anyway?"

Some parents irked by cancelled student trips

By Maureen Azzato
Staff Writer

NEWTON - Several parents have criticized the school administration's cancellation of European trips because of the Libyan crisis, calling it both "irresponsible and dictatorial" because they were neither consulted nor offered other alternatives.

They also claim there has been very little effort on the school's part to guarantee financial reimbursement, which amounts to approximately $700 per student.

"They (the administration) closed up every option, which they had no right to do," parent Joan Olsson said. "If we want our children to go on the trips, it is our right to let them do that. How dictatorial can you get?"

Olsson said parents were not given a chance to reorganize to see if there were other ways to carry on with the trip plans without school sponsorship.

"Everyone I talked to would have been willing to sign a liability waiver freeing the school from legal responsibility, but that was not an option," she said. "The schools aren't thinking about the kids. They're just afraid of the legal implications."

Olsson's involvement was with 17 of the Troubadors, a junior high school choir, scheduled to go to England after the administration announced the cancellations. She got the tickets from the organizers and found non-school chaperones.

Superintendent Dr. John Strand said the administration was forced to make the decision quickly and that there was little time to seek parental input.

"We had 24 hours to make a decision before the kids were scheduled to leave," Strand said. "The Libyan incident happened on Monday and the students were supposed to leave on Tuesday and Wednesday. We had to act fast."

He said the administration "felt badly" about not involving parents in their decision, but said it was "impractical" at the time.

Strand said the decision could not be left up to individual choice because the trips were school-sponsored.

"We would feel badly and legally responsible for those kids if anything happened, and we couldn't absolve ourselves of that responsibility," he said.

Aside from the legal implications, Strand said the administration felt a "personal and moral responsibility" to ensure students' safety.

Financial reimbursement is a question that remains unanswered, but school administrators said they are exploring means - including litigation - to recover the money from travel agents and the airlines.

Olsson said there has been talk of partial reimbursement, which would still translate into a loss of $200 per person.

Parent Howard Shapiro said it will be very difficult to get reimbursed because of "the mass hysteria that swept the country.

"This national pattern makes it easier for the administration to justify their decision, regardless of how bad, stupid or panicy it may be," he said.

Shapiro said nobody has contacted him about any reimbursements and he does not know what avenues parents can take.

"There might be a few legal remedies, but we'll have to wait until the hysteria dies down," he said. "I don't know what will come of it, but we can try."

The administration "usurped the decision for themselves," which resulted in an out-of-pocket loss for many, he said.

"They can't assume that because people live in Newton that they can simply kiss that money goodbye," Shapiro said. "I know for a fact many people struggled to get that money together."

Burr School ransacked and vandalized

AUBURNDALE — Vandals broke into the Burr School and completely ransacked the second floor, breaking several windows and smearing paint on the walls and the carpet of one classroom, police said.

"Anything that could be turned over was," Assistant Superintendent of Operations and Planning Vincent Silluzio said. "The shame of it is that the carpeting with the paint smeared on it was just installed last week."

Estimated damage and custodial clean-up cost is about $3,000, Silluzio said. Custodians worked until 1 a.m. Monday so the school could be opened on time. It has not been determined yet if anything was stolen, he said.

Book shelves, file cabinets, plants, desks and chairs were knocked over, but few things were broken, according to Silluzio. "Waltham is #1" was written in paint on one of the walls, police said.

At approximately 8 p.m. on Sunday an officer on patrol noticed four broken windows at the school. Entrance was gained through a door on the west side, police said. The building had been checked at noon and at 4 p.m. by police and "nothing unusual" had been found.

Several fingerprints were lifted from some items and the detective bureau is investigating the incident.

A youth who was playing basketball at the school Sunday afternoon told police he saw a 1974 maroon Buick sedan with five males inside pull out of the parking lot at 5:30 p.m.

Silluzio said windows have been broken in the past at the school but "nothing to this degree" has ever happened in any of the schools.

Foiled candidate starts sticker campaign

NEWTON - Chestnut Street resident John Carlucci last week launched a sticker campaign aimed at erasing the voter apathy that allegedly prevented him from collecting enough signatures to challenge State Rep. Susan D. Schur.

Carlucci, a 30-year-old quadraplegic who moved to the city from Everett in 1984, now faces a completely uphill battle in his bid to unseat the three-term House veteran.

The Republican novice must not only garner the name recognition needed to launch an effective sticker campaign, but also must educate potential voters on how the cumbersome sticker process works.

Ironically, Schur was the last Garden City candidate to assume office using the tactic.

Carlucci said he began seeking the 150 voter signatures he needed to qualify for the GOP ballot at the end of March, but managed to collect only 110 by last Tuesday's deadline.

"We ran into a great deal of voter apathy. What we decided to do was not file nomination papers. We decided the best way to stir interest in this campaign is to go door to door and meet the people in the district," he said.

In order to become the official GOP challenger for the seat, Carlucci must receive at least 150 sticker votes in the September primary.

Harte-Hanks to acquire Century group

Harte-Hanks Communications, Inc. has reached an agreement to acquire Century Newspapers of Winchester, MA. Century publishes six weekly newspapers in the Boston suburbs: The Arlington Advocate, The Belmont Citizen, The Belmont Herald, The Winchester Star, The Newton Transcript and The Watertown Sun. Century also owns the National News Service of New York, which publishes the weekly Commercial and Financial Chronicle and the monthly Bank and Quotation Record. Both are specialized financial publications.

Century Publications is owned by C. Peter Jorgenson and his wife Kathryn O. Jorgenson. Jorgenson is also publisher of The Artilleryman, a magazine which is not included in the acquisition.

The Century Newspapers will become part of the News-Transcript Group, headquartered in Framingham, MA, which is led by group president James W. Hopson. The daily newspapers in the group are the Middlesex News, Framingham; the Daily Transcript, Dedham; the News-Tribune, Waltham. Weekly newspapers include the Newton Graphic, the Wayland-Weston Town Crier, the Sudbury Town Crier, the Wellesley Townsman, the Parkway Transcript, the Needham Chronicle, the Trib Plus, the Family Shopper, and MetroWest Extra.

"We are very pleased that the Century Newspapers will become part of the News-Transcript family," said Hopson. "These high quality weekly newspapers fit well with our commitment to good community journalism, and the communities they serve are the most attractive in the Boston area."

"Becoming part of Harte-Hanks means greater opportunities for our employees," Jorgenson said, "and Harte-Hanks' excellent reputation for quality journalism and community service ensures that our newspapers will be in good hands."

Commenting on the acquisition, Harte-Hanks President Robert G. Marbut said, "We are particularly pleased with the Century acquistion because it contributes to our growth strategy — to concentrate our resources in fewer, larger markets. We believe the Boston market is one of the most attractive in the United States."

Harte-Hanks Communications, Inc. currently owns and operates 23 daily newspapers and more than 100 non-daily publications, including weekly newspapers, advertising publications produced by newspapers, city and tourism magazines and a trade publication for the radio industry. The company also publishes shoppers that are zoned into 413 separate editions reaching 4.3 million households each week.

Schools adopt AIDS policy to allay fears

NEWTON - Despite previously expressed opinions, the School Committee last week voted unanimously to adopt an AIDS policy at the recommendation of the health commissioner and the Parent-Teacher-Association Council.

The committee adopted the guidelines of the state public health and education departments rather than drawing up its own statement.

The policy serves to "allay fears and preserve a rational climate" in the event of an AIDS case reported in the schools, according to the PTA Council.

"We've been reading in our papers about AIDS in schools all over the country and how, because they did not have a clear cut policy, events got blown out of proportion and hysteria was the result," PTA Council Co-president Sheila Liberman said. "The poor children diagnosed as having AIDS have been persecuted in these instances."

She said the statement is necessary because it emphasizes the importance of patient anonymity.

Superintendent Dr. John Strand said the confidentiality of AIDS victims is designed to "maintain a supportive climate for that individual while she or he is at work or in school."

Strand assured the committee that the administration "will remove " any AIDS victim who presents a health risk to others, as stated in the guidelines.

Most state reps uncontested in races

NEWTON — With the exception of Joseph DeNucci, the incumbent state representatives from Newton and Waltham will coast to unopposed re-election victories this November.

No challengers emerged to representatives Susan D. Schur and David B. Cohen by the deadline for the submission of nomination papers to local election officials.

Their uncontested status this year represents an instant replay of the enviable situation all three found themselves in two years ago.

Cohen, who ran unopposed in 1982 and 1984, called his latest uncontested status "great."

"I'm very pleased, naturally. I will continue to work very hard to justify the confidence that the public has shown in me," the Vine Street resident said.

First elected to the House in 1979, Cohen will enter his fifth term as chairman of the Committee on Bills in Third Reading.

Schur was supposed to face opposition from Chestnut Street resident John E. Carlucci, a Republican disabled rights activist whose nomination papers failed to materialize.

Schur called the latest turn of events "a pleasant surprise."

Lead paint to be removed at 5 schools

NEWTON — Lead paint will be removed from five elementary schools by the end of this summer, according to Purchasing Agent Blair Kanbar.

The paint, which has peeled and cracked, was determined to be a health hazard last summer after a Health Department inspection revealed lead levels as high as 10 times the state-recommended safe level at the Bowen School. Kanbar said the city put out for bids to remove the paint at all five schools, but a combination of lateness, lack of qualified contractors and stringent liability insurance requirements resulted in no bids being returned.

This year, the city again put out bids and two Boston companies expressed interest. Professional Minority Contractors of Roxbury has offered to remove the lead from the Bowen, Underwood, Lincoln-Eliot, Memorial-Spaulding and Angier Schools for $50,000. Budget Deleading of Allston offered to delead only the Underwood and Memorial-Spaulding Schools for a total cost of $40,500.

Berkeley running

NEWTONVILLE — David J. Berkeley, well-known community activist and former candidate for mayor, is hoping to move into the office of 10th Middlesex District State Representative Joseph DeNucci, who is running for state auditor.

Berkeley, a representative of the Silver-Haired Legislature for the district, listed his highest priorities as "school budgets and waste in the school system, real estate taxes, good leadership, change and proper people in their positions, knowing their job and doing their job."

He was recently involved with moving the Nonantum Multi-Service Center into its new headquarters on California Street.

City faces halfway house issue again

NEWTON — The city's Planning Department is once again seeking to place a halfway house for mentally-ill adults in a Newtonville home. That plan stirred controversy among area residents when it was introduced this winter.

John Quatrale, the department's housing development coordinator, said aldermanic approval for the project will be sought on the grounds that it is an educational institution.

If approved, the home would be operated at 515 Walnut St. in Newtonville by Alternative Home, Inc., which now runs two similar facilities in Newton.

Residents spoke out against the project at public meetings this winter before the Planning Board and the aldermanic Programs and Planning Committee.

The board at that meeting voted not to recommend the project when the department sought a special permit for placing the home in a residential zone.

Barry Canner, Planning Department director, later withdrew the plan so as not to be in conflict with the board.

The board reversed its decision at a March 12 hearing during which residents by a 31 to 3 margin expressed support for the facility, according to David Schultz-McGuire, executive director for the nonprofit company.

It is not known how many of the residents present were from the Newtonville area.

Alternative Homes made a major effort to inform residents about the project after Canner withdrew the initial petition, Quatrale said.

"We held a public meeting with area residents, went house to house in the neighborhood, had numerous phone conversations, and presented at two public meetings of the Planning Board," said Schultz-McGuire in a letter to aldermen. "We believe that the result is a better program proposal and a better informed community.

Along with that letter, Quatrale had a packet of around 20 letters from residents and professionals endorsing Alternative Home and the project.

The department plans to seek approval from the aldermanic Land Use Committee on May 13 and Programs and Planning May 14. The facility must eventually be approved by the full Board of Aldermen.

The project is designed to house 10 mentally-ill adults in a residence formerly used by Lutheran Services as a home for adolescents.

When it was introduced, the plan raised fears among residents that the home's clients could be a danger to area children and to students at nearby Newton North High School.

They also questioned whether staffing level were adequate to maintain control of the clients and they wanted assurances that medications were safely stored and monitored.

Blacked out cable viewers see red

A distraught answering service employee was the only one to feel the wrath of Newton's Continental Cablevision subscribers last week, who turned to Ted Turner's Atlanta station to watch the Celtics take on the Hawks and found they had been blacked out again.

A display on the screen informed subscribers that "Due to federal rules, the program shown at this time has been deleted." What that really meant was that Continental had found a higher bidder for the game, the New England Sports Network, and that those viewers who had contracted with the company for regular reception of WTBS were out of luck.

We object to this rough treatment of cable subscribers.

An analogy might help to explain the situation. Imagine, if you will, that you have been a loyal subscriber of the Newton Graphic for years.

One week, in particular, we have a real blockbuster of a story in the Graphic. Say, we finally found out where the mayor's missing paychecks went. Or, say, Alderman Richard McGrath rose to the defense of Mayor Mann and DPW Commissioner James Hickey at a meeting of the Public Facilities. Or, say, the School Department budget came in below last year's total, reflecting declining enrollment and the closing of schools.

You know, some sort of breakthrough. Say, the press called the city's Building Department looking for Building Commissioner James Cameron and he actually picked up the phone. You know, something really newsworthy. Something you are really looking forward to reading.

Then, on Thursday, you notice that the Graphic did not come to your house in the mail. You go out to the store, and there are no copies of it there.

You call our offices demanding your copy of the paper. We tell you that, despite your years as a devoted subscriber, this week we sold your copy to someone who offered us more money for it. Sorry.

You would be outraged, just like those cable subscribers who bombarded Operator #36 at the company's answering service last week. But you would have a choice. You could, in your outrage, decide to take a different paper. Unfortunately, cable subscribers do not have any form of protest open to them. Continental has a monopoly in Newton. It's the only game in town. We're stuck with them.

We do have a Newton Cable Communications Advisory Board, though. Maybe a couple of calls to members of the board might stir things up.

Housing abundant, but hardly affordable

Massachusetts is one of the hottest real estate markets in the U.S. That has been the case in all of the Northeast, in fact. House sales soared 27.4 percent in March alone, according to a recent headline. Dropping interest rates have crowded bank offices with mortgage applicants. The flaw in an otherwise rose-laden garden of profits has to do with affordable housing as price inflation on dwellings doesn't appear to be on the decline.

One would imagine all efforts ought to be directed toward encouraging housing cost stabilization. On the contrary, our big thinkers on Beacon Hill seem to be intent on pushing the prices higher. We're not talking only about linkage, which is certainly an inflationary factor, but on a reach for more fees than are now being extracted. Some municipalities are getting into the act.

Before the Legislature is a flock of bills supposedly aimed at making more low-income housing available. Instead of coming out of the general fund, affordable homes would be subsidized by what amounts to indirect taxation through fees. How much would filter through the layers of bureaucracy to achieve that goal is a large question.

Nevertheless, even while acknowledging both the need for action and a worthwhile objective, the total proposition smacks too much of bureaucratic complexity. It was our belief the Dukakis administration was committed to direct state budget assistance in the hundreds of millions on a continuing basis to stimulate low-cost housing.

This is the way to go, not fee actions to accumulate money that will be passed through to buyers and feed the inflationary fires. Less, not more housing, could be the end result.

New rules make candidates scarce

By George B. Merry

It's getting harder and harder to run for state office in Massachusetts.

Not only have the campaign costs soared, but candidate qualifications in both parties are hardly an inducement to would-be contenders.

To seek the Republican nomination for any of the six so-called constitutional offices--from governor to auditor--a potential candidate had to compete in the GOP preprimary convention last month and receive the votes of at least 10 percent of the delegates.

In the Democratic side, hopefuls have an even tougher row to hoe. The party's September primary is out of bounds to those who choose to sit out the May 17 state convention or get less than 15 percent of delegates' votes. Even to compete for endorsement for statewide office, they must have filed a declaration of candidacy, accompanied by 500 signatures from convention delegates, more than a month in advance. That deadline quietly passed April 11.

So don't expect any last-minute candidacies at the Democratic convention in Springfield.

The biggest convention field is for auditor. None of the candidates are well known around the state or even among the 4,700 delegates expected to attend the Democratic gathering.

Squaring off for the endorsement are State Reps. Joseph DeNucci of Newton and Richard T. Moore of Uxbridge, and City Councilors Maura Hennigan and Charles Yancey of Boston. Mr. DeNucci is House chairman of the Legislative Committee on Human Services and Elder Affairs. Mr. Moore is a former chairman of the House Committee on taxation and a one-time selectman in Hopedale.

Miss Hennigan, a teacher by profession, is the daughter of James Hennigan Jr., a former state senator, Suffolk County official, and the 1962 Democratic nominee for attorney general.

Mr. Yancey, a business consultant from Boston's Mattapan section, is the only black seeking statewide office.

The auditor's seat is particularly attractive since its current occupant, John J. Finnegan of Boston, is not seeking reelection, and it is an office Democrats have held for the past four decades.

An even larger number of candidates might have surfaced had the incumbent's unexpected "I'm not running" decision not come just weeks before the qualifying deadline.

Try as Democratic leaders will to make this year's convention fun and give delegates a sense of accomplishment, the thinness of the candidate fields and lack of competiton for the various endorsements may not generate much excitement.

It could be more of a coronation than convention and certainly not the kind of emotion-charged gathering Bay State Democrats are accustomed to. And because of the party's 15 percent rule, the September Democratic primary may be a yawner for most of the party's candidates and voters.

While political parties should be free to make their own rules, it is questionable whether the present arrangement is in the best interests of open government.

Anybody who can get the required number of signatures should be allowed to enter a party's primary and not have to go through a brokered convention.

"Psst. You got the stuff?"

What Orwell never imagined

By Kevin C. Kennedy

The following is a conversation allegedly overheard in a municipal parking lot in the wee, dark hours of the morning. Two dark sedans are pulled up alongside each other, driver's-side-to-driver's-side. One of the cars is a police patrol car.

The drivers' windows come down.

Car #1: "Are you Maurice?"

Car #2: "Yeah. I can tell who you are. Can't you guys be a little less conspicuous? I'm surprised you turned the blue lights off."

Car #1: "Enough of that. You got the stuff I ordered?"

Car #2: "Yeah. I got it right here on the front seat ... in little bottles. Look's like a 12-pack for one of those weird parties you read about in the Phoenix classifieds."

Car #1: "Twelve? Did you say 12? I need 15. I ordered 15. I got 15 guys who need 'em. Well, 14 guys and me."

Car #2: "Does this look like the bloody Stop and Shop? You take what you can get ... what I can get you. Remember, we're talkin' contraband here, officer!"

Car #1: "What am I gonna do? The exam's tomorrow!"

Car #2: "I'll give you a couple of empties. Give 'em to your girlfriend and have her fill 'em up. Worst thing can happen: The guys show up pregnant."

Car #1: "You think it's funny? How do I know you didn't just fill 'em up yourself?"

Car #2: "Who do you think you're dealin' with, Mickey Mouse? We been in this business a long time ... ever since the first word of this drug testing leaked out, you see? And we don't stay in business when guys test positive, you see?

"These bottles are sealed and certified ... each one of 'em filled under the watchful gaze of the chief of the Chickashee Indians, on a reservation in the middle of Oklahoma. These guys live at a Catholic mission out there. They're all Catholics.

"Believe me, these are guaranteed. These guys never even seen a aspirin!

"Now, you want 'em or dontcha?"

Car #1: "Alright ... alright! Don't get uptight. I just asked you a question. Alright. How much for 12?"

Car #2: "Same as for 15. That's how much money you got, right?"

Car #1: "What are you talkin' about? That's a burn!"

Car #2: "So arrest me, officer ... I told you I'd throw in three empties. I'll even give ya seals for 'em, so they'll look like the rest."

Car #1: "You're a burn, Maurice ... a first-class burn! Give 'em to me. (Holds the money out the car window. Maurice lets it dangle there in a sliver of street light.)

Car #2: "None of my business, of course, but you must be pretty desperate, buddy. You don't seem like the kind of guy who'd mess with dope."

Car #1: "Dammit! Three bloody generations of cops in the family. Then my girlfriend, who's a teacher in Cambridge, takes me to one of those weird parties over there. Weird smells ... People disappear into the bedroom every five minutes and come out in la-la land.

"I eat a brownie and that's that! Chills. Shaking. Pale as a ghost. I had to go home. Some liberal yo-yo poisoned the damn thing!

"Dope! And I'm up for testing in four days! And now it's tomorrow — today! — and I am stuck!

"My father. My uncles. My brothers. I'd have to leave town!

"So, let me have it."

Car #2: (Finally takes the money and hands over a flat box. The glass bottles tinkle against each other, despite his handling them like eggs.) "Oh, yeah. Don't forget these." (Hands over a bag of empties.)

"Now remember. You gotta hold the bottle under your arm for at least three minutes before you use it. Gotta make sure it's nice and warm, you know."

Car #1: "Thanks for the tip, Mo. You're a real prince!" (Speeds off.)

Car #2: (Counting the bills in the glow of a distant street light.) "Did I say ChickaSHEE? Maybe it was ChickaSHAW. (Fans himself with the bills.) Hey, it could be ChickaS--T, but it's turnin' into pure G-O-L-D!" (Chuckles and drives off.)

Drug testing: a dangerous solution

By Roger Simon

There is no abandoning technology; we all know that. Technology improves our lives in immeasurable ways, and turning back the clock is not only impossible but foolish.

But we go wrong with technology when we want it to give us the quick fix. The easy solution. Perfection.

In kicking midshipman Jeff Bellistri out of the Naval Academy for alleged cocaine use, the Navy used technology, a drug test, as the basis for its action.

Then, five weeks later, the Navy Secretary reinstated Bellistri because more technology, a polygraph test, exonerated him.

While I am glad Bellistri is back in the academy, the two decisions were equally boneheaded.

The Naval Academy believes in drug testing because it does not believe in itself. It believes that its own honor code and the human interaction of its staff and students are insufficient to root out drug abuse.

Kids can lie, teachers can screw up, but tests can do neither. That is the Navy reasoning.

The Naval Academy does admit to some error. It says the error rate of its drug testing program is spectacularly low: 11 errors in 1.8 million samples.

I think we can all agree that is nearly perfect.

It is also probably nonsense.

An article in the Wall Street Journal last week by Dr. William H. Anderson, an academic physician who teaches at Harvard and Tufts universities, said:

"In the case of drug testing, 90 percent accuracy would be considered unusually good. Lie detectors score from 70 percent accuracy at best to no better than chance at worst."

But even if the Navy's claim of accuracy were true, what happens to the 11 errors?

These represent students who would be falsely accused, bounced out and would have their careers and maybe their lives ruined.

There is a headlong rush into drug testing all over America. Sports teams, newspapers, large corporations are all setting up drug testing programs.

Every time I write about this subject people say I am afraid of taking a drug test myself. On the contrary. I don't use drugs and never have.

But what some companies are searching for is an easy answer to one of the more difficult problems of modern times. And they think they have a fail-safe way of finding drug abusers and doing something about them.

But they don't. And because they don't, they are going to hurt a lot of people.

"Let's suppose we had a test with an accuracy of 95 percent," Dr. Anderson wrote, "that is, once in every 20 times it gave the wrong answer. Screening people with this 'very accurate' test will falsely accuse five people for every true accusation, simply because of the rarity of the genuine criminal."

And what happens to the falsely accused? Well, imagine yourself.

You come to work one morning and your boss calls you into his office. You figure you're finally going to get that raise you deserve.

"Murgatroyd," the boss says, "remember that random drug test you took two weeks ago?"

You nod, but you are not worried. You don't sniff, smoke or inject. You have a beer or two while watching the ball game and every Christmas you have one too many at the office party and embarrass yourself, but you always take a cab home after.

"You're going to have to go into a treatment program, Murgatroyd," your boss says. "Drexel will be taking over your territory. And you are lucky. Some people wanted to fire you."

"Treatment program?" you say. "Treatment for what?"

"Drug abuse," your boss says. "Don't deny it. These tests are never wrong. If you don't go into the treatment program, you're out the door. And if you do go into the treatment program, we'll have to spot check you for drugs every week for the next two years."

You splutter. You deny. You see your career going up in smoke. And what if this gets around? You will be ruined in the community. You will never get another job. You will be washed up. Finished.

This day is fast approaching in America. If you think it can't happen to you, think again.

Drug abuse is a serious problem.

But abuse of the innocent is no solution.

Just old enough to remember when

By Murray Olderman

I'm just old enough to remember when...

...A pitcher with an ailing shoulder had a sore arm, not a torn rotator cuff (a term which would have mystified Dizzy Dean).

...Fielders left their gloves on the outfield grass between innings instead of taking them back to the dugout.

...The gloves were floppy-fingered and small, not the huge fishnets prevalent today.

...Fielders caught the ball with two hands, disdained the current one-hand flashy grabs.

...The players wore baggy flannel knickers and would have felt naked in the present form-fitting double knits. And the colors were basic white at home, gray on the road.

...All baseball shoes were black — white meant the social set in Palm Beach.

...Pitchers didn't ice down their elbows after a game.

...And they also prided themselves on complete nine-inning efforts.

...There was always a resin bag on the dirt behind the mound.

...Batters spread their hands on the handle, like Ty Cobb did, for better bat control.

...And no hitter wore those skin-tight golf gloves, a practice made popular by Ken "The Hawk" Harrelson.

...A home run was a "round-tripper" or a "four-bagger"; a double play was a "twin killing."

...There was no such thing as a sacrifice fly. It was just another out and another time at bat.

...All games were played on natural grass (and players hadn't yet been seduced by the other kind of grass).

...Grandstand seats in Yankee Stadium cost $1.10; reserved seats were $2.20. (Today's bleacher ticket in "The House That Ruth Built" costs $3.)

...Players bore such names as "The Wild Horse of the Osage" — a.k.a., John Leonard "Pepper" Martin, who later slept under the stands when he managed the Sacramento Solons.

...Any player wearing a mustache was considered a foreign agent.

...There was no such species as a designated hitter.

...Teams rode trains for their trips to other cities.

...They also carried such names as "The Gashouse Gang" (the St. Louis Cardinals of 1934) and "Murderers Row" (the New York Yankees of 1927).

...St. Louis was the only major-league city west (barely) of the Mississippi River.

...There were no radar guns to time the speed of pitches, but batters still knew that Bob Feller threw 100 mph.

...Fielders caught the ball with two hands, disdained the current one-hand flashy grabs.

...Sunday was double-header day, and sometimes the second game was called because of darkness or Pennsylvania's blue laws.

...They didn't play the national anthem before games — a rock version, or otherwise.

...An interview didn't consist of a battery of intrusive tape recorders, microphones and mini-cams thrust in front of a reporter using a good old-fashioned ball point pen (as a matter of fact, there were no ball points).

...Manager Connie Mack (and also Burt Shotton in Brooklyn) wore a suit and tie in the dugout and waved a scorecard to place his fielders.

...Al Simmons had his foot in the bucket, and Joe DiMaggio had that wide, spraddled stance.

...The House of David toured the nation's small towns, a bunch of ringers in beards, some of them pasted on.

...There were no player agents, or even free agents; and Babe Ruth made a higher salary than President Hoover, explaining, "I had a better year."

...Red Barber introduced us to the Catbird Seat and the Rhubarb, and Mel Allen was as big as Howard Cosell ever was.

...Crackerjacks were as hot an item as peanuts and popcorn.

...On corner lots, kids played with balls made of black friction tape wrapped around an unraveled baseball.

Now don't tell me the game hasn't changed.

Marathon prize unpatriotic

To the editor:

I am shocked.

Does anyone want to explain why the BAA, in the state known for its patriots, would give foreign cars to winners of the Boston Marathon — especially on Patriots Day?

Does this mean American cars aren't worthy? Some patriots.

Lost a friend to seat belt law

Dear Sir:

A few weeks ago I talked with Mr. Katz concerning my vigorous objection to the use of "fillers" which endorse the seat belt law. At this time I expressed my complete approval of the use of seat belts but, at the same time, my firm opposition to any mandatory use law.

Mr. Katz was most patronizing, but I note that in subseqent issues the filler continued to appear. The April 23 edition consumed some 20 square inches. I find this to be a flagrant exhibition of your obvious insensitivity to those of us who take a firm stand against yet another invasion of our civil rights perpetrated by the state.

As an expression of my objection to your continued endorsement of this invasion, please find my enclosed response to your subscription renewal.

Senior lunch sponsors sought

To the editor

For the past 19 years, the Newton Senior Citizen Luncheon Committee, together with help of Newton's business community, has provided a delicious full-course turkey lunch, hours of entertainment, and the opportunity for 500 of our city's senior citizens to spend a few enjoyable hours together.

This year's annual event will be held on Wednesday, May 14, 1986, at the American Legion Post 440, on California Street in Newton.

Last year, 46 members of Newton's business community generously contributed $50 each to help sponsor a table of 10 senior citizens for lunch.

Sponsorships are acknowledged in the May 14th luncheon program as well as in the "Golden Times" newsletter, which is mailed by the Department of Human Services to over 16,000 senior citizens in the Newton Community.

Your support and sponsorship would be greatly appreciated. Please forward your check in the amount of $50 payable to: Newton Senior Citizen Luncheon c/o Ed Mandell, 69 Union St., Newton Centre, MA 02159.

Mother's Day time for peace

To the editor:

When Julia Ward Howe established Mother's Day in 1872, the purpose was not to send flowers and cards, not to advertise sale items! The day was set aside as a time to discuss issues of war and peace.

One of the most important issues of our time concerns the Reagan Administration giving top priority to increased spending for nuclear weapons while cutting spending for human needs.

Given the hazardous implications of the meltdown of the nuclear power plant in Russia, this is a vital time for concerned citizens to reflect on the future of nuclear power and nuclear weapons, and the use of them in our world.

On Sunday, May 11, a proclamation from Mayor Mann declaring Mother's Day as Peace Day in Newton, and honoring the hard work of Newton Action for Nuclear Disarmament over the past five years, will be read at Newton City Hall. We hope many residents will take this opportunity, from 1:30 to 2:30 p.m., to come and learn more about what Newton is doing to direct its efforts toward peace.

Christa's gift

The nation will long remember Christa McAuliffe a teacher, astronaut and an American hero. She was a dreamer whose passion was to reach for the stars. Her imagination knew no boundaries.

Today, our future dreamers can be found in our nation's classrooms. It was in the classroom that Christa taught and where she hoped her achievements would one day inspire her students to return as teachers.

That is why the American Federation of Teachers (AFT) established "Christa's Challenge," an education and scholarship fund that will pay for the education of our country's brightest students who wish to dedicate their lives to the challenge Christa loved most - teaching.

Please help keep Christa's dream alive by sending your tax-free donations to: Christa's Challenge, P.O. Box 1930, Washington, DC 20013.

For efforts will be a tribute to Christa McAuliffe, our nation's teachers and will go a long way towards meeting America's drastic need for more than a million newly qualified teachers in the coming decade.

Imposter feeling strikes the best of us

By Lauren McFalls
Assistant News Editor

A lawyer, paralyzed by the fear she is going to pronounce a word wrong while arguing her case in court, imagines a hook coming out and whisking her off the courtroom floor. She is so worried about her speech that she starts looking for waitressing positions.

A graduate student believes that her committee could not possibly have read her thesis. She thinks they decided to give her a degree after weighing her work and finding it was as heavy as six pounds.

A 43-year-old woman, who has four children and was deserted by her husband, assumes her professor gave her an "A" in his class because he pitied her.

These are just a few examples of a phenomenon, called "The Imposter Syndrome," whereby people lack the ability to own up to their accomplishments. They believe they are not as qualified as others see them to be and strongly fear they will soon be discovered.

Paradoxically, many successful people feel they are "imposters." According to Newton resident Peggy McIntosh, who wrote a paper on "Feeling Like a Fraud" for the Stone Center for Developmental Services and Studies at Wellesley College, they have "the feeling that in taking part in public life one has pulled the wool over others' eyes; that one is in the wrong place, and about to be found out; that there has been a colossal mistake in the selection and accreditation process which the rest of the world is about to discover.

". . . One feels illegitimate in doing something, or appearing as something, one feels apologetic, undeserving, anxious, tenuous, out-of-place, misread, phony, uncomfortable, incompetent, dishonest, guilty."

Both men and women have these feelings, however, they are more often admitted by women, says Valerie Young, an associate at New Perspectives, Inc., an Amherst-based training program and consulting firm.

"Women are more apt to talk about it," she said, while men are more capable of "bluffing." Recalling one magazine's interview with Ted Koppel, Young said Koppel "does not consider it a handicap when he does next to nothing" to prepare for an interview. He has no problem "bullshitting with the the best of them," she said.

"Men grew up being able to wing it and bluff," said Young. But for many women, "It's true confessions." She adds that, when someone compliments a woman on a report, for example, the woman who feels like a fraud will explain that "the last part is shakey" and that she "could have done a better job."

These feelings can immobilize some, but most women continue to succeed, although they find it more difficult to build on successes. "They're just unable to get enjoyment and satisfaction out of it," said Young.

The president of a company functions as a president should, "but deep down inside she thinks, 'If I can get it, anybody can,'" she explained.

'The fact that women get paid so much less than men sends the message that you're not worth it and you're not good enough.'

Sharlene Hesse

Although these are not new feelings, they were not coined the "Imposter Syndrome" until 1978 by psychologists Pauline Clance and Suzanne Imes of Georgia State University.

Now there are an abundance of writings published on the subject. But the best way to look at the issue, according to Young, is "through a set of lenses," including gender stereotypes, socializations and structural biases.

Overall, she said, feeling like an imposter results from being a perfectionist. These people have inordinate self expectations where one does not entitle oneself to have an off day.

According to Alvin Becker, chief of psychiatry at Newton-Wellesley Hospital, the "obsessive, compulsive types" of perfectionists will have periods of depression. And it can get to the point where the resulting anxiety can be "crippling," he said. They will be so anxious that "It's pretty hard to do a high-level job."

However, he said, fraudulent feelings can result from low self esteem in certain areas of performance.

"It happens to me at times," he said. While speaking on a subject in which he is not well-versed, "You get a twinge and think, 'Gee, I should know about this,'" he said.

Newton resident Janet Surrey, a psychologist at McLean Hospital said that women are more likely to feel like imposters because they are socialized to show their feelings and vulnerabilities. In the work world, they do not feel they are being their "true selves" because, in following the male model of "how you are supposed to be (act)" at work, they have to hide their feelings.

"Women are terrified of public speaking," she said. "They have an ongoing feeling that eventually they will be found out." Some will start their talk with an apology or disclaimer like, "I just wanted to say . . ." or "I really don't know what I'm talking about, but here goes!," noted McIntosh.

Men will also go through agony worrying about a speech, Surrey said. But they will not show it. In addition, men worry about losing control over different aspects of themselves than women.

Deborah Knox, a Newton Corner career consultant and career development teacher at Lasell Junior College, says that people feel like frauds when they do not get recognition for their work. One of her clients had been working in sales for five years in a male-dominated organization.

"She was being categorically passed over," she said. "I would work with her to become more assertive in her quests."

Sharlene Hesse, a sociology professor at Boston College, claims it is natural that women would feel unrecognized at work because the society at large works against them.

As women move up in the hierarchy of their professions, society is creating a variety of internal barriers — like fear of success and "the imposter syndrome." This takes the blame away from the institutions, said Hesse.

"It's a neat way of saying women aren't going to make it because women are not cut out for this," she said.

Falling back on the fear of success, the imposter syndrome or spending $350 to see a career consultant "is really not the answer," Hesse said.

"You may feel uncomfortable because you are a token woman. Rather than saying we've got to remove structural blocks, we're saying you're the problem."

In addition, says Hesse, people who have worked their way up through two or three class boundaries feel fraudulent. However, these feelings can go away when the people have settled into their new status.

Young agrees that "You have to look at external factors" when talking about the imposter syndrome. "The fact that women get paid so much less than men sends the message that you're not worth it and you're not good enough," she said.

Further, she added, studies show that, in discussions, women are ignored more and cut off more than men.

Whatever the cause, there are techniques for relieving feelings of fraudulence. Young offered the following suggestions:

— Recognize people are entitled to make a mistake, not know everything and ask questions.

— Visualize yourself as confident, creative or whatever your job role demands so as not to be an imposter.

— Recall all the people you believe you have fooled into furthering your career and imagine what their reaction would be if you told them they were wrong.

— When you make a mistake, figure out what you will do to change the outcome if it happens again. Write it out or get a mental picture of how you would do it differently.

Young added that women often have the mistaken belief that competence is knowing how to do everything. On the contrary, she said, "competence means knowing how to surround yourself with competent people who make you look good."

Repairs on Route 9 to last through mid-Sept.

NEWTON — Resurfacing work began Monday, April 14, on Route 9 in Newton, announced Massachusetts Department of Public Works Commissioner Robert Tierney. The $1 million maintenance project encompasses the entire stretch of Route 9 in Newton between Brookline and Wellesley.

"A smooth, safe Route 9 is important to commuters, shoppers, and businesses," Tierney said. "Once this job is done, motorists from Newton and surrounding towns will find Route 9 safer and more comfortable to drive due to the new surface and striping."

In all, nearly three miles of highway will be reconstructed. The contract requires removing up to four inches of old pavement before laying down a new surface. The job also includes some adjustments to the curbs, sidewalks, and drainage within the project area.

Reconstruction work will halt during peak commuter hours. The inbound road will be clear of machinery and workers before 9:30 a.m. and outbound Route 9 will be clear after 3:30 p.m. At least one lane of traffic will be kept open at all other times.

Contractor Simeone Corporation of Stoughton is scheduled to complete the project by mid-September of this year.

Square dance club set for annual 'Tulip Twirl'

NEEDHAM — The annual "Tulip Twirl" square dance, sponsored by the Great Plain Square Dance Club, will be held May 10 at the Pollard Middle School, Harris Avenue, Needham.

Acting as co-chairpersons for the dance are Leslie Clark and Bill Beattie. Nancy and Red Porter are in charge of refreshments. Club members have been asked to help with the decorating of the gym and to bring refreshments. Tulips and other spring flowers will be used to create a May Festival atmosphere.

Mil Dixon will be the guest caller for the evening. Dixon, a retired high school biology teacher, has been calling for 15 years. He is the club's class teacher and caller. Brigit Maguire will be the cuer for the many round dancers. Dancing will be the mainstream level.

Club Presidents George and Lillian Thissell invite all recent square dance class graduates to come and enjoy the calling of Dixon. Special invitations have been sent to 30 neighboring clubs and their classes.

May is a busy month for the club with club and class PHD dancing every Wednesday at the Carter Methodist Church, Needham. The Annual Meeting with the election of officers and followed by dancing will be held May 7. The Annual Banquet will take place Sunday, May 18 at King Philip, Lake Pearl, Wrentham.

Square dancers are invited to attend all dances. For information, call George or Lillian Thissell at 444-0074.

Tenor Norman Brody

Na'amat's June variety show will feature tenor Norman Brody

BROOKLINE — The Greater Boston Council of Na'amat USA (formerly Pioneer Women/Na'amat) will present tenor Norman Brody, as one of the featured performers at the Variety Show to be held Sunday, June 1 at the Kehillath Isreal, Epstein Auditorium, 384 Harvard St., Brookline.

Norman Brody will present a program drawn from his wide repetoire of show tunes, Hebrew and Jewish classics, opera, Jewish theater songs, and Isreali, Hebrew and Jewish classics.

Other acts that will featured include: impersonator Ann Warren, and the M.I.T. Folk Dancers.

Dr. Lonnie Carton will be honored by Na'amat USA at the event. She will be presented with a scholarship in her name.

Proceeds from the Variety Show will be used to help provide funding for the many scholarships granted by Na'amat every year and to help support the organizations educational facilities for women and youths in Isreal.

To purchase tickets and make donations to the scholarship fund call 731-8377.

Four high school students honored by local DAR chapter

The recipients of the awards include Gregory Dunham of Avon High School, Joan Falvey of Randolph High School, Steven Hendricks of ttrSeekonk High School and Wendy Porto of Apponquet Regional High School in Lakeville.

The awards are given annually to members of the senior class who have displayed qualities of dependability, service, leadership and patriotism. These young men and women are selected by vote of their classmates and the faculty of their respective schools.

Following the presentation of the awards, Miss C. Sue Rigney, a park ranger for the National Park Service, gave an illustrated talk on Frederick Law Olmstead.

Mr. and Mrs. Alan R. Robbins

Mellna Brown becomes the bride of Alan Robbins

WELLESLEY — Miss Mellna Janice Brown and Mr. Alan R. Robbins were marrried at the Wellesley College Club, Wellesley.

The bride, the daughter of Harry and Gertrude Brown of Newton Centre, earned a bachelor of science degree at Salem State College. She was a teacher in the Quincy School System and is presently teaching English in Bedford and at the Newton Division of Continuing Education.

The bridegroom, the son of Mrs. Marion Rabinowitz and the late Nathan Rabinowitz of North Plainfield, N.J., earned a bachelor of science degree from North Carolina State University. He also earned a graduate degree from Northeastern University in applied mathematics and electrical engineering from Boston University and Northeastern University. He is employed with the Mitre Corporation.

The couple will reside in Lexington, MA.

Little Miss of America Pageant needs entrants for June contest

WORCESTER — The Massachusetts Little Miss of America Pageant is scheduled for Saturday, June 28, at the Sheraton Lincoln Convention Center, Worcester. It is expected that the competition will draw contestants from all over the Bay State.

The Little Miss of America Pageant is in its eighth year of competition. It is open to girls three to 18-years-old (with four age divisions), and to boys four to seven-years-old.

Judging is based on beauty, poise and personality in three competition events including, interviews, sportswear modeling, and party/formalwear modeling.

Winners of the State Pageant will represent Massachusetts in the National Pageant which will be held in Hollywood, Calif. Winners of each division will receive free hotel accomodations for the contestant and one parent at the Sheraton-Universal Hotel, site of the National Pageant.

During the national competition, contestants from across the United States will compete for over $15,000 worth of prizes and opportunities before a panel of celebrities and Hollywood agents. State winners will also receive the official trophy, sash, crown, and flower bouquet, as well as a scholarship to the Barbizon School of Modeling, Boston.

It is not required for the contestants to have modeling or pageant experience. Each contestant will be given a modeling class the day of the pageant, plus a $100 partial scholarship to the Barbizon School.

For entry information, write to Little Miss of America Pageant Headquarters, 222 Newbury St., 2nd Floor, Boston, MA 02116, or phone 266-3280.

Drug testing halts fire talks

there is no drug problem."

He questioned why the issue of drug testing teachers has never been raised. Any valid drug-testing policy should be citywide, he added.

"Don't we want the teacher who teachers our children and the bus driver who drives our children to be drug free?" he asked.

"If there's going to be drug testing, it should be from the top down," McArdle stressed. "It should start with Mayor Mann."

The mayor declined to comment on that suggestion, but of drug testing teachers, he said, "If there are any suggestions about the schools, let him take them to the School Committee. I'm sure they'll be very interested."

Riverside's MBTA 'junkyard'

the victim of an air raid. The front sections and parts of the metal shell have been ripped from some of the cars.

Much of the spray-paint graffiti on the cars praises rock groups or adolescent male-female relationships, suggesting some of the culprits are adolescents.

Bryson pointed to homes on a hill around 100 yards above the site. When the trees are bare, residents have a perfect view of an eyesore, she said.

"I think it looks like a junkyard, a pigsty," said Paula Kay whose Central St. Extension home sits on top that hill."It's a definite dump."

MBTA cars have been stored on the site for years, but the number has grown recently, said Ira Gross, who lives next door to Kay. "This certainly attracts kids who are interested in a little mischief," Gross noted. "I've called the police a number of times."

Kay recalls one instance when vandals climbed the hill to her home after shattering bottles at the site. After she chased them out of her yard, they scrambled down the slope and into the cars, where they returned to breaking glass.

Gross said he has heard that homeless people take shelter in the cars. "It certainly makes sense to think that would happen," he observed.

MBTA and Newton police patrol the area to eliminate dumping and vandalism, Dimond pointed out. "We are attempting to keep people away from the storage yard," he said.

The cars have been kept for spare parts to maintain the MBTA's fleet of light rail vehicles (LRVs) purchased in 1976, said Dimond. The authority is now testing a new Japanese model trolley and plans to replace some existing LRVs, Dimond said.

The MBTA may use the area for vehicle storage in the future, Dimond said. "But it would not be the hulks there now," added Dimond.

Bryson said several years ago she - as president of the Auburndale Community Assocition - and Alderman Richard McGrath made an issue of the site, but nothing was done.

Last night, Bryson said she plans on asking the Board of Aldermen to monitor the MBTA's efforts to clean the area.

Until something is done, the cars will continue to be trashed and the litter will increase, said Gross.

"Once you get an accumulation of stuff, it feeds on itself," Gross said. "It gives people the idea that nobody is taking care of it (the site) and anything goes. It's just going to get worse."

Retirees to decide on divestment

Backman accused Marino of quoting statistics and reading a "propaganda" statement prepared by South African government lobbyists.

Rep. David Cohen, D-Newton, said the board's decision was "completely expected," but he added that he is disappointed by it. Cohen also said he disagrees with Marino's claim that the board's funds belong to the employees alone.

"Whether the board goes broke or breaks the bank, the city of Newton bears the ultimate risk and responsibility to pay benefits to each retiree, not the employees," he said.

Cohen suggested the board present the issue to the aldermen, which would place the burden on the city rather than the employees.

Retirement board member John Collella said the board's sole responsibility is to the 3,000 employees it represents.

"Divestment is not an issue for this board," Collella said. "I resent our being used as a forum to establish foreign policy."

It is the "most relevant piece of business" to be decided by the board and it should not be taken lightly, Cohen said.

Alderman Matthew Jefferson said he and Cohen plan to submit a request for a home rule petition to the Board of Aldermen. If the petition is approved by a majority, the aldermen can ask the state Legislature to pass a law preventing Newton from investing in American companies doing business in South Africa.

"I think this is the only route now," Jefferson said. "Whether we can get that majority from the aldermen, I don't know. It will depend on the outside pressure and the mood of the board."

Camp funding for needy kids

NEWTON — The West Suburban Campership Coalition is once again pleased to offer funding assistance to qualified families.

Children must live in Newton, Wellesley, Weston or Needham to be eligible for this scholarship assistance. Financial need, special needs of the child and the necessity of day care services are taken into account.

Families interested in obtaining scholarship aid for thei child's summer program are welcome to call 965-9810 for an application. The application deadline is May 16, 1986.

The Coalition is pleased to announce that Kathy Young will be coordinator of the Coalition this summer. She can be reached at 965-9810 on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday or Friday.//Graphic,U

Mann urges retirees to divest companies doing business in South Africa.

Referring to a recent meeting between the board and local legislators, Mann said, "My position would be supportive of the request of Senator Backman and Representative Cohen."

Board member and city Comptroller Lawrence Marino said last week he and fellow members should not decide on divestiture because pension funds belong to city employees and retirees. He also argued that divesting is financially risky.

The board currently invests some pension funds in companies that adhere to the Sullivan Principles, a code of conduct calling on American Corporations in South Africa to use fair labor practices and actively work to abolish apartheid.

But the author of those principles, black minister Leon Sullivan, has called on companies to leave South Africa by May 1987 if apartheid still exists.

"I'm told the Sullivan Principles have been abandoned," said Mann.

The mayor contended the amount of pension money invested in South Africa is so small workers and retirees need not fear divestiture.

"That should make it even easier for the divestiture to take place. The loss to the pensioners would not be that great," Mann said.

Mann said he also favors a proposal by Cohen and Jefferson to seek a home rule petition that would force the board to get rid of South African related investments.

Tuning out after 43 years of radio

as changing the name of a ship.

As Turner settles into his chair to talk about the good old days, the odd juxtaposition of old and new is highlighted by the Arnold Schwarzenegger movie "The Terminator", a tape of which is being shown on a television screen behind him. Turner talks about the golden age of radio while in the background, a robot from the future with a laser gun blasts everything in sight. Fred Flinstone has finally met George Jetson.

Newton High, Class of 1918

Robert Turner began tinkering with broadcast technology about the time Sgt. York was storming through the woods of Belgium. As a graduate of Newton High School, class of '18, Turner read an article by Lloyd Green of the old Boston Post that outlined plans for a crystal radio set. A young man with an eager mind and vivid imagination, the article "sparked" Turner's interest.

"When I read the article," he says, "that was it. I knew I wanted to build the set and I became very involved with radio."

It did not take long for Turner to build his crystal set. Pretty soon, he was building radios of his own design. One set in particular, he recalls, was scoffed at by his friends. But, in the end, it was Turner who was smiling.

"I put together this set with a glass front and square wires that people told me would never work. When I got done putting it together, I picked up KLZ, a 250-watt station in Colorado. If I stayed up late enough, I could even get stations from Australia. Not bad for something that wasn't supposed to work," he says.

Word spread quickly about Turner's electrical exploits. He was soon hired by Saco-Lowell, a steel company that was in the present-day St. Regis factory in Upper Falls. He was hired to operate and maintain the plant's electric monorail system, the first of its kind in the nation.

The old plant had three monorail cars that would carry molten steel and were operated by a man riding along with the red-hot metal. It was Turner's job to make sure the cars kept running and the steel was poured into the right places.

"It's pretty amazing that monorails are being touted as a new-fangled transportation system when it was in operation 70 years ago," he says.

When he wasn't tinkering with things, Robert Turner could be found zipping along the streets of Newton on a Harley-Davidson motorcycle. In 1923, a friendly wager with a Newton police officer resulted in his being clocked at a top speed of 94 miles per hour, making him one of the fastest human beings of his day. Not only that, but he was offered a job as a motorcycle cop to boot.

"I did that for about 19 years," he says, "but I really didn't do too much police work. The best thing I did was help set up the first two-way radios for the cars."

Community television

Bored with police work, Turner set up his repair shop on Chestnut Street in 1943. His most vivid memories were all the people who would sit outside his shop, oohing and aahing at the funny little box with the screen in the middle.

"I would turn on the television set at about 5 p.m.," he says, laughing at the thought. "I remember the best night was Tuesday. Milton Berle was on. The kids would take wooden planks, a couple of saw horses and make a chair to sit on, where they would watch my televisions for hours."

Though this soon became a tradition in Upper Falls, Turner remembers one night in particular "where it seemed almost everybody in the city came out."

"That colored fellow, Joe Louis, was fighting Jersey Joe Walcott," he says. "There were hundreds of people across the street on stepladders and looking through opera glasses. I had set the timer to shut the set off at 11 p.m. It was a good thing that the fight ended at 10:45 or else I would have been a laughing stock."

BY CAROL
THE GOLD LADY
PICK UP A QUARTZ

Quartz has added a new dimension to watches over the past few years. Whether it tells time by two hands on a face (analog style) or through a numerical display (digital), the polished bar of quartz within is the heart of the watch. There is no mainspring and thus, no winding in a quartz watch. A tiny electric battery or power cell causes the crystal to vibrate more than 32,000 times per second. It is a frequency that makes these timepieces extremely accurate. The battery should be replaced approximately once a year, or every three to five years if it has a long-life cell. However, the cost is minimal. Thanks to the economics of mass production, quartz watches that keep excellent time are available in all price ranges.

Technology has advanced even in the world of jewelry. Whether you want traditional analog watches or modern digital watches you'll get the best of both at CAROL "THE GOLD LADY." We believe in quality and that's why we carry a fine selection of famous name watches and repair them too. Visit us at 109 Dalby St., just off Watertown St., Newton to feast your eyes on the most current and beautiful jewelry pieces. We're here Tues. Wed., Sat. 10-6; Thurs. & Fri. til 9. Tel. 332-5935. We wish all Moms a very happy Mother's Day

HINT:
Experts estimate that quartz now accounts for 84 percent of watches sold today.

TEEN SUICIDE

Coming to grips with a difficult problem

of suicide among persons aged 20 to 24 is considerably greater than those 15 to 19. Fifty percent of all suicides are attempted by individuals under the age of 30, and between 20 and 40 percent of those attempting suicide have made prior attempts.

Many experts feel these figures, while startling, are conservative. There are approximately 30,000 suicides reported each year, Jacobs said. But the actual number may well double that. Many single car traffic fatalities and similar accidents, classified as accidental deaths, actually are suicides.

Last month, a 23-year-old Westwood woman awaiting admission to Newton-Wellesley Hospital was killed after running out in front of oncoming traffic on Route 128. A Newton-Wellesley spokesman said the woman had been receiving outpatient care at the hospital but would not reveal the nature of her treatment. Authorities ruled her death an accident.

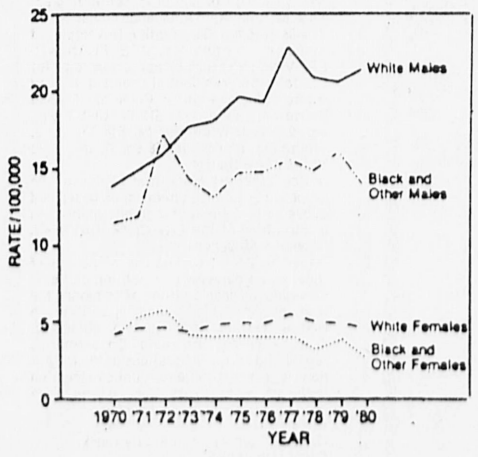
Winchester High School has had but one acknowledged suicide in the past five years. But Tiffany points to some accidental deaths "about which we'll never really know for sure."

And then there are the attempts which prove unsuccessful. For every person who commits suicide, there are eight who try and fail.

Jacobs, who recently opened a clinical group with offices in Newtonville and Brookline, says among adolescents this ratio may be as high as 100 to 1.

"You say this not to scare people," he adds, "but to let them know there is a problem."

Suicide rates for all persons 15-24 years of age by race and sex, U.S., 1970-1980.



For Stanley Becker, the problem was apparent even without statistics. Becker, executive director of the CONTACT-Boston, a telephone crisis hotline located in Newtonville, says his staffers have recorded a significant increase in suicide-related calls from adolescents over the past six months — particularly calls associated with physical or emotional abuse.

"It didn't take a statistical analysis to identify that," Becker says. "Everyone noticed it right away."

Unfortunately, suicide among young people is difficult not to notice. Wherever it crops up the heartbreaking senselessness is the same.

Two months ago, three Omaha, Neb., high school students killed themselves within five days. Teens cried in classrooms, and an assistant superintendent tried to comfort others, saying "We're all looking for answers to a very, very difficult problem."

This tragedy recalled the bleak months two years ago in Plano, Texas, when eight teens committed suicide. From February to August 1983, six Plano youths killed themselves — three in one week.

Many experts considered Plano particularly ripe for what has been termed the "cluster suicide" phenomonon — a suburban Dallas boomtown with education demograpics much like Lexington, Winchester or Newton.

"The academic pressure and the social pressure on kids is much, much greater today, especially in communities like Plano where you have essentially the cream of the crop," said Carole Steele, a Texas mental health counselor. "Plano was ripe for this."

But so are other communities. Closer to home, one of the most visible cluster cases occurred in the quiet Massachusetts town of Leominster, where seven teenagers killed themselves in the space of a year. In May 1984, two teenage boys were killed after police said they deliberately rammed their car into a loading dock. In November 1984, two teen-age girls died from gunshot wounds in an apparent double suicide. Four other city teen-agers have died violently including three who were shot, one playing Russian roulette, and one that was struck and killed by a train.

Last month, a 17-year-old high school junior who crashed his car into the foundation of a factory on New Year's Eve, became the fifth teen in the past two years whose death was been ruled a suicide in this city of 34,000 — virtually half the size of Waltham.

"Leominster is not the only place it is happening and it is not the worst spot in the country, but six in the space of two years is unusual," says Chestnut Hill psychologist Pamela Cantor, president of the American Association of Suicidologists.

Experts are still coming to grips with why and how these "cluster suicides" arise. Some believe multiple suicides result from a single suicide or attempt breaking down barriers for others who may be experiencing similar emotions.

But why Leominster and not the neighboring towns of Fitchburg or Lunenburg? The answers are elusive.

"Teen-agers are very impressionable," states Dr. George Comerci, an expert on adolescence at the University of Arizona. "They see one of their peers do it and they see people feel sorry for them. They see the school in grief and then it becomes acceptable, an attractive alternative."

"There does seem to be a contagion effect," adds Jacobs, who likened it to the "wave" in a football stadium. "But it's like AIDS — more research needs to be done."

In the meantime, what can be done to dispell some of the anxiety about teen or adolescent suicide. According to Jacobs, an open and frank public discussion would be a good start.

"When there is a suicide, the parents, the school system, everybody wants to cover it up," he says. Far from squelching the issue, this tends to promote a certain "mystique" about the issue which may be alluring to other troubled youths.

"In general, many are afraid talking about suicide will cause young people to act out on their dark thoughts," says Janet Applefield, a clinical social worker with a practice on Hope Avenue in Waltham.

The grim reality, however, is that teens need little prompting to act out on these thoughts. And the fact that a given community has thus far been spared is no guarantee things won't change tomorrow.

"We've had attempts, but so far none have succeeded," Shapiro says of Newton North. "I'd like to attribute that to the great job we're doing, but luck has a lot to do with it too."

Luck is fine. But how do you tell a family whose daughter has just committed suicide that their luck has run out?

"Following a suicide there is almost always anger on the part of those close to a victim," Applefield says. "The people left behind often feel that (the suicide) was a statement that they somehow were inadequate."

It is important to counteract these feelings, says Applefield's partner, Diane Sargeant. The key for families involved in suicides or suicide attempts is being able to acknowledge whatever factors may have been involved and then to "forgive."

"No one can be responsible for another person's life," Sargeant says. "If you are bound and determined to kill yourself you will."

The task of meeting this issue head-on begins with identifying "at-risk" adolescents with suicidal tendencies. Jacobs says tell-tale signs that something is amiss include significant changes in thinking, moods or behavoir — an outgoing person becoming withdrawn, a well-dressed individual becoming slovenly, an athlete losing interest in sports.

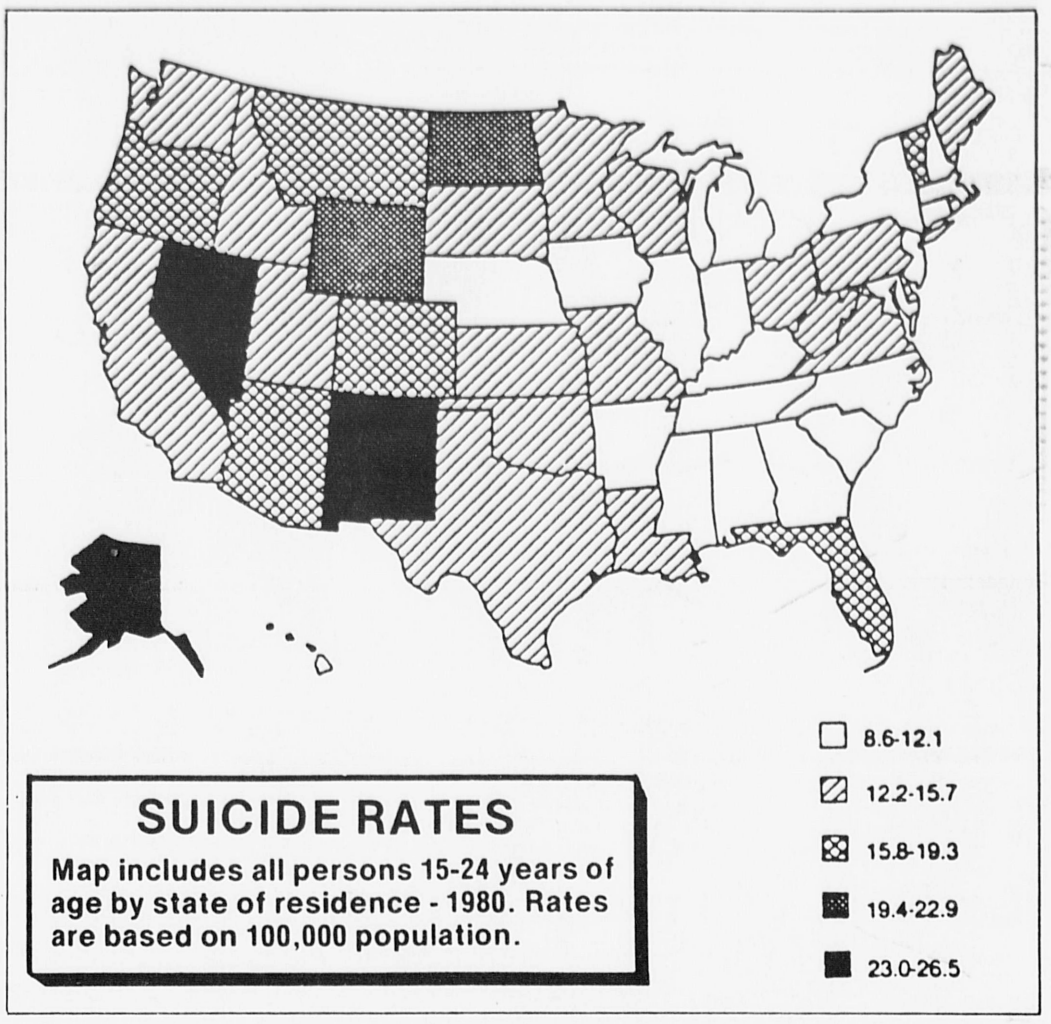
Other warning signals might include:

- •Changes in sleeping patterns
- •Falling grades
- •Drug or alcohol abuse
- •Withdrawwal from family, friends and regular activities
- •Boredom or inability to concentrate
- •Physical complaints
- •Talk about despair or death
- •Putting things in order — perhaps giving away favorite possessions.

"I don't mean going from a B- to a C on his report card," Jacobs says. "I mean significant changes."

Unfortunately, such changes are less easily identified among adolescents — an age group where outrageous, defiant or rebellious behavoir is often the norm. Opening parents' eyes to potential suicide is hard because many of its symptoms sound like fairly common examples of teen-age conduct.

"Kids cuts their hair in all sorts of crazy ways today," Jacobs says. "It's not the behavoir. It's the overall appropriateness of that behavoir in a particular setting."



10 factors common in teen suicides

By Jeff Peterson
In Focus Editor

As psychiatrists and medical researchers expand their investigatation into the teen suicide phenomonon, the hunt widens for recurring features — that common denominator linking the separate incidents.

Most psychiatrists believe suicides are linked by a number of common features, but are unwilling to make a blanket statement to that effect.

Nontheless, Dr. Edwin Shneidman, a professor in the department of psychiatry at the University of California, has compiled a list of what he terms "10 salient characteristics" of suicide.

Purpose

The common purpose of suicide, according to Shneidman's research, is to seek a solution.

Suicide is not a random act, he says, and never done pointlessly. It is a premeditated means of solving a problem, dilemma, crisis or unbearable situation. To understand what a suicide was about, outsiders must understand the problem it was intended to solve.

Goal

In a somewhat clinical way, Shneidman refers to the common goal of suicide as the "cessation of consciousness."

Suicide is best understood, not as moving toward the notion of an idyllic death, but moving away from an unendurable pain.

Stimulus

The common stimulus in suicide is psychological pain. Shneidman calls this anguish "metapain," or the pain of feeling pain.

"No one commits suicide out of joy," he says. "No suicide is borne out of exultation."

According to Shneidman, the clinical rule-of-thumb is that reducing the level of suffering — often by just a little bit — will give many victims the will to live.

Stress

Suicides are committed because of thwarted, blocked or unfulfilled psycholigical needs, Shneidman says.

"There are many pointless deaths, but never a needless suicide," he says. "Address the frustrated needs and the suicide will not occur."

Emotion

In Shneidman's eyes, the common emotions involved in suicide are pervasive feelings of hopelessness and helplessness.

Attitude

The common internal attitude toward suicide is ambivalence — to feel that one must complete the act, and to yearn for rescue and intervention. "We can now assert that the prototypical suicidal state is one in which an individual cuts his throat and criew for help at the same time, and is genuine in both of these acts," Shneidman says.

Cognitive state

Shneidman believes that suicide is neither a psychosis, a neurosis nor a character disorder, but a temporary psychological "tunnel vision" in which suicide or a total solution to one's problems are seen as the only options. What is important here, Shneidman says, is to increase the numbers of options.

Action

The common action in suicides is to escape. This is not a benign need to "get away from it all," but the ultimate refusal to face reality.

Interpersonal act

The common interpersonal act in suicide appears to be communicating one's intent. According to Shneidman, approximately 80 percent of suicide victims give clues to their impending deaths. Such verbal statements typically skirt the issue ("I am going away" ... "You won't be seeing me any longer").

Consistency

The common consistency in suicide are similarities with life-long patterns of coping with disturbances and enduring psychological pain. In a "bite-sized" study of five suicidal individuals, Shneidman determined by charting psycholoIgical consistencies that each would attempt suicide by his/her fifty-fifth birthday. "It excites me as a psychologist how much of a person's life, in some of its more important aspects, is reasonably predicatble," he says.

Holocaust commemorated with series

NEWTON — A rostrum of speakers will participate in a series of programs at Newton South High School to commemorate the Holocaust.

The series begins on May 9 at 10 a.m. with Margo Stern Storm, co-founder of "Facing History and Ourselves," a curriculum which focuses on the Holocaust and the Armenian genocide. One of its primary goals is to get adolescents involved in issues of authority, obedience, loyalty, and justice.

Begun as a curriculum project in the Brookline schools 10 years ago, "Facing History" is now used by a half-million students in 300 schools throughout the United States and Canada. Storm will give the Historical Background of the Holocaust.

On May 12 at 11 a.m. Dr. David S. Wyman, author of the widely-acclaimed and scholarly book "The Abandonment of the Jew," will be the speaker. The book reveals the extent to which the United States and Great Britain, in the face of overwhelming evidence of the Holocaust, refused to help rescue the victims until very late in the war.

Wyman is a professor of history at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. He is a special advisor to the United States Holocaust Memorial Council and a member of the Academic Advisory Board of the Simon Wiesenthal Center.

Benno Weiser-Varon, former Israeli Ambassador to Paraguay, will be the speaker on May 13 at noon. His address, "The Mengele Puzzle," deals with Josef Mengele, the infamous S.S. doctor at Auschwitz who was responsible for sending one and a half million Jews to their deaths. He disappeared at the close of the war and for 40 years his whereabouts was a mystery.

The series ends with the showing of "Night and Fog," a film produced and directed by Alain Resnais, which depicts life and death in a Nazi extermination camp. The film is in French with English subtitles and will be shown on May 14 throughout the day.

All programs will be held in the Lecture Hall at Newton South High School, and the Enrichment Program cordially invites members of the community to attend. For more information, call Phyllis Monderer at 552-7520.

Cake cut

Newton seniors cut cake to mark the official grand reo ening of the Fairfield Inn restaurant at the Marri tt Hotel. A group from the Newton Senior C nter and the Newton Corner Senior Drop-In C nter were invited to a preview dinner at the resta ant following major renovations. Cutting the cake are Winnie Hill of Auburndale, center; Patty Gardiner of Newton, FFI manager; and Hazel Smith of West Newton, second right. Also participating were Katherine Merullo, Newtonville, left; Mary Trumble of Newton Corner; Alic Quebec, Newtonville; and Mary Santucci, Newton Lower Falls, far right.

Arts Camp is offered

NEWTON — The Creative Summer Arts Camp, offered by All Newton Music School, has a program designed to cultivate individual expression and a sense of group participation in 4 to 8 year olds.

Each day students will work on individual projects in painting, clay, puppet making and soft sculpture. Group projects will include scenery painting and make-up for the final play.

Students will have the opportunity to experience hands-on orientation to brass, wind and string instruments. Group recorder, singing and handbells will be incorporated into Festival Day.

Body expression is developed through tumbling, floor gymnastics and dance. An exposure to story theatre, acting, makeup, mime and shadow drama allow these young actors to develop their skills. Bi-weekly trips to Crystal Lake where youngsters can swim and play with supervision round out the program.

Special events throughout the program include many local artists such as clowns, guest musicians and storytellers who will share their talents in noontime performances. A demonstration of camp activities will be held on Festival Day, July 24.

The ANMS Creative Summer Arts Program boasts a faculty of eight professional instructors. Each discipline is led by two instructors and campers work with faculty in groups of 10. General camp counselors are available for free play periods and trips.

Dates of the Creative Summer Arts Camp are July 7 to 25, Monday through Thursday from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. and Friday from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. More information and applications are available at All Newton Music School, 321 Chestnut St., West Newton, or call 527-4553.

Jackson School fair May 10

NEWTON — The Jackson School of Newton will hold its 5th annual School Fair on Saturday, May 10, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on the school grounds.

The students have selected as this year's theme the dedication of the Statue of Liberty and have planned the days activities.

Some of the fun will include a traditional family picnic, old fashion "tug of war," pie eating contest, egg toss, and games of chance.

By popular demand the amusement park featuring the moon walk and whip will return.

A General Store with baked goodies and gourmet delights will feature home made cooking, Boston baked beans, and brown bread. There will also be handmade crafts, studded sweatshirts, and raffles to the days events.

The profits from the fair will be used to benefit all the children.

The Sisters of St. Joseph staff the Jackson School which is located at 200 Jackson Road, Newton.

League will mark 50th anniversary

NEWTON — The League of Women Voters of Newton is kicking off its 50th anniversary celebration with a festive annual meeting on Wednesday, May 14 The highlight of the evening will be the introduction of the league's earliest member, who has been the object of a public, citywide search.

A 1930's theme will inform this year's annual meeting, using music of the period and an exhibit of period photographs of the Garden City, which the league was founded to serve half a century ago. A slide show will complement the exhibit. The 50th anniversary logo, designed by a Newton resident and the League, combines Newton's centennial mark and the long-standing League logo.

Older LWVN members will share their memories of early league days, lending to the meeting a sense of the continuity of the league in community affairs as well as of the changes it has witnessed. A few white-clad women, in rememberance of the original suffragettes, may be glimpsed in the crowd. A birthday cake will complete the evenings' party atmosphere.

The meeting at the Baptist Church in Newton Centre includes a social hour at 6:30 p.m., a potluck supper at 7:15 p.m. and a business meeting at 8:15 p.m. All members, prospective members and members of the press are cordially invited to attend. There will be a charge of $3.50 for refreshments and all are encouraged to bring their favorite dish. For further information, call Anita Capeless at 969-9483.

BC to host 24th annual Irish studies meeting

CHESTNUT HILL — Over 100 scholars, writers and political figures from around the world will converge on Boston College for the first time May 8-11 for the 24th annual meeting of the American Committee for Irish Studies, this year entitled "Politics and the Arts in Ireland."

Artists and academics from across North America and as far away as Tasmania will be joined for the four-day event by representatives from such Irish institutions as Queen's University, Belfast; University College, Cork; "Irish Literary Supplement;" Ulster Museum; University College, Dublin; Ulster Folk and Transport Museum; University College, Galway; Abbey Theatre and St. Patrick's College, both located in Dublin.

On Thursday, May 8, Boston College President J. Donald Monan, S.J., will welcome the assemblage, after which panel discussions will begin on topics rangin from "Literature and Politics," to "Artists and Images." Special attention will b epaid to the works of Joyce, Yeats and other noted Irish writers.

Thursday evening there will be a gala banquet at the John F. Kennedy Library at Columbia Point in Boston, featuring a keynote adddress by Massachusetts Senate President William Bulger on "Politics and the Arts in Ireland."

Friday's panels will be augmented by an afternoon exhibit entitled: "Four Irish Expressionistic Painters: Patrick Hall, Tim Hakesworth, Patrick Graham and Brian Maguire" and an evening of poetry with Michael Longley. Saturday's program will wrap up with an encore performance of the original Easter Week 1916 Abbey Theatre playbill at BC's Robsham Theater Arts center, where Abbey director and current Boston College director-in-Residence Thomas MacAnna will stage T.H. Nally's "The Spancel of Death" and Yeats's "Kathleen Ni Houlihan" at 8 p.m.

Celebration of an Irish Mass in St. Mary's Chapel at Boston College will close the event on Sunday, May 11. There will also be photographic, painting and book displays, as well as music and films.

The event is sponsored by the Boston College Irish Studies program, co-directed by English Prof. Adele Dalsimer and History Prof. Kevin O'Neill. For information, call 552-3723/552-3793.

Mall spotlights woodwork demo

NEWTON — The Mall at Chestnut Hill continues to spotlight selected artists' Work in Progress with its May demonstration of fine woodworking by master craftsman Stephen Pardee. Mr. Pardee, who has been designing and carving wooden chests reminiscent of romantic 17th century England for over 15 years, will create a trunk-sized chest by hand — from design to finish work — in a workshop setting in the heart of The Mall. Pardee's chests are constructed of expensive hardwoods like cherry, oak and mahogany, and are modified to meet his clients' specifications. Each chest, however, shares a basic design, which includes a convex top. The convex top originally appeared in England and was thus shaped for the dual purpose of adding extra storage space inside, and providing aerodynamic efficiency when travelling atop open stagecoaches. Mr. Pardee frequently utilizes antique brass hasps and locks to further authenticate his chests.

An Auburndale resident, Pardee's interest in chests was born while he studied the literature of the 17th century at Harvard. "Boston is a natural for this kind of craft," he said. "Yankees love to save things and a chest can soon become a family heirloom."

Other Works in Progress at The Mall have included painters and stained glass demonstrations, as part of a committment to showcase the best of the area's cultural talent.

President Wilfred Sherman, the host of the ball at the Lenox Hotell to benefit the Sargent Fund for the Homeless, American Cancer Society Special Events Chair Marilyn Riseman, Mrs. Wilfred Sherman, Mrs. Samuel Epstein of Newton, and Mrs. Ted Bernard of Newton. Former Gov. and Mrs. Francis Sargent, Honorary Chairman and Chairman, respectively, of the Committee were among those attending the ball.

Basketball set to begin

NEWTON — The Newton Men's Summer Basketball League will begin play on Tuesday, May 27.

All games will be played outdoors at Newton Centre Playground there will be 12 teams in the League and the fee for the season will be $350. Players must be Newton residents.

For more information call Lenny Gentile at 527-5446.

Israel's 38th to be celebrated

NEWTON — A community-wide celebration commemorating the 38th Anniversary of the State of Israel will take place Wednesday, May 14, on the Gosman Jewish Community Campus, 333 Nahanton Street, Newton, from 2 to 9 p.m.

Live music will be provided by the Aviv Band for Israeli folk singing and dancing. Under the big tent on the rear of the parking lot, young and old will enjoy a kibbutz featuring live animals; donkey, camel, sheep, goats; a dining room, children's room, an agricultrural display, and an Israel doll manufacturing factory.

A children's choir from local synagogues will entertain with several musical selections. Activity booths will offer a wide variety of attractions. Celebrants will help weave an Israeli flag, partake in an obstacle course, enjoy ethnic costumes, plant in the Jewish National Fund Booth, and an exciting multi-media presentation - "Another Israel" - will be played continuously in the auditorium all afternoon. Israeli food will be available throughout the day.

Many more activities have been planned for the anniversary celebration by the chairman, Michael J. Bohnen, and committee members. The event is sponsored by the Jewish Community Center of Greater Boston and Combined Jewish Philanthropies, co-sponsored by Jewish Community relations Council, New England Zionist Federation, Synagogue Council of Massachusetts, and many other Greater Boston Jewish Organizations.

For further information, call 734-0800.

Female blues singers will perform

NEWTON — During May, The Mall at Chestnut Hill will feature a musical salute to the country's top female blues singers. Entitled "Ladies Sing the Blues," the Mall's sound system will play the well-loved music of Billie Holiday, Mahalia Jackson, Maxine Sullivan and Mildred Bailey, with live performances by Boston area female blues singers each weekend from 2 to 3:30 p.m.

The first 10 days in May will highlight the talent of Billie Holiday, whose fame grew from Harlem, New York, where she debuted with Benny Goodman in 1933 to national tours with such greats as Count Basie and Artie Shaw.

Mann declares Sunday Mother's Peace Day

NEWTON — Mayor Theodore Mann of Newton has presented Newton Action for Nuclear Disarmament co-Presidents Beverly Droz and Brooke Lipsitt with a proclamation declaring Sunday, May 11 (Mother's Day), to be Mother's Peace Day.

In connection with Peace Day in Newton, Newton Action for Nuclear Disarmament, recognized by Mayor Mann for its five years of effort toward global peace, will host a celebration on the steps of Newton City Hall on Sunday, May 11, at 1:30 (inside if it rains). The public is invited to hear former Massachusetts Secretary of Economic Affairs Evelyn Murphy speaking on behalf of world peace, as well as Mayor Mann commenting on specific local efforts and achievements. A large birthday cake to celebrate NAND's fifth anniversary will be shared with all those present, and pieces will be dispatched to Newton representatives in the U.S. and Massachusetts legislatures. Family entertainment will feature clowns and face-painting.

As part of the commemoration of Peace Day, the churches and synagogues in Newton will devote a portion of their May 10 and 11 services to the cause of international peace. The Interfaith Peace Task Force of Newton, headed by Elizabeth Brown and Stephanie Western-Katz, has been disseminating information and coordinating efforts among the religious organizations.

Newton Action for Nuclear Disarmament is a grassroots, volunteer organization working to educate the public about the dangers of nuclear arms and to enlist support for governmental action to reduce the risk of nuclear war.

Pine Manor graduation

CHESTNUT HILL — Judy Woodruff, chief Washington correspondent for "The MacNeil/Lehrer NewsHour," the national evening news program carried on the Public Broadcasting System (PBS), and anchor for "Frontline," the PBS documentary series, will receive an honorary degree from Pine Manor College on Sunday, May 18, at the College's 75th Commencement ceremonies.

Variety of offerings in 1986 garden seed catalogs

By Earl Aronson
AP Newsfeatures

As the 1986 garden seed catalogs began arriving, I had an opportunity to try some delicious vegetable introductions first hand.

The occasion was the annual Harvest Celebration of Park Seed of Greenwood, S.C., held in New York City's Tavern-on-the-Green at Central Park. William J. Park, head of the 118-year old company, introduced most of the garden newcomers we tested at lunch.

In the courtyard there were baskets and plates of Easter Egg radishes, green peppers, broccoli and other fresh vegetables. There were pots of flowers in bloom. All of the display and food items had been trucked hundreds of miles from South Carolina. The veal served as the main course was stuffed with herbs.

All of the recipes involved were prepared by Dr. Mildred M. Cody, Extension Food and Nutrition Specialist at Clemson University Cooperative Extention Service. She graciously shared her knowledge.

Among the new vegetables ready for spring planting were:

Corn Butterfruit Bicolor Hybrid, 8-inch ears with 18-20 rows, extra sweet, ready for picking in 80-85 days.

Broccoli Early Emerald Hybrid, ready to harvest 50 days after setting out plants; 5- 6-inch dense heads.

Among new flower varieties decorating tables and walkways were:

Zinnia Dreamland Coral, dwarf, 4 inches double, dahlia-flowering blooms.

Petunia Countdown, a new series that produces more blooms faster than any other large-flowered type; flowers 3½ inches, velvety, upright, 50 days. Available in seven solid colors and bicolors.

Gerbera Rainbow series, six colors with 4- 5-inch blooms on 8-inch stems appearing 3½ months after sowing.

Gerbera Double Parade Mixed, dwarf double-flowered, blooms 4½ inches across 3½ months after sowing.

Other new flower varieties were Salvia Laser Purple; Marigold Bonanza Series, 2-inch blooms; Pansy Crystal Bowl Mixture; Trachelium Coeruleumn, long-blooming perennial, good cut flowers.

Among the dishes served were Harvest Pate, with chopped onion, green beans, egg, toasted walnuts and spices; Confetti Stir Fry, Savoy cabbage, onions, corn; Garden Frittata, with breadcrumbs, onion, chopped broccoli, carrot, cheese and evaporated milk; and Tarragon Broccoli, broccoli, peeled tomato, minced onion and vinaigrette.

Park will send copies of recipes if you provide stamped, self-addressed, business-size envelope to P.O. Box 31, Greenwood, SC 29647.

Other new offerings: Burpee Seed (300 Park Ave., Warminster, PA 18974) also has many new items in its catalog, including:

Shasta Daisy Starburst, described as the first hybrid commercially available, white, free-flowering, blooms 5½-6 inches across, stems 12-16 inches tall on 3½-foot plants.

Gazania Carnival Hybrid, mixed colors, gray-green foliage, 3-inch single blooms, plants 12 inches tall, spreading 16 inches.

Geranium Cherry Border, Impatiens Parade of Stars mixed colors; French Marigold Cheerful and Zinnia Border Beauty mixed colors.

New vegetables from Burpee include Cabbage Tri-Star Hybrid, midseason 76 days from seed, compact 6½- 8-pound heads; Chinese Cabbage Dynasty Hybrid; Head Lettuce Tango, and Gourmet blend; Snap Pea Snappy and Summer Squash Butterstick Hybrid.

(Any queries about gardening problems must be accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope and sent to: AP Newsfeatures, 50 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, NY 10020.)

Tips to ease spring cleaning

By Better Homes and Gardens

Kitchens and baths are messy, high-traffic high-activity zones, and keeping them clean often seems like a never-ending battle.

Day-to-day care often involes little more than wiping surfaces with a damp sponge and mild detergent. More time-consuming cleaning problems, however, can build up throughout the year. If it's time for you to tackle some of these big cleaning jobs, consider the following tips and techniques from Better Homes and Gardens Kitchen and Bath Ideas.

— Always start cleaning any surface with the gentlest substance you can; you'll need to tackle some stains with strong abrasives, but turn to them as last resorts. Even the toughest surfaces eventully deteriorate under an onslaught of repeated rough cleaning.

— If you have questions about cleaning a particular surface, identify the material it is made of. Whether you have a porcelain-clad appliance or a porcelain-covered bathtub, the cleaning method is the same.

— Always test any cleaning solution in a small, unobtrusive spot before applying it to large surfaces.

— One word of caution: Never mix bleach and ammonia cleaning products. Although safe when used separately, when combined these products give off a toxic gas that irritates the lungs.

You can remove stains from baked-on enamel with a mild abrasive and a nylon brush. Treat gently; abrasives will eventually remove the finish.

Make a cream of tartar and water paste to remove mineral buildup and stains from vitreous china. Strong abrasives can etch the surface.

For metal surfaces, an abrasive cleanser will remove most stains. Try an automotive chrome cleaner for any rust and tarnish.

Never use abrasive cleaners on fiberglass fixtures. White automotive compound removes stains; restore shine with liquid or paste auto wax.

When sliding shower doors stick, the cause is often dirt and soap residue in the track. To get doors sliding freely, scrub the track with a toothbrush and mild abrasive cleanser. After the track is dry, apply silicone lubricant.

A paste of baking soda and water will draw stains out of plastic laminate. Protect with appliance wax; avoid abrasive cleansers.

Surface stains, scratches and burns can be removed from Corian by rubbing with scouring powder or a fine grade sandpaper.

For ceramic tile, remove oil-based spots with a degreaser. Use a mildew-cide spray to remove mildew. Spray it on, wait a couple of minutes, then rub in and rinse off. Wipe dry. Liquid wax provides an easy-to-clean tile finish.

To remove mildew from grout, use a toothbrush to scrub on an all-purpose product that cleans, disinfects, and kills mildew. If this doesn't remove all the stain, rub on a paste of scouring powder and water. Leave it on for five hours; then rinse and dry. Apply an acrylic joint sealer to the clean grout.

For beverage, dye and fruit stains on ceramic tile, mix up a chlorine-bleach solution (three tablespoons of bleach to a quart of water). Keep the area wet until the stain fades.

On wood counters, use a 50-percent ammonia solution to remove stains; rub out scratches with fine steel wool. To prevent the wood from drying out, re-treat the surface with oil.

Washable and scrubbable wallpapers clean up with mild detergent solutions, or special foam cleaners. Avoid abrasive cleaners and steel wool. Use a degreaser to remove oily spots; try baking soda and water paste on other types of stains.

Wash lightly soiled painted woodwork with a mild solution of trisodium phosphate. For glossy enamels, which may be dulled by a strong cleaner, use a gentle oil soap dissolved in water. Try a heavy-duty foam cleaner if painted woodwork is extra dirty.

Dust-mop, sweep, vacuum or damp-mop resilient flooring as needed. Scrub with mild detergent or appliance cleaner-wax to remove stains. On porous types, use polish with sealer.

Dow Jones hardly a perfect average

MONEY TALK$

Neville Frankel is Vice President of Financial Planning Associates Inc., a Boston and New York affiliate of Confidential Planning Network, an international network of more than 120 financial planning firms. Direct questions to Frankel, care of this publication.

Dear Mr. Frankel:

The prices of my stocks go down while investment advisors rave about the sterling performance of the Dow Jones Industrial Average. What exactly is the average, and how accurate is it in reflecting overall stock market performance?

L.G., West Roxbury

Dear L.G.:

The Dow Jones Industrial Average is probably the most widely quoted stock market indicator. However, it is far from an exact measure of overall stock market performance.

The Dow Jones Industrial Average has its roots in an average designed in 1884 by Charles Henry Dow, who was the first editor of the Wall St. Journal as well as co-founder of Dow Jones and Co. His original model was made up of 12 corporate securities, primarily from the railroad industry. In 1896, a list of 12 industrial stocks was initiated and this was expanded in 1928 to 30 industrial securities, the number currently included in the average. This indicator was later complemented with three other averages; the utilities, transportation and composit stock averages.

At the outset, the calculation of the average was made through the process of summing the various stock prices used in the model and dividing the total by 30. Through the years, various securities uses in the average were "split." These splits reduce the price per share of the stock; however, they do not alter the valuation of the securities in total. In order to maintain the integrity of the average, the divisor used in the formula is lowered. This offsets the price reduction from the stock split.

The Dow Jones Industrial Average is a statisical compilation intended to reflect the overall performance of the securities market. However, certain limitations placed on the average, in an attempt to keep it simple and consistent, can weaken its comparative value. The following points should be kept in mind:

The average is calculated from the stock prices of only 30 large companies, whereas the market contains many hundreds of securities.

The average does not give representation to many emerging industry stocks.

A dramatic change in just one security can affect the average, and present a distorted view as to the general movement of the market.

An example of this third point took place recently in the bid by Philip Morris to acquire General Foods. During the period of talks between the two companies, General Foods stock prices rose significantly. On Sept. 24, the price of General Foods shares rose $16.50. This increase alone would raise the Dow by more than 14 points (16.50 divided by 1.116, the current divisor). However, on that day, the Dow closed up only 4.81 because only two other stocks in the index advanced, while 19 issues declined and eight were unchanged.

Proponents of the Dow argue that although the average covers only 30 companies, these companies are representative of their particular industries and are widely held by both individual and institutional investors. Further, the market value of their 30 securities account for almost 25 percent of the value of all stock listed on the New York Stock Exchange. Others feel that the use of the Dow as a measure of the market, in conjunction with a broader based index that monitors smaller stocks, will give the best indication of how the market is performing.

Lancers' Sherman twirls 1-hitter

NEWTON — Senior southpaw Jeff Sherman fired a one-hitter and struck out 12, allowing just one ball to leave the infield, as Newton Catholic assaulted visiting North Cambridge Catholic, 4-0, Sunday at Cabot Park.

Sherman faced just 22 batters in going the distance, walking none while allowing a lone, first-inning single to Dave Card. The 6-4 lefty kept the baseball in the infield at all times, getting beat only for the single through the first-base hole and for a fly-out to Nick Abruzzi to end the game. Sherman also broke out of a hitting slump with two singles.

The Lancers got all the runs they would need in the second inning. John Falanga singled home Mike Donnellan, then brother Mike Falanga reached on an error to plate a second run. The Lancers would add single runs in both the fourth and fifth innings.

Saturday, first-place St. Clement's exploded for six runs in the top of the seventh inning to blow open a close contest and take the Lancers by a storm, 9-2.

Newton Catholic trailed, 3-0, entering the seventh before Mike Flynn, who had homered in the third, came up with a clutch hit and winning pitcher John Sullivan had a key double.

Frank Battista and Brian Cullen drove in Lancer runs in the bottom of the seventh but it was not enough to catch St. Clement's.

St. Pat's topped

The only trouble Sherman saw at Cabot Park all day was of his own making. The Knights scored both of their runs in the fourth inning, which started with Sherman grazing Tom Grady with a 1-2 curveball. John Forbes then walked on five pitches. They would eventually score the only two St. Pat's runs of the game.

A double steal and a fly ball tied the game at 1-1 and moved Forbes to third. Jeff Gately came through with a clutch two-out hit to right to put the Knights ahead.

From that point on, Sherman was untouchable until he tired in the seventh. He got P.J. McNeil to ground to second to finish the inning, then struck out the next five hitters he faced. None lasted longer than four pitches.

Bill Larkin finally broke that string with a groundout to end the sixth.

That was the last out Sherman would get, as he walked the first two hitters of the seventh. Coach Don Dabenigno went to the bullpen for ace Frank Battista. Two strikeouts sandwiched around a sacrifice bunt ended that threat and the game.

"Sherman did a super job," said Dabenigno.

Meanwhile, the Lancer bats were going to work on Larkin, though the junior looked good in his first outing of the year. He allowed only one unearned run through three innings, before the Lancers started getting around on him in the fourth.

Brian Cullen, who had two hits and looks like he might develop into the number five hitter the Lancers so desperately need, starting things with a single up the middle. After a wild pitch, John Falanga (two hits) singled him home to knot the game at 2-2.

Larkin hurt himself with a couple of walks around a sacrifice bunt, loading the bases for Mike Donnellan, who rammed one past third. Only a perfect throw to the plate from Tom Grady in left kept the Knights within reach at 3-2, as he cut down Mike Falanga trying to score.

The way Sherman was going, the Lancers didn't need much in the way of insurance, but they tagged Larkin for a couple of more runs in the fifth to make sure.

Again Cullen was in the middle of it, doubling home Battista — who had led off with a single — and scoring on John Falanga's second hit.

The way the bottom of the order came through for the Lancers was particularly pleasing to Dabenigno. He knew coming into the season that he would have to depend upon Sherman, Battista and Nick Abruzzi for much of the offense, but he's been hoping some help would show up. That help may be on the way, if Tuesday is any indication.

"We've been working real hard with the lower part of the order," he said. "They hit in the clutch today. They're making contact."

In fact, the bottom third of the order (the two Falangas and Mike Walsh) went 4-for-5 with three RBIs on the day.

The Lancers, 5-2, travel to Hudson Catholic on Thursday.

On the St. Pat's side, the bright spot had to be the pitching of Larkin. The junior kept the ball in play, walking only four. He was victimized by some lackluster defense, as the Knights made four errors.

Most importantly, he never lost his poise despite the miscues behind him, and as a result stayed out of the big inning and kept his club in the game.

Rogers gets clutch hit in uphill North win over Waltham

WALTHAM — Wendy Rogers ripped a two-run single to key a big fourth inning rally as Newton North downed Waltham, 9-6, in Suburban League softball action on Wednesday at Elsie Turner Field.

The Hawks led, 6-3, going into the frame, which started with Nancy Sullivan's single. Jen Heesch bunted for a a hit, and both runners moved over on Jen Quigley's sacrifice.

Liz Speliotes drove in a run with a single before Robin Silver walked to load the bases. One out later, Rogers was on the spot and she responded with her clutch hit to tie the game.

The Tigers didn't stop there, though, as Sharon Silva put her club ahead with a single and Rogers came home on a wild pitch.

That big inning gave the Tigers an 8-6 lead, which Sullivan protected by throwing shutout ball the rest of the way. North added a solo run in the seventh.

Waltham had come from behind once already to take the lead. The Hawks were down, 3-2, before scoring four times in the bottom of the second.

A double by Cheryl Keane, Lynne Dempsey's walk and a single by Brenda Hart loaded the bases. Pam Vaughan worked Sullivan for a walk and a tie game. A wild pitch made it 4-3 in Waltham's favor. Michelle Hache's sacrifice fly and another wild pitch put Waltham in good shape.

South whitewashed

In Dual County League action, Newton South was simply overmatched against Bedford's Jill Dyson. She tossed a four-hitter in beating the Lions, 14-0.

"She's the best pitcher in the league, no question about it," said South coach Larry Caranfa.

The Buccaneers made the game look like more of a rout than it was by scoring seven times in the sixth inning. In truth, all they needed was the three they picked up in the second on five hits.

"I thought we did a pretty good job up until the last inning," Caranfa said.

The top three hitters in the Bedford order hurt Newton badly, combining for nine hits. The only hitter left out of the 17-hit onslaught, ironically, was the cleanup batter.

Blankenstein shines

Monday was never better for Coach Larry Caranfa and his Newton South softballers. The Lions got pitching, fielding, and hitting against visiting Lincoln-Sudbury, and six and a half innings later walked off the sun-drenched diamond with an 11-4 victory.

Caranfa has been on a crusade for warm weather, and the second-year coach got just what he wanted Monday afternoon. His Lions thawed out and performed almost flawlessly.

Julie Blankstein hurled the complete game victory, walking just four, while Dede Theodore supplied the defensive heroics by throwing out three base stealers. Dede and sister Elaine combined for five of the 11 South hits, with Dede nailing a perfect 3-for-3 while Elaine cracked a pair of doubles.

"We did a real good job," Caranfa said after the game. "As the season progresses you get more confident, but the warmer weather is a big help too. You loosen up a lot quicker. That doesn't mean we're not going to have our days, though."

South snapped a 4-4 tie with a pair of unearned runs in the fourth inning. With runners on first and second, Dede Theodore stroked a soft line drive to right field and the fielder missed the cutoff, allowing both South baserunners to score.

Elaine Theodore supplied the offense in a big, six-run fifth inning. She roped a two-run double to go with Maria Crovo's RBI-single, and it was 11-3.

Catcher Dede Theodore combined with second baseman Katrina Antonellis for a double play off an attempted double steal in the fourth inning. Theodore nailed the runner going to second, and Antonellis fired back home to get the second girl at the plate.

Teyler paces South LLB Cubs

NEWTON — Pitcher Jeremy Teyler had quite a day for the Cubs in a Newton South Little League game Sunday at Richardson Field.

The 12-year-old righthander fired a one-hitter while striking out 17 batters and also blasted out a three-run homer in a 13-2 romp over the Cardinals. The lone hit was a two-run homer in third inning.

Another strong pitching performance by Beau Burlingame carried the Padres past the Cardinals, 8-3, in a South LLB game on Wednesday.

Burlingame struck out 14 batters for the second game in a row while allowing three hits. He also sparked the attack with a double, single, a walk, and three RBIs. Marc Bender also had two hits.

Newton West

David DeStefano pegged a one-hitter, whiffed 18 and walked three as the West LLB Orioles humbled the Pirates, 7-1, Sunday at Lyons Field. The lone Pirate hit was a single by Marty Clpaton in the first inning.

DeStefano clubbed out two hits and had two RBIs as Nick Tempesta laced a two-run double.

Newton Central

Josh Borus doubled home Matt Jakabowski and Danny Pelligrini for the winning runs in the third inning as the Giants downed the Phillies, 4-2, in a Central LLB game Sunday at Cabot Park.

Jakabowski, who hurled the first four innings, got the win with relief help from Borus. The Phils' Josh Meadows fanned nine over six innings and was 2 for 4 at the plate.

Bill Cowens fired a two-hitter and drove in two runs to help his own cause as the Giants thumped the Padres, 19-4, on Thursday. Ed Piselli slammed a two-run double for the Padres.

Newton East

Pitcher Stephen Fischbach drove in five runs on a homer and two doubles to pace the East Red Sox over the Dodgers, 8-5, at Jay Grodon Field.

Fischbach struck out seven and allowed six hits on the mound. Chip Vance walloped a double and single. The Dodgers' Aaron Sacks and David Winikoff doubled in two runs each.

Josh Fink slammed four hits, including a double and two triples, as the Red Sox routed the Tigers, 25-4, Thursday. Pitcher Scott Grupp contributed a pair of triples to the attack. On Wednesday, Fischbach fanned 11 in a 3-2 win over the Phillies.

Quincy HR barrage buries Tigers

NEWTON — Singles by Waltham did in Newton North on Wednesday, but on Thursday, visiting Quincy broke out the thunder and slammed four home runs en route to a 7-2 decision at Ferguson Field.

Five of the seven President runs scored on round-trippers. The visitors tallied on leadoff homers in the first, fourth and seventh innings. They added a two-run shot in the fifth.

Larry Taglieri accounted for the other two markers with a two-run double. Jerry Logan blasted a pair of circuit clouts.

Freshman Steve Leonard was the victim of the barrage, as he hurled into the seventh. Paul Fay finished up.

Both Newton North runs came in the third, scoring on Ron Coppola's double to left-center. George Maxcey had doubled to start the frame.

Waltham tees off

The cannons which pounded Suburban League opponents into submission last year may be gone, but the Waltham Hawks are finding out that in the right hands, a derringer can be just as deadly.

Waltham used 11 singles and a workmanlike pitching performance by Dave Brown to subdue Newton North on Wednesday, 8-1, at Ferguson Field.

The derringer is not only deadly, its biggest asset is its ability to be concealed. Sure enough, the most damage to the Tigers was done not by the guns in the middle of the order, but by the bottom third. Those last three spots in the order accounted for six hits and five runs batted in. Three of those RBIs came off the bat of number nine hitter Bill Chiasson.

"The bats are starting to come alive," said Hawk coach Al Scafidi. "We hit some good shots today."

Hand in hand with the hitting is the pitching, which has been nothing short of superb of late. Brown gave up only one unearned run on five hits, fanning six and walking only one in running his record to 3-1. In the last four games, Waltham pitching has not surrendered an earned run.

Scafidi's club also continues to be blessed with the good fortune that has been following it around for much of the season. Two fly balls lost in the sun and a baserunning blunder that the Hawks got away with helped their cause.

Waltham didn't need any help in a three-run rally in the second, which gave Brown more than he would need. Newton starter Andy Lyons walked designated hitter Scott Giusti to open the frame, and the bottom of the order followed with three solid singles. Dave Cristofori, playing his first game at shortstop, had the first. Mike Ryan followed with an RBI shot, and Chiasson then drove in a pair with a hit up the middle.

Lyons got out of that inning with a couple of long fly balls (one tracked down near the fence by center fielder Ron Coppola), but lasted only one more hitter. When he walked Paul Mayberry to lead off the third, Coach Dick Walker had seen enough.

Reliever Sid Queler got the next two hitters, but again Cristofori and Ryan struck with consecutive singles. One run came across, but the Tigers dodged another bullet when Coppola fired a strike to nail Cristofori at third.

What offense the Tigers could muster came in the bottom half of that frame when they scored their only run. Bryan Scales reached on a Chiasson error and eventually scored when Mayberry couldn't handle Aldo Calcagni's ground ball.

The only other real threat had come in the first when an infield hit, throwing error and single by Dave LeConti sent Calcagni on his way home, but a perfect relay from right fielder Mark DePass to Mayberry to Jerome Fuller erased him at the plate.

A three-run fourth put the game firmly under the W column for the Hawks, even though they had one runner nailed in a run-down and another who should have been thrown out at third.

A clinic this inning wasn't.

Mistake number one: Queler walked the number nine hitter in the order (Chiasson) on four pitches to lead off the inning. DePass followed with a single, and then attempted to steal second. Unfortunately, Chiasson was still there with no intentions of going anywhere. North catcher Evan Galanis started the run-down on DePass, as Chiasson belatedly lit out for third, then home, while the Tigers were still chasing DePass. They finally turned their attention to Chiasson in time to have Queler make the tag at home.

The fun wasn't over, not by a long shot. With DePass on second and one down, Jerome Fuller hit a grounder right to LeConti at short. DePass took off for third, and appeared to be a sitting duck, except LeConti went to first for the out on Fuller. It proved costly when Jeff Lazaro walked, stole second, and rode home with DePass on Mayberry's single to right-center. Mayberry added the final tally of the frame when he scored all the way from first on John Logue's fly ball to right that George Maxcey lost in the sun.

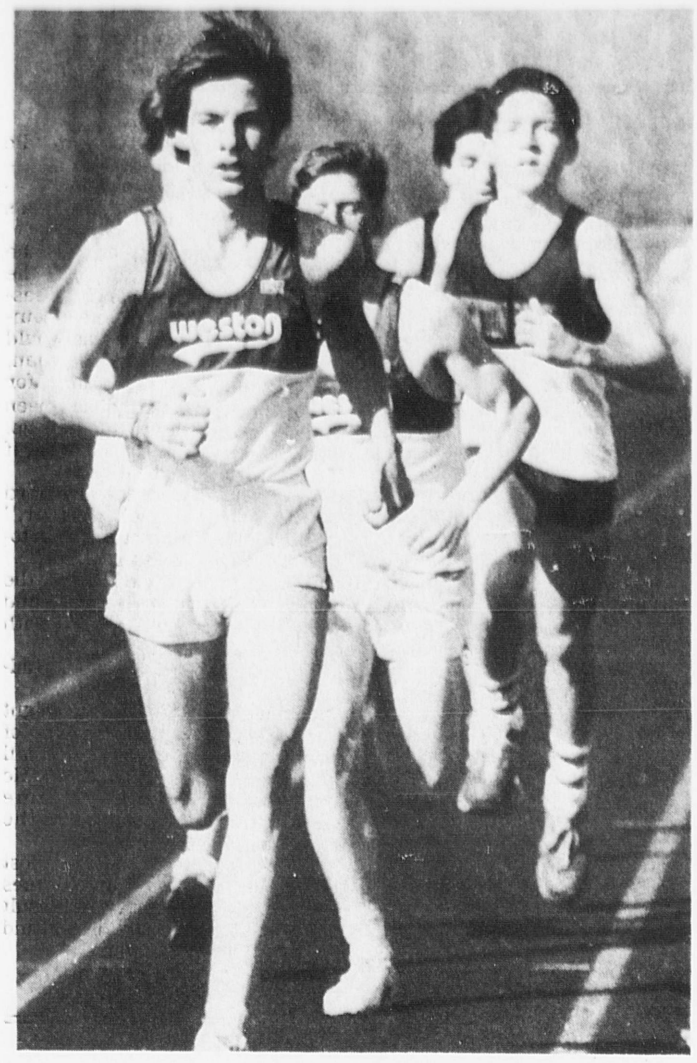
Though Waltham's third straight win ran the season record to 8-2, Scafidi knows his club isn't "playing great. We're playing well enough to get by."

Take the law to heart.

Buckle up Massachusetts!



Eventual winner Rob Fortune leads pack in mile

Weston outruns Newton South

NEWTON — Senior David Irving posted three victories as Weston got by Newton South, 94-57, in Dual County League track action at South.

Coach Don Duncan was particularly pleased with his time of 11.0 in the 100. Irving also won the long jump and triple jump with leaps of 19-7 and 40-9½.

Nigel Jones, only a junior picked up a win in the 400 meters in 54.7 and was second to Irving in the 100.

Both Jones and Rob Fortune were coming off hamstring injuries, but neither seemed hampered in their specialties.

Fortune, only a freshman, won the mile in his first competition of the season in 4:52.5.

Senior Tom Davidson sailed 11 feet in the pole vault for a win and a personal best.

The brightest spot for South was the return to action of Micah Lowenthal, coming off a bout with mononucleosis. Despite being out of action for nearly two months, he ran second in the low hurdles (17.3) and javelin (137 feet).

Mike Silverstein ran a 2:04 to win the 800, as he continues to improve. He is only a second off the state qualifying time in the half-mile. Should he qualify, it would be his third different event.

Russell Kane ran his best time (23.3) to win the 200. He finished second to Irving in the long jump and triple jump, and was third in the 100 at 11.3, a tenth of a second behind Jones.

David Moseby was second in the shot and discus, and Ilir Topalli took the second spot in the 400.

North nips Brockton

Peter Bourland won three individual events and anchored the mile relay as Newton North edged Brockton, 78-67, in their Suburban League track opener at North.

The meet came down to the relays, with the Tigers up by one (68-67) and needing to take either one. They wound up with both.

The mile relay proved to be the difference. The Boxers took an early lead, but John Fiske made up the difference on his leg. Bourland took the anchor and burned a 50.1 to pull away for the victory.

The field takes off at the start of the mile

Bourland's other wins came the triple jump (42-¼), high jump (5-6) and high hurdles (15.6).

David Gates ran a very good 39.7 to capture the low hurdles.

Chris Rutan's 10.4 was good enough to win the 100, and Eric Boemer ran what coach Hank Van Putten called "a very smart race" to take the 880. It was his best time in the event.

Newton also won the mile, as Rob Wellenstein turned in a 4:37.2.

Cappadona shines in 18-0 Lion breeze

Senior right-hander John Cappadona hurled a two-hitter and his Newton South teammates erupted as the red-hot Lions singed visiting Wayland, 18-0, Friday in a Dual County League meeting.

Newton South wrapped out 17 hits, including four doubles and two triples, on the way to securing Cappadona's complete-game victory early. The Lions struck for three runs in the first inning and added five in the second.

Cappadona escaped unharmed from a one-out, first-and-third jam in the top of the first, then coasted to the win. He allowed a leadoff single in the third inning and a two-out basehit in the sixth. Cappandona scattered six walks and struck out four.

Weston stuns South

Call Greg Jackson "The Wiggler." The Weston High righthander put Newton South Lions on base in every inning Wednesday but managed to squirm his way out of trouble, all in an 8-3 upset victory over host Newton South.

South entered the game at 5-2 while Weston brought a 3-4 record to Newton. With the victory, the Wildcats have now won four of their last five games to reach the .500 mark.

"They (South) were certainly shell-shocked," said Weston coach Cliff Wilson after the game. "They came in and really expected us to lose."

Jackson's victory, the first by Weston starter so far this season, was no perfect game, but Wilson said the team's ace hurler is getting better every time out.

"This was certainly Greg's best game of the season," he said. "but Greg Jackson isn't at the point he was last year. But, he's improving, which is a breath of fresh air."

Jackson, the only established pitcher back from last season's tourney team, has faced the iron of the DCL thus far. Acton-Boxboro and Lincoln-Sudbury have both been on the junior's schedule.

The right-hander worked out of jams all afternoon, starting with the first inning. Following a two-run triple by Jimmy Cronin in the top of the first, Jackson loaded the bases full of Lions with no outs in the bottom half. Not to worry, he fanned the next three batters to escape unharmed.

He did it again in the seventh inning. With Weston up, 8-3, Jackson loaded the bases with one out, then forced a pair of pop ups to end the game.

"It was his best effort yet," Wilson repeated.

South coach Harvey Doneski had praise for the Weston hurler also.

"He was overpowering," Doneski said of Jackson. "We didn't hit the pitcher, he did a very good job."

A Ron Watson two-run triple in the fourth put Weston on top, 4-0. With two outs, Glen Haufler and John Wacker both walked off starter and loser John Pappas.

Watson followed and crushed a Pappas offering to deep, deep rightfield, scoring both runs before getting himself thrown out on a bang-bang play at the plate.

"He hit a moon-shot for a triple," Wilson said of Watson's blast. "All the rightfielder did was turn around a run. It would have been in the bullpen at Fenway."

Following another Jackson magic act in the bottom of the fourth, the Weston offense blew it open in the fifth to take an 8-0 lead.

Jackson had a hand in the offense, roping a two-run single to left-center to start things off. A throwing error on an Andy Melone bunt crossed another, and a delayed double steal by Melone at third and Greg Andler at first scored another.

Newton South came back with two runs in the bottom of the fifth, one of the rare times Jackson did not dig himself out of a hole. The junior pitcher walked both Mark Maiocca and Pappas with one out, then yielded an RBI-single to Tom McGary. With runners at the corners, pinch-hitter Adam Gabriel plated South's second run with a sacrifice fly to right field.

P.J. O'Toole smoked a line-drive home run to deep center for a seventh-inning Newton South score, but the party ended there for the Lions.

Weston will host 5-3 Acton-Boxboro on Friday at 3:30 p.m. with Scott Kerry on the mound for the Wildcats. South will host wayland on Friday, also in a 3:30 contest.

South defense stops Acton in lacrosse

NEWTON — The defensive corps came through again for Newton South in lacrosse on Friday, as the Lions posted a 5-3 victory over visiting Acton-Boxboro. South pitched a 2-0 shutout in the first half, before ttrthe pace picked up a bit.

David Abroms (three goals) owned both first-half goals. The first came at 7:10 of the first period off a fastbreak started by Neil Schwartz. He added his second at 9:39 of the second frame.

Brian Lukhez cut the South lead in half to start the third period, but South got the goal back on a score by John Gleason off an Alex Oline feed.

Acton again cut the spread before goals by Abroms and Morgan upped the South lead to 5-2. Acton-Boxboro would score once more late in the fourth quarter, but South was never in danger of losing control.

Defensmen Seth Oliver played well in his first game since a shoulder seperation two weeks ago, as did sophomore Rich Blumenthal. Goalie Alex Levine stopped 15 shots for Newton.

Oline and sophpomore Morgan also received praise from South coach Paul Murphy.

The Lions will play at Falmouth on Monday and will host Weymouth North on Wednesday.

Tigers win

When Newton North coach Rick Clark needed a win the most, it was again his "grunts" that came through.

Clark's defensive corps secured the homeland Friday, and with an 8-4 victory over host Framingham North, the Tigers moved into sole possession of second place with a 3-2 league record.

Newton North took an ever-so slim 2-1 lead into the second quarter, and an equally-as-shaky 4-3 lead into intermission, but thanks to a tough riding game by the Tiger defenders, Framingham was unable to penetrate and Newton North slowly pulled away.

"Our ride was the difference," Clark said. "They (Framingham North) couldn't get the ball in our end. It was a tremendous defensive job by our kids."

The Tigers outshot the Spartans, 33-15.

John Flynn and Josh Carpenter scored two goals apiece to lead the Tigers. Brian Claflin. David Robinson, and Mark Adams also added goals.

Newton North is 7-4 overall.

Teens to race for homeless

NEWTON — Boston for the World has announced a three-mile road race for teen-agers, to benefit the Fund for the Homeless and other Boston based international hunger relief agencies. The race, scheduled at noon Sunday, June 1, is to start and finish at MDC Lee Pool and run along the Charles River.

All teenagers from high schools, prep schools and youth groups in the Greater Boston area have been invited to participate. Schools are encouraged to raise the $50 entry fee for each runner, and they can solicit sponsorship from clubs, businesses, friends, and relatives.

Prizes will be given to the fastest boy and girl who raise the most money, as well as to all schools who raise more than $1,000 as a group. The big winners of the race will be the charities it benfits. The Boston for the World Fund will distribute 50 percent to the Fund for the Homeless and 50 percent to Boston-based international hunger relief agencies

For more information, contact Boston For the World, 2 South Market Building, fifth floor, Boston, 723-5250.

Youth Soccer registration set

Registration for the fall season for the co-ed Newton Youth Soccer League will be open until May 31. Registration forms will be available in all Newton public schools — elementary and junior high, as well as at private schools and the Recreation Department.

The following five divisions will make up the fall program for girls and boys: grade 2, grades 3 & 4, gardes 5 & 6, gardes 7 & 8, grades 9 & 10. Only Newton residents are eligible for the league.

A $25 fee is required for the first child in a family, and $15 for each additional child. The fee covers uniforms, team equipment, referees, team photos and trophies. Games are scheduled weekly to be played on Saturdays for 11 weeks, and will commence on Saturday, Sept. 6. Required practices will be one day a week.

The league policy is to group players together from the same school whenever possible. Private school players will be placed on a team within their public school districts. The 11 years success of this co-ed league is due to its low-key philosophy which enables all youngsters to play no matter what their athletic abilities.

For further information, call 244-1650 between 4:30 and 8 p.m.

Tigers set track records in R.I.

KINGSTON, R.I. — Three school records fell as Newton North took home four firsts from the Rhode Island Interscholastic Championships over the weekend.

Peter Bourland, David Gates and the 1600-meter relay team all established Newton North records. Admittedly, one of the reasons for the number of records that fell is that the Tigers normally run events measured in yards, rather than meters.

Bourland nailed the 110-meter high hurdles in 15.2 seconds for his record and first place.

Gates covered the 200-meter distance in 23.1 for another mark and first.

Both of those runners were on the winning relay team as well, which combined for a 3:28.8.

Chris Rutan led off with 51.8 for his leg. Eric Cosentino followed with 54.6, and Gates (51.6) and Bourland (50.8) finished up strong.

North's final championship came in the 400 meters. There, Rutan ran a time of 51 seconds, only six-tenths of a second off his own record.

Rob Wellenstein picked up third place in the 1500, posting North's final school record of the meet. The senior ran a 4:24.4.

Hotel gives furniture to schools

NEWTON — A major commitment to the Newton Schools Foundation opening fund drive has been made by the Newton Marriott Hotel, Richard Hamermesh, Foundation President, announced recently.

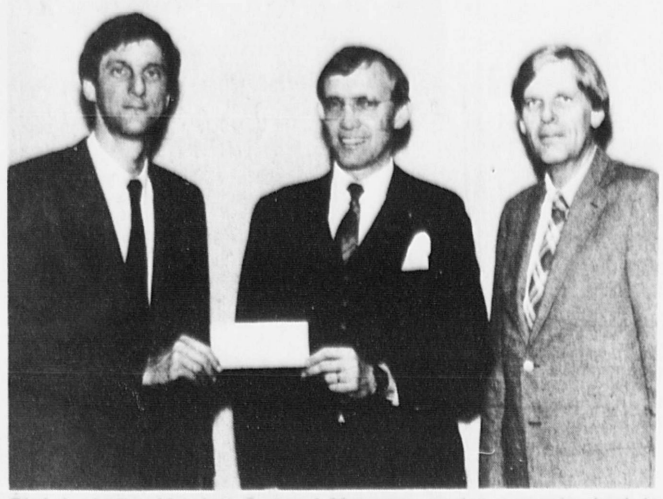
An initial donation of furniture has been contributed to the organization for distribution to the Newton schools in need of these furnishings for teachers' lounges and other areas.

In addition to the furniture, the Marriott this week also made a cash contribution bringing the total value given to the Foundation to approximately $5,000.

"We are always happy to be able to participate in such a worthwhile community effort," stated Olof Arnheim, general manager of the Newton Marriott. "We feel that the Newton Schools Foundation is a very valuable organization which benefits our youngsters."

Hamermesh pointed out that the Marriott contribution carries a significance well beyond the cash value because the hotel is one of the first coporate donors to the Foundation.

Hamermesh pointed out that the Marriott contribution carries a significance well beyond the cash value because the hotel is one of the first corporate donors to the Foundation.



Olof Arnheim, Marriott General Manager, center, presents check to Richard Hamermesh and Gerald Bazer.

"Marriott's gift confirmed our belief that the corporate community would support innovation and excellence in a public school system.

"This gift, we feel, will be a harbinger of similar contributions from a rapidly and continually growing corporate family of Foundation members."

Colin Nadeau, former General Manager of the Newton Marriott and currently vice president of Marriott's northeast's region, pointed out that the Newton hotel has always supported the Garden City's many leading organizations.

"I have always had a high regard for Newton and I still maintain many close relationships with groups in the city," he declared. "I am delighted that the Newton Marriott is able to take a prominent role in helping launch the efforts of the newly-formed Newton Schools Foundation."

Marilynne Bellengi, executive director of the Foundation, pointed out that as a "start up" organization, the Newton Schools Foundation will make particularly good use of the cash contribution from the Marriott.

This money will be spent to acquire the tools and materials needed to begin the organization's major corporate and private fund raising efforts. Thus, the contribution will, in effect, be leveraged many times over to support the foundation," she said.

Created to raise dollars to support innovative and enriched programs in the public schools for which school budgets are not available, the Foundation will fund activities that reach beyond the standard school curriculum.

The foundation will offer grants to individuals involved in Newton public education. These grants will be made for programs and/or materials that advance the educational state-of-the-art for school youngsters.

Marriott's contribution of furniture to the Foundation included sofas, chairs, lounges, cabinets as well as carpeting which were removed from the deluxe Concierge floor of the hotel.

Schools, selected by the Foundation to receive this furniture, included Franklin, Horace Mann, Mason-Rice, Zervas and Countryside.

Boy Scout Troop 205 marks 75th on May 10

NEWTON — On May 10 Newton will celebrate the 75th birthday of the Boy Scouts Troop 205. Troop 205 has a distinguished record of 75 consecutive years of service. This makes Troop 205 one of the oldest consecutive Boys Scouts organizations in Eastern Massachusetts. In fact, troop 205 may be the oldest in the nation (records are non-existent).

Some 800 Newton youths have been trained for manhood as Boy Scouts, many of them presently contributing to the executive workforce of the state. Forty of these Boys Scouts have achieved the rank of Eagle Scout.

For 60 years the scouts met at the HUT. The HUT is located on Tyler Terrace in Newton Center.

On May 10 all former Boy Scouts from Troop 205 are invited to a grand reunion dinner. The dinner will be free and paid for by fundraising activities by the present day Troop 205 Scouts. Recently they had a major can and bottle drive.

The dinner will be at Sacred Heart Church School in Newton Centre. For more information, call Troop Committee Chairman Fred Malouf at 969-7331.

$100,000 is earned in 'Newton Week'

NEWTON — Fifty-six people manned telephones and raised over $100,000 for the 1986 "Honor the Promise Campaign" of the Jewish Philanthropies of Greater Boston during the recently held "Newton Week."

The third annual Newton Week was a combination of educational programming and fundraising by CJP's Newton Team to raise funds for CJP and its network of 75 local, national and overseas human service agencies.

Activities included three telethons and a special symposium that drew an audience of nearly 200 people to hear guest speaker Professor Isaiah Gafni of Hebrew University who presented an extensive, non-partisan overview of the current political scene in Israel and the prospects for peace in the Middle East.

Newton Mayor Theodore Mann, Honorary Chairman of Newton Week, brought greetings from the city. The event and the telethons were held at CJP's Gosman Jewish Community Campus in Newton.

Local boy elected president of honor society

NEWTON — Timothy Martens, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward W. Martens of Newton, has been elected president of the Spanish National Honor Society for 1986-87 at St. Sebastian's Country Day School for boys in Needham. Robert Hurstak, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Hurstak, Jr. of Sudbury, will serve as secretary, both students are in grade 11.

The induction for the next academic year will take place at 9:30 a.m. on May 22.

Temporary headquarters

Because renovations have been undertaken at the offices of the Charles River Watershed Association, the organization was forced to look for temporary space. Olof Arnheim, left, General Manager of the Newton Marriott, volunteered a room for use by the CRWA until the office is refurbished. Giving the hotel key to Rita Barron, Newton, director of the CRWA, is Mr. Arnheim. Two CRWA aides, Cassie Thomas, second left, environmental assistant and Wendy Goren, Administrative assistant, are delighted with their new quarters at the Marriott.

Drug abuse program visits schools

NEWTON — About 1,400 seventh and eighth grade students in the Newton Public schools will participate in a comprehensive drug and alcohol abuse education program in early May.

The Freedom from Chemical Dependency Foundation, a non-profit agency, will bring the program to students at Bigelow Junior High School during the week of May 5. The students at Brown Junior High School will take part in the program the week of May 12, and the students at Day Junior High School will take part in the program the week of May 19.

A $7,000 challenge grant from Citicorp will support half the cost of the Newton program. Citicorp officials also have worked with community organizations and businesses in Newton to help raise another $7,000 to support the program. The remaining $7,000 to support the program was contributed from the general fund of FCD.

The Freedom from Chemical Dependency Foundation, a Needham-based organization, will have worked with more than 25,000 students in 150 public and private schools during the 1985-86 school year.

Dr. John M. Strand, Superintendent of the Newton Public School System, said he was pleased that the FCD program was coming to his system.

"FCD has been involved in alcohol and drug education since 1976 and the success of its program is echoed by thousands of students' comments," Dr. Strand said.

Walther E. Mercer, a vice president of Citicorp and a Newton resident, said his company decided to help bring the program to Newton and 124 other Massachusetts communities because the FCD Foundation has demonstrated it has an effective program that helps persuade students to avoid drug and alcohol abuse.

Mercer commented that "the Freedom from Chemical Dependency Foundation, which bases its program on the experience of former substance abusers, has had impressive results wherever it has gone.

Classes at each school are broken down into small groups, each of which will have daily sessions during the next four days led by recovering substance abusers. In each session, the leader will talk about drug or alcohol abuse, answer questions, and dispel the commonly circulated myths about substance abuse.

The program concludes with a city-wide parents meeting at 7:30 on May 22 at the Brown Junior High School. Parents of other children are also invited.

Service Awards presented

7,500 received blank pages

Students can retake SATs

NEW YORK (AP) — You're one of 7,500 college-bound high school students whose SAT test contained two blank pages. The Educational Testing Service says you can now:

a) Take the test again for free. b) Receive a full refund of your test fee. c) Accept your test score and hope for the best. d) All of the above.

ETS spokesman Joy McIntyre said Monday the correct answer is 'd,' and students who received the blanked-out books will be contacted this week about being retested May 17, June 7 or June 8.

If they don't want to take the test again, they are welcome to get their money or a test score back, she said.

In addition, any of the 300,000 students who received a complete test but felt the disruption caused by the blank books hindered their performance can contact ETS and receive the free retest, Ms. McIntyre said.

Any score in the books with blanks would be valid because those pages were in the middle of an experimental math section which doesn't count toward the student's total. ETS routinely includes such sections in the SAT, but does not identify them as such to those taking the test.

Pages 22 and 25 of Saturday's test were blank only in about one of every 40 of the exams. The booklets with the blank pages were distributed throughout the nation as part of ETS's policy of scrambling the 30-40 different test versions before they are sent to the system's 3,000 test centers.

ETS officials Richard Noeth said when the problem first surfaced that he doubted many of the students who received flawless booklets would opt for the retest. A majority of the students who take the SATs in May are juniors who plan to take the test again later in the year.

Bribe trial nears end for governer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A federal prosecutor said today Gov. Edwin Edwards took a $2 million bribe and consistently lied about it as part of a hospital investment venture that enriched himself, his brother and his friends.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Marilyn Barnes was the first person to give closing arguments in Edwards' second trial in the case. It could go to the jury by Thursday night.

Edwards, his brother Marion and business associates James Wyllie Jr., Ronald Falgout and Gus Mijalis are charged with racketeering and fraud in connection with a $10 million venture.

Prosecutors, led by U.S. Attorney John Volz, contend the men used their influence to obtain state certification for hospital and nursing home projects in which they held interests. The first trial ended in a hung jury.

Barnes sought to convince jurors that Edwards bypassed state health care rules to make sure his business partners obtained state approval for the projects.

On July 30, 1984, she said, Edwards ordered rule changes for two hospital projects owned by Wyllie and Falgout and ordered approval of five nursing home projects owned or represented by the two men.

Then, she said, he called a halt, effective Aug. 1, 1984, to any more approvals for hospitals or nursing homes. That, she said, effectively shut out any competition for Wyllie and Falgout.

Barnes did not dispute that Edwards had the authority to order the changes or approvals.

"Before you can have a misuse of power, you have to have the power to misuse," she said.

When he ordered the moratorium, he said his decision was based on recommendations sent to him in a letter from Harvey Fitzgerald, a health department undersecretary.

As it turned out, Barnes said, the letter was signed by Fitzgerald but written by Falgout.

She said Edwards made $2 million on hospital projects even though he did very little work in connection with them. Prosecutors have repeatedly referred to the money as a bribe, though the governor has not been charged with bribery.

The start of closing arguments came a day later than scheduled while Edwards sought to make his own closing statement.

After a hearing Monday, a three-judge panel of the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld the trial judge's ruling against letting the governor make a closing statement.

Edwards asked Friday to present the closing argument. U.S. District Judge Marcel Livaudais turned him down Monday, saying he worried that some of the publicly expressed animosity between Volz and Edwards might work its way into the courtroom.

"It might generally be understood that they are not the most complimentary of each other," Livaudais said.

"He can say what he wants about me, but I don't think it is fair for him to be able to say it in a court setting," Volz said later at a news conference.

At Monday's hearing, Edwards assured the judges he would behave properly in the closing argument and would not attempt to mislead the jurors.

"The court knows full well that my demeanor in both trials has been exemplary," Edwards said.

Defense lawyers acknowledged that any federal judge has the discretion to decide whether a defendant can participate in his own defense. But, said Edwards' chief lawyer, Mike Fawer, Livaudais should have a good reason.

Prosecutors argued that Edwards did not take the stand during the case, and said jurors might not understand that Edwards' closing argument could not be considered as evidence.

Obituaries

David H. Winnick, 72

Winnick, Goldstein & Dorfman partner

CHESTNUT HILL — A funeral service was held Monday afternoon in Temple Ohabei Shalom, Brookline, for David H. Winnick, 72, of Chestnut Hill, a certified public accountant and a founding partner of the Boston accounting firm of Winnick, Goldstein and Dorfman. Burial was in Vilno Cemetery, West Roxbury.

Born in Boston, he had lived in Chestnut Hill for 34 years and was a graduate of Boston University School of Business Administration.

Active in Boston University alumni affairs, he also was treasurer of the Friends of Boston University Hockey and Football and recently chaired the 50th reunion of the Class of 1935.

He was a member of the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants, the Massachusetts Society of Certified Public Accountants (MSCPA) and the MSCPA's state taxation committee.

Mr. Winnick also was a member of the Euclid Masonic Lodge, Demolay and was a longtime Shriner.

He leaves his wife, Rose (Weiner); his children, Burton, Warren, Paul and Gail Wallace; his sister, Pauline Winnick and six grandchildren.

Jack Solomon, 68

Was Stop & Shop executive

BROOKLINE — A funeral service was held last Tuesday morning in the Levine Chapel, Brookline, for Jack Solomon, 68, of Los Angeles, formerly of Brookline, who had been a merchandising executive with the Stop & Shop Cos. Burial was in Mishkan Tefila Cemetery, West Roxbury.

Locally he leaves his brother, Bernard of Chestnut Hill. He also is survived by his daughter, Jan Simonson of Washington, D. C. and a grandson. He was the husband of the late, Denise (Menzer) Solomon and the father of the late, Leslie Solomon.

A former Brookline resident, Mr. Solomon was born in Boston and was a Phi Beta Kappa and Sigma Xi honors graduate of Yale University.

After working as a Filene's sales manager until 1958, Mr. Solomon joined the Stop & Shop Cos. and became closely involved with the growth of Bradlees, the Stop & Shop merchandising division. He became a first vice president at Bradlees and a senior vice president of Stop & Shop in the late 1960s.

He left Boston in 1970 to become senior vice president of Hartfield-Zody Stores in Los Angeles and later became co-owner of The Price, a women's clothing chain in southern California.

During World War II, he served as a lieutenant in the Army and saw combat in the Italian campaign.

Catherine M. Tobin, 83

Former special needs teacher in Newton

QUINCY — A funeral mass was celebrated Tuesday in St. Mary of the Nativity Church, Scituate Harbor, for Catherine M. Tobin, 83, of Quincy, a former special needs teacher in Newton public schools for more than 30 years. Burial was in Old St. Mary's Cemetery, Scituate.

A native of Plymouth, she grew up in Scituate, Wellfleet and Newtonville and was a graduate of Bridgewater Normal School (now Bridgewater State College).

She was a member of the American and Massachusetts Retired Teachers Associations.

She leaves several nieces and nephews.

Kristen Lee Abrahamson, 30

Former teacher in N. H.

WEST NEWTON — A funeral service was held Thursday afternoon in St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, Wellesley, for Kristen Lee Abrahamson, 30, of West Newton, a waitress and a former teacher of special education in Milford, N. H. Burial was private.

Miss Abrahamson died Monday in Sherburne, Vt., from injuries suffered in an automobile accident.

Born in Natick, she had lived for most of her life in Wellesley and was a graduate of Wellesley High School. She attended Colby-Sawyer College and was a graduate of Leslie College, where she earned her BS degree.

At the time of her death, she was a waitress at The Seasons Restaurant in the Bostonian Hotel and at Aspen East in Killington, Vt.

Rosanna M. Hakins, 85

Was floor administrator at Newton-Wellesley

NEWTONVILLE — The funeral of Rosanna M. (Letourneau) Hakins, 85, of Newtonville, was held from the Lyons and Hayes Funeral Home, 1479 Washington St., West Newton, Saturday, followed by a funeral mass in Our Lady Help of Christians Church. Interment was in Newton Cemetery.

Mrs. Hakins died last Tuesday at Memorial Hospital in Houston, Texas, after a brief illness.

Born in Salem, she had been a resident of Newton for 55 years.

An employee of Grover Cronin's in Waltham for 10 years, she had also been a floor administrator at the Newton-Wellesley Hospital for 25 years.

Mrs. Hakins was very active with the Women's Auxiliary of the Waltham Moose, the Newton Retired Senior Volunteer Program, Newton, and St. Bernard's Church Ladies Guild, West Newton.

Donald S. Lawrence, Sr., 65

WELLESLEY — The Rev. Robert Hemmett, pastor of St. John's Episcopal Church, Newtonville, will officiate at a funeral service for Donald S. Lawrence, Sr., 65, of Scituate, formerly of Newton, at the J. S. Waterman & Sons Funeral, 592 Washington St., Wellesley, Thursday at 1 p.m. Burial will be private.

Mr. Lawrence died Sunday night at the South Shore Hospital in Weymouth.

Born in Milford, N. H., Mr. Lawrence was raised in Newtonville and was a graduate of Newton High School and Fryeburg Academy.

He had been a manufacturers representative for the Massachusetts area with the New England Rustics Associates in Essex Junction, Vt.

During World War II, he saw service with the Army during the landing at Normandy and in the Battle of the Bulge.

Carlton H. Hastings, 67

Retired chief testing evaluator for Avco

GROTON — Carlton H. Hastings, 66, of Groton, retired chief of nondestructive test evaluations at Avco Corp., died Friday at his home after a long illness. There will be no funeral services.

Born in Newton, he was a graduate of Waltham High School and Tufts University, where he earned his BS degree in chemical engineering. He later took graduate studies at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Harvard University and Northeastern University.

A veteran of the Navy and the Army, he was discharged from the Navy in 1944 and the Army, as a master sergeant at the Watertown Arsenal in 1946.

He served as director of the American Society for Non-Destructive Testing from 1953-59 and was active in the American Society of Testing Materials and the American Society of Metals.

Robert F. Brittain, 64

NORWOOD — A funeral service was held Thursday morning in the Paul H. Kraw Funeral Home, Norwood, for Robert F. Brittain, 64, of Norwood, a retired truck driver for Mooney and Co. of Holliston. Burial was in Highland Cemetery.

Born and educated in Needham, he had lived in Norwood for 40 years and had served with the Army during World War II.

He leaves his wife, Sally J. (Keras) Brittain; his sons, Richard R. Moreshead of West Roxbury and David E. Moreshead of Norwood; his mother, Evelyn A. (Fletcher) Brittain of Newton Upper Falls; his sisters, Dorothy Burns of Newton Upper Falls, Katherine Maloney of Norwood and six grandchildren. He was the son of the late Frederick Brittain and the brother of the late Harold Brittain and Charlene Allen.

Marie P. Sheehan, 60

WELLESLEY — A funeral mass was celebrated last Thursday morning in St. James Church, Wellesley, for Marie P. (Donovan) Sheehan, 60, of Windsor, Conn., formerly of Wellesley, a retired supervisor for New England Telephone. Burial was in St. Mary's Cemetery, Needham.

Born in Boston, she was a graduate of Emmanuel College and was a former member of St. James Women's Guild, Wellesley.

Annual "Samson Triathlon," sponsored by the Leventhal-Sidman Jewish Community Center in Newton, will be held June 15 at 8 a.m. Event consists of a half-mile swim, 15 mile bike, and a 4.8 mile run around Newton and Needham. For more information, telephone 965-7410, ext. 154 (Jim Ames) or ext. 138 (Mary Whidden) or stop by the center for an entry form.

Ongoing events

Newton Arts Center Summer session, July 7 through Aug. 1, offers children's classes in ballet, jazz, rhythmn and movements, theatre, mixed media, drawing, painting and pottery. Teen classes available in ballet. Adult classes in landscape painting, tapestry weaving, advanced printing for photographers, creative writing, writing from the right side of the brain, and yoga. Call 964-3424 for brochure.

Newton South High School class of '76 is planning its 10th reunion. Please send your current addresses to: Alan Budd, 224 Jackson St., Newton Centre, Mass. 02159.

Jewish Vocational Service, a nonsectarian agency, is interviewing all persons 60 and over who are interested in looking for work, either part-time or full-time, in many different occupations. Appointments will be held at each local Council on Aging office. You are invited to contact your local office now to schedule an interview with an experienced JVS job developer who will try to place you in a job that meets your needs.

The Retired Men's Club of Newton holds meetings at the Newton Highlands Congregational Church, Lincoln and Hartford streets, at 9:30 a.m. on alternate Thursdays. On the other Thursdays, the discussion group meets at 9:30 a.m. at St. Paul's Church on Walnut Street in Newton Highlands. Light refreshments are served at both. Bowling is held every Thursday at 1 p.m. at a new location — 14 Chestnut St., Needham. The investment/financial group meets on the first Wednesday of each month at the Second Church, Chestnut Street, West Newton at 1:30 p.m. The group also offers clubs for golf, bridge, camera, gardening, library and walking. All retired men are welcome. Call Henry McDade for information at 527-4269.

The Small Appliance Repair Group invites residents over 60 years old to use their services. This group repairs items such as lamps, toasters, irons, but cannot repair radios or TVs. Bring in the item any Wednesday afternoon to their workshop on the lower level of the Newton Community Service Centers, Inc., 492 Waltham Street, West Newton. For information call 969-5906.

"Pregnancy, Birth and Parenting," and a number of other related topics will be discussed at Newton-Wellesley Hospital's Childbirth Education Department. For more information, call 243-6343, 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Monday through Friday.

"Coping with Your Mastectomy," a 12-week group for postmastectomy women, 55 and older. Group members can openly discuss and learn to deal with feelings and fears associated with a mastectomy. For more information, call Claire Donahue, Newton-Wellesley Hospital, 243-6490.

Ice Skating Classes at the local MDC Rink for children 4 and under and adults is beginning in mid-January. Cost is $35 for 7 weeks of lessons (one day a week). Call Bay State Ice Skating School at 527-1936.

Warmlines, Newton's Parent Network and Resource Center, sponsors three morning support groups starting the first full week of January. Mothers of Newborns, Mothers of Toddlers and Mothers of Older Infants begin Monday, Tuesday and Thursday morning, respectively, and are led by professionals. For more information and to register, call WarmLines, 244-6843. Cost for groups vary depending on length.

Youth for Understanding, the nation's largest teenage exchange organization is seeking host families for the 1986-87 program year. Students will be arriving in July, 1986 from all over the world and will live with American families while attending local high schools.

Cambodian Luong Ung is learning to confront the nightmares of her homeland in her Newton South writing course.

She's harvesting hope from the killing fields

By Maureen Azzato
Staff Writer

NEWTON CENTRE - She spent many sleepless nights in abandoned shacks, but more often than not the young Cambodian girl slept unprotected on the cold ground. She was alone in the killing fields.

"There were dead bodies all over. Everywhere - hanging from trees. For the government, killing was a game," Newton South student Luong Ung says. "They never buried the dead. Maybe they would cover some bodies with branches and leaves. The smell is so strong and awful. It's a smell I will never forget."

At 16, Luong arrived in the United States alone. Her entire family was killed during the Vietnam War. Luong was nine when her mother was killed and for years she wandered about her country homeless, penniless, and hungry.

After her mother's death, a Cambodian family took Luong under its wing and promised to take care of her mother's belongings until she was old enough to look after them herself. She trusted them.

"I didn't know what to do and I had nowhere to go," Luong, now 20, says. "They stole everything I owned. They lied to me. The only thing I have of my mother's is a ring. I knew I would never see my mom again. I thought I would never see the sun again because I was alone in a hole all by myself in the darkness. I had nobody then, but I'm starting to see a lot of light."

She lived in a Thai refugee camp for two years. There she was interviewed by immigration authorities who were trying to find her a home.

"All I knew is I wanted to go to America. I didn't know where it was, but I knew there was freedom there and a

Chief refuses comment

Death threats alleged

By Howard Altman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Police Chief William Quinn has been under 24-hour armed guard for the past two weeks due to threats against his life, according to Alderman Richard McGrath. He added that the chief's recent request for hollow point ammunition "is an example of the paranoia that exists right now."

"There are two police officers with Quinn all the time," McGrath told fellow aldermen during a budget hearing last week. "One of the guys is carrying a machinegun. We have to be careful about issuing this type of ammunition. I question the reasoning of Quinn."

After the hearing, Alderman Richard Bullwinkle confirmed police sources saying that Quinn's life was threatened, adding that the threats are substantial. "I've heard that from other officers," he said of the death threats. "I think that he's probably had other incidents. The threats were probably from a terrorist group, they were described as terrorists by the officers."

> 'I don't know why death threats against the chief are being kept secret.'
> Ald. Richard McGrath

Both McGrath and Bullwinkle said they were tipped off by "unnamed" police officers who reported what was on the police manifest last week. McGrath could not comment on who made the threat, why or when the threat was made or Quinn's whereabouts. Quinn was reportedly out of town until this Monday.

"I don't know why death threats against the chief are being kept secret," McGrath added. Chief Administrative Officer Richard Kelliher also refused comment.

Massachusetts Chiefs of Police Association Secretary Paul Doherty last week said it was possible Quinn was requesting hollow point ammunition because of threats against his life.

"I heard some threats were made in Newton," he said. "Quinn brought that up at some meeting sometime in the last couple of weeks. I am not sure why the request for hollow points was made at this time. I believe there were threats against police officials in the community and it is probably in line with that."

"We pay this man a lot of money," Bullwinkle said. "I think we either should trust his judgment or consider finding someone else for the job. We are asking these officers to go out on the street to face people who might have dum-dums."

The chief refused to comment on the alleged death threats when he appeared before the aldermanic Finance Committee Monday night.

Aldermen push for divestment

By Les Orsini
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Alderman Matthew Jefferson has won the first round of his battle to force the city to rid its pension funds of South African-related investments.

The aldermanic Finance Committee Monday night backed his bid for a home rule petition that, if passed, would force the city to divest its holdings in all American companies doing business in the Union of South Africa. The vote was 5 to 0 with one abstention.

Jefferson was supported by around 40 citizens — including 22 Newton North High School students, state Rep. David Cohen and state Senator Jack Backman — at Monday night's meeting.

They want aldermen to do what the Retirement Board last month would not — risk financial loss to make a statement against apartheid, South Africa's system of racial segregation.

Some aldermen estimated the city has roughly $3.5 million of its $60 million in pension funds invested in American companies doing business in South Africa.

"I hope you don't become embroiled in the financial aspects of this issue," said Alderman Matthew Jefferson. "It's not a financial issue. It's a moral issue."

South Africa's white minority government uses the almost universally condemned system of apartheid to deny equal rights to its 18 million blacks. The country has around 3 million whites.

Referring to South Africa, Jefferson said, "You have a government that's not protective of and not being responsible to the majority. After that, there is no other issue."

Jefferson's home rule petition must be approved first by the full Board of Aldermen, then by the state Legislature, which has already voted to divest the commonwealth's pension funds.

His move received official backing from Gov. Michael S. Dukakis, who encouraged divestment in a letter to Finance Chairman Paul Coletti. It is the first time in his four-and-a-half years as chairman that he has received

City counters DA's OML complaints

By Maureen Azzato

NEWTON - The School Committee is taking steps to correct the violations of the Open Meeting Law (OML) as outlined in a decision by District Attorney Scott Harshbarger, but the city solicitor claims portions of the decision are "inaccurate."

Harshbarger, in his March decision, also ordered the School Committee to rewrite all the minutes of executive sessions held in the past year but City Solicitor Daniel Funk said that is an "impossible task."

"Maybe we could have been more specific in our record keeping, but it is impossible to recreate the events of a year more specifically," Funk said. "The idea, as we see it, is to improve our record keeping in the future and we have no argument with that."

Funk also said he questions whether the district attorney has the "authority" to impose such a remedy.

A letter from Funk and the committee citing the alleged "inaccuracies" in a decision that was sent to the district attorney's office last week.

"The decision found so many faults with the committee based on wrong assumptions," Funk said. "They (the district attorney's office) relied on outside accusations rather than checking with us first."

Assistant District Attorney Michael Fabbri, who assisted in drafting the original decision, said that he was "unprepared to respond to the committee's letter." Fabbri said he received the letter a few days ago and did not have time to "study it" yet.

"Some steps have been taken by the committee to bring them in compliance with the law," he said. "They have definitely made an effort to get in the direction of fulfilling the terms of our decision."

A complaint was filed with the district attorney's office by the Newton League of Women Voters'. President Anne Hayden said that "when records are not properly kept, accountability is difficult to ascertain and there is no historical understanding or continuity either for the public or for current and future members

Trial halted by charge of police harassment

NEWTON — State police are investigating charges that Newton police officers attempted to intimidate two Waltham residents with threats, harassment and assault and battery.

The charges, filed in Middlesex County Court by Newton attorney Jeffrey A. Newman Monday, involve the case of Michael Calarusso and his wife Naomi.

Because of the charges, a disorderly conduct trial against Mr. Calarusso scheduled to start Tuesday in Middlesex District Court was postponed.

Court papers allege a Newton police officer in his personal vehicle followed Mrs. Calarusso and on a separate occasion assaulted her brother because her husband had filed a complaint against another officer.

According to the Boston Herald, the problems began on Sept. 28, 1985 when the Calarussos got involved in an argument with a woman in Newton.

Police were called, and upon arrival Mrs. Calarusso allegedly was thrown to the ground by officer Stephen Walsh, and her husband clubbed in the head by officer Brian Henderson.

Charges against Walsh were later dropped in district court. Henderson was convicted in January of assault and battery with a dangerous weapon and received a suspended jail sentence and a $5,000 fine.

Claiming police misconduct, the Calarussos filed charges against the two officers. Those charges are still pending, according to the Herald.

Ten days after the clubbing incident, Mr. Calarusso was charged with disorderly conduct. This charge was continued Monday, after being agreed to by Middlesex County Asst. District Attorney Steven Limon.

Newman claimed the most recent attempt at intimidation by Newton police officers occurred Sunday, when Mrs. Calarusso's brother, Christopher Moody, was thrown to the ground and handcuffed by two Newton police officers.

Moody was later released without charges, but not before one of the officers allegedly warned: "Your sister is doing something she shouldn't be doing. It's your sister's next move."

The secrets of success in a brown bag

By Lauren McFalls
Assistant News Editor

"I had an idea. I had a concept. We started small." That was six years ago. Now Newton Centre resident Susan Stone and her Brown Bag Opera are booked solid through fall.

The goal of the opera is to "bring an element of joy" into the lives of children and adults in a "nonthreatening way that they can understand" and to build audiences for the future, says Stone. The little band of four men and women — plus a big brown bag full of costumes — has staged over 450 performances over the past four years at elementary and high schools from Quincy to Manchester.

The group plays on different stages, and under varying conditions, for each performance. "We never know about the acoustics, the piano, the lighting. At English High, the piano was hideous. We're always winging it," she says.

But despite the sometimes rigorous and always less-than-perfect conditions, Susan Stone, at barely five feet tall, takes charge. Backed up by her orchestra — pianist Reed Woodhouse, cellist Corinne Flaven, and violinist Inge Engler — Stone performs and sings all the operatic parts.

Stars of the Brown Bag Opera include, left to right, pianist Reed Woodhouse, cellist Corrine Flaven, violinist Inge Engler and, lying on the piano, creator and vocalist Susan Stone.

Brown Bag performs the children's classic "Hansel and Gretel," "The Mozart Show," a biography set to Mozart's music, Bizet's "Carmen," and "La Perichole (Sing For Your Supper)."

Over the past several weeks, the group was commissioned by the Wang Center for the Performing Arts and the Boston Opera Association to perform "La Traviata" in the Boston Public Schools in

Flaschner honored

By Kevin C. Kennedy
News Editor

WEST NEWTON — Newton District Court overflowed with the friends and family of the late Franklin N. Flaschner Friday afternoon as they gathered for the unveiling of his portrait, to be hung on the courtroom wall.

Governor Michael Dukakis was there, along with the Hon. Edward F. Hennessey, Chief Justice of the Supreme Judicial Court, and a host of dignitaries, all of them with words of praise for Flaschner, who died ten years ago.

The painting is only one reminder of the late, great judge. A division of the Massachusetts Bar Foundation, dedicated to teaching judges the finer points of their profession and keeping them up to date on changes in the law, was created five years a go and named the Flaschner Judicial Institute.

Furthermore, according to Chief Justice Hennessey, an annual award established by the American Bar Association after Flaschner's death is given each year to the judge "who best exemplifies the ability and confidence of Frank Flaschner." Hennessey added, "It is one of the most prestigious awards in the whole country."

Hennessey congratulated the artist, Mel Robbins, on his work. "You caught the human side, the 'twinkle,' of this great judge," he said.

Samuel E. Zoll, chief justice of the state's district courts, commented that it seemed like days since Flaschner's untimely death, instead of years. Calling Flaschner "vibrant and penetrating," Zoll said, "He made you feel proud to be a judge."

Zoll added that Flaschner's main "personal contribution" might be found in increased respect for the laws of the commonwealth. "To respect the law, you must first make the law respectable," he said. Frank Flaschner, he added, "brought illumination to everything in his charge ... during much too short a lifetime."

Mayor Theodore Mann mentioned that both he and Flaschner had come out of the same neighborhood in Dorchester.

"Frank was an early colleague, a neighbor and a lifelong friend," Mann said. "His spirit still lives on as evidenced by this gathering and the meaningful expressions heard here today."

President Emeritus of the Board of Aldermen Wendell Bauckman, who was president of the board while Flaschner was vice-president, call the late judge "one of the nicest human beings I've ever known."

In Robbins' portrait of Flaschner, the judge looks distinguished, solemn, even grave in his judicial robes. Only the slightest upward curl at the sides of his mouth and a slightly raised eyebrow suggest the humor, or "twinkle," alluded to by his friends.

Hung on the courtroom wall only minutes after the official ceremony was over, Flaschner's portrait will oversee proceedings, look over the shoulders of Judge Monte G. Basbas and decades of judges to come and keep a close eye on the modern judicial system that is, in a large part, Frank Flaschner's legacy.

Mann rejects NTA's appeal

NEWTON — A local taxpayer group's demand that the city give back $4.8 million of its tax revenues is not consistent with good fiscal management, according to Mayor Theodore D. Mann.

"I find that not in keeping with a sound business approach I would expect of a taxpayer's group," said Mann. "I would hope they'd reconsider their approach."

Earlier last week, members of the Newton Taxpayers Association (NTA) urged the Board of Aldermen to reduce fiscal 1987 property taxes by 6 percent. This figures out to around a $150 rebate per household, according to the NTA.

The city's $8 million surplus last year justifies a tax return, the NTA said. Member Sam Robbins argued governments should not be in the business of producing surpluses.

Executive Director Joseph Alexander led the group with the rallying cry, "Give it back, Ted."

Aldermen passed a compromise resolution adivsing Mann to return $1 million - or a little more than $30 per household.

Some members of the NTA were dissatisfied with that decision and said they would try to bring their proposition to the ballot so the voters could decide.

Mann commended the group for showing enough interest to speak out on taxes, but he said their proposal would so harm city programs and services that it could backfire.

Mock trial championship

Eighth graders almost won high school meet

By Maureen Azzato
Staff Writer

NEWTONVILLE - The Day Junior High School mock trial team lost the first state high school championship competition by a mere point last week, and although tears of disappointment were shed, the team said, "We intend to win next year."

The team was the underdog of the competition being the only junior high team in the competition. If that was not enough, four of their first string members could not compete in the finals because they were on a school trip to Canada.

"Although their hearts were broken, they have a lot to be proud of," coach Marjorie A. Montgomery said. "Four of our second string rookies went in never having competed in a trial before. They went all the way."

The most torturous part of the competition was losing by only one point, she said. "The team said it would have been easier and less painful if they had lost by ten points."

The team was named the Middlesex County high school champions May 29. There are six teams in each county, and one by one, the junior high school team beat the other county teams but they were defeated by Norwell High School in the last round of the state competition.

"The judge told us that most of the teams were better prepared for the mock trial than most lawyers are going into court for real cases," Montgomery said.

For six weeks prior to the competition, the team worked with Parker, Coulter, Daley & White lawyer F. Jay Flynn. He helped the team with cross examination and case presentation tactics.

"He (Flynn) met with the kids at their homes and at his office once a week and worked with the kids on the trial process," Montgomery said. "He showed them how to place themselves in the courtroom to get the most effective results. I think the kids got a real kick out of experiencing a real lawyer's life and work."

The ten members of the team are Rebecca Arons, Terry Johnson, Claire Streibert, Jessica Simon, Jennifer Smith, Gretchen Young, Lisa Olstein, Joshua Hamermesh, Benjamin Pappas and Peter Liang.

During the county competition, the Wayland High School team reportedly snickered and sneered at the young eighth graders they were to compete against, Montgomery said.

"Needless to say the team's Irish was up when they heard the other kids laughing at them and they ended up whomping Wayland," she said. "They were so upset and embarrassed at having lost to 13-year-olds."

While this is the first state mock trial competition, the team has performed trials for the New York and Massachusetts bar associations this year.

Cambodian girl's poetry yields harvest of hope future for me," she says. Luong, deprived of education and illiterate in her two native languages, has accomplished, in four short years, what takes the average student ten. In her fourth year of high school, she has learned English and is taking biology, algebra and geometry. She devotes a majority of her free time to studying and is expected to graduate in 1987. A humble Luong seems somewhat oblivious to her achievements. "I'm not proud yet. I'll be proud of myself the day I get the diploma in my hand," she says.

Luong purges herself of the searing memories by writing poetry. According to David Youngblood, Newton South English Department chairman, Luong's poetry "springs out of powerful feelings she has. She doesn't just sit down and write poetry every day. When these feelings arise, it's a way for her to get rid of the pain."

The second poem she ever wrote described the experience of being betrayed by the 'shark' - the Cambodian family who stole her belongings. The 'dolphin' she says describes her new family in Newton and her future in America:

The first time
you saw the shark
you thought it was your friend, but you couldn't see his teeth.
When you saw the dolphin swim offshore
you thought it was your enemy, because you saw his fin.

Luong is also writing an autobiography entitled "Out of the Dark - Hard to Breath." "With a Communist government there is no color. Everything is black and everyone has to wear black," she says. "You have feet, but you can't walk. What little food there is you can't have. You have a mouth, but you can't talk. Where there is no freedom, you cannot breath."

The government disguised itself as sheep and betrayed their people, she says. Soldiers would come to people's homes and if someone was taken away they knew they were doomed, she says. They would never come back home.

She used to submerge the past hoping to forget it. She now speaks of the past in candid details. While tears well up in her eyes as she remembers, Luong is determined not to forget her roots and the events that brought her to this country.

"Before, I tried to forget about it, but it wasn't a good idea," she says. "Although I want to forget the sadness, I can't forget where I came from. I can't forget my mother and what she did for my life."

Her mother is a strong presence in her life. Not merely a spiritual presence. It's almost as though she feels her mother is physically with her all the time.

"I want my mom to be proud of me and what I have done," she says. "Coming to America is a dream come true. I know she is here with me."

She attributes much of her academic success to the Newton couple she lives with, whom she refers to as her "brother and sister." Because the couple is childless, Luong says they can spend a lot of time helping her.

"They give me my own bedroom to sleep, they feed me and make me feel welcome," she says. "They don't want anything from me."

For her first two years in America she lived unhappily with a family in Concord and went to the local public high school. Luong says there were many misunderstandings between her and the Concord family that led her to leave and come to Newton.

"It was very difficult because I didn't understand anything they would tell me to do," she says. "I would try to read what they were telling me by their actions. It was so frustrating to be misunderstood."

Despite her initial unrest in this country, Luong seems to have found some inner peace. She hopes to go to college and major in computer science, but she says now that is only a "dream." But, as Youngblood and her new family can attest, it was also only a dream for her to live and succeed in America.

"My life now is still hard, but I find it easier now to talk with people. I'm not as afraid," she says. "I'm not in a cage anymore."

Aldermen approve $107 million budget

NEWTON - Six weeks of painstaking budget deliberations ended last week as aldermen approved a $107 million fiscal 1987 budget. The final figure represents a $4 million, or 4 percent, increase over last year's budget.

Most of that increase was outside the control of either Mayor Theodore D. Mann or aldermen. Previously negotiated employee salary increases and hikes in state sewer/water charges account for around $2.8 million of the total.

Including state and county assessments and money set aside to cover tax abatements, the city expects to spend $115 million next year.

The final figure varies only slightly from the budget proposed by Mann in his March 31 address to aldermen.

Aldermen cut around $300,000 from the mayor's proposal, but most of that amount could be restored if necessary.

The board cut $250,000 in the city's Medicare account, but only because this is the first year municipalities have to fund the health insurance program and no one knows how much it will cost.

If the city needs more than the approximately $580,000 aldermen approved, it can come back to the board for a budget transfer.

The major controversy in this year's budget session - the school budget - remains unresolved.

Earlier last week, the board advised the mayor to add between $600,000 and $800,000 to the school budget to close the $1.2 million gap between what he has recommended and what the School Department wants.

Mann has said he will not make a final decision on the school budget until the state decides on how much local aid it will grant Newton.

He is also waiting for the School Committee to present him with a new proposal.

Ballot item could mean end for county

A Nov. 4 ballot question asking area voters to create a county charter commission could set the stage for the sweeping revision or abolition of Middlesex County government.

Residents in Newton, Waltham, Watertown and Weston will be among those asked whether to create the commission and to elect district representatives who would study the county's form of government.

"They will have the power to recommend changes in Middlesex County government," said Bill Schmidt, one of three county commissioners. "The extent of those changes depends on who gets elected."

If voters endorse the concept, the charter commission will consist of 15 district representatives, the three county commissioners and Newton Mayor Theodore D. Mann in his role as chairman of the Middlesex County Advisory Board. The commission will meet for a year and a half and issue its findings on June 1, 1988 to county and state officials.

Mann, long one of the county's most vocal detractors, said he will push for the abolition of the administrative system.

"I think the county system, as we know it, has outlived its usefulness. It's a duplication of services, a burden on the property tax and an invisible layer of government," he said.

"Once the jails have been taken over, there will virtually be nothing left of county government. I will propose other forms of regionalization for those communities that find they have a commonality of interest," he added.

19 teachers to get intent-to-dismiss note

NEWTON - The School Committee has voted to send 19 tenured teachers notification of intent to dismiss despite impassioned pleas from about 25 students, parents and teachers to remove three teachers from the RIF (reduction in force) list.

Member Robert Ricles asked the committee to vote separately to remove Newton North English Specialist Margaret Flaherty's name from the list, but his motion was defeated 5-3. Sally Rizzo and Sydra Schnipper joined Ricles in support for Flaherty.

The committee was also urged to remove two music teachers from the list - Gregory Livingston from Brown Junior High School and Gordon Duckel from Newton South.

Some students were moved to tears as they addressed the committee.

"Mr. Livingston has brought out qualities in me I never knew I had," Brown seventh grader Ana Crowley said. "I've grown to love and respect him. He treats me like a special person - not like just any old kid."

Karl Seeley, a Newton South graduate, said his college professor commended him on his music theory knowledge. Seeley said he attributes all his training to Duckel.

"When I told my professor where I got my training he was astounded I received it at a public school. We obviously have one of the best music programs in the country and it would be a disservice to dismiss such an asset to this city," he said.

One parent desribed Flaherty as a "pioneer" in her field.

No decision on hollow-point bullets

NEWTON — Aldermen Monday night failed to reach a decision on a request by Police Chief William Quinn to arm his Civil Disorder Unit (CDU) with .357 magnum hollow-point ammunition.

Members of the Public Safety and Transportation Committee listened to nearly three hours of expert testimony presented by those on both sides of the issue. A vote taken after the debate resulted in a three-three deadlock, technically sending a negative message to the Board of Aldermen.

Earlier this month, the board voted to separate the ammunition request from a package of requests for both the police and fire departments. Quinn is asking the board to allocate $3,750 for the purchase of 10,000 rounds of the ammunition. The separation was requested by several aldermen who said they wanted more information before making their decision.

Before the vote was taken, Quinn reiterated his promise to abide by the board's decision despite his City Charter powers allowing him to purchase the equipment of his choice.

Last Wednesday, aldermen also held up passage of a portion of the police department budget that would provide money for weapons and ammunition. The following night, Capt. Walter Drew sent a letter to the board explaining that the $6,000 line item had "nothing to do with" the purchase of hollow-point ammunition.

Quinn would not comment about the deadlocked vote after the meeting. The issue will face a board vote next Monday.

Man fined for heroin and syringes

CAMBRIDGE — A Newton man last week was given a suspended sentence and fined $1,000 after he pleaded guilty to indictments charging him with possession of heroin with intent to distribute and unlawful possession of hypodermic syringes.

Superior Court Judge Harry Elam imposed suspended sentences of two years and one year at the Billerica House of Correction in the case of Alexander Vargas, 36, of 540 Centre Street, a boarding house at Newton.

Judge Elam also ordered that Vargas continue to seek treatment for a drug problem.

The sentence was based on a joint recommendation by Assistant Middlesex County District Attorney Adrienne Lynch and defense lawyer Albert Hutton, Jr. Hutton told the judge that Vargas served in the U.S. Army during the Vietnam War when he became "exposed to heroin." Hutton said Vargas has no prior criminal record.

Lynch told the court Newton police had Vargas under surveillance and that, after observing Vargas engage in what appeared to be street drug transactions, police executed a search warrant on Jan 6, 1985 at his room where they found 19 packets of heroin in the refrigerator and 17 syringes elsewhere in the room.

The judge allowed Vargas one year to pay the fine.

Mann supports chief's anti-terrorist unit

NEWTON — Mayor Theodore D. Mann supports the Police Department's anti-terrorist squad, which has stirred controversy because of the request to arm it with 10,000 rounds of hollow point bullets.

Newton needs the Civil Disorder Unit (CDU) because the many heads of governments and foreign delegations who visit the city are potential terrorist targets, Mann said recently.

Some situations have occurred when the highly trained unit was necessary, Mann said.

Police Chief William Quinn wants to arm the 18-man CDU with the hollow point bullets.

"We've always had a unit dealing with riots," Mann said at his weekly press conference. "Given the opportunity for upsetting our generally tranquil environment, I'll go with the chief."

The unit handles hostage or terrorist situations. The hollow points, which explode on impact and have more killing power than regular bullets, are needed because of the dangerous situations the unit will face, CDU commander Frank Gorgone has said.

CDU officers must be able to stop an armed assailant with one shot, he has said.

The aldermanic Public Safety and Transportation Committee has made an issue of the bullets by separating them from other equipment, such as bulletproof vests, Quinn wants for the CDU. Some Public Safety members have argued regular bullets are powerful enough.

The mayor said he would rather be criticized for being "super cautious" in supporting the Quinn request than for not being ready to deal with a disaster.

The city must be prepared to protect visitors and residents who could be the target of a terrorist attack or taken hostage, the mayor said.

Newton has entertained delegations from such nations as Italy, Spain and Russia, said Mann. He cited Corazon and Benigno Aquino as examples of the many internationally-renowned figures who have lived in Newton.

The Aquinos took up residence in a Commonwealth Avenue home during their self-imposed exile from the Philippines. Relatives of the newly-elected Philippine president and her assassinated husband now live there.

DeNucci's campaign marked by confidence

By Ed Cafasso
Staff Writer

WEST NEWTON — The candidate rocked back and forth on his heels, his hands on his hips and a wide smile on his face.

The 12 hours of highway driving, speeches, questions, answers, handshaking and backslapping seemed only to have whetted his appetite for more.

Surrounded by friends at the grand opening of his headquarters in West Newton Monday night, Joe DeNucci had the look of a man about to score the biggest political victory of his life.

"Why did you decide to open your campaign headquarters here?" he was asked.

"This is where it all began," he replied, his already huge smile somehow becoming larger. "It's certainly not going to end here, not this year, that's for sure."

DeNucci's first official day in the ring did little to melt the snowballing confidence that seems to surround this campaign.

The announcement of his candidacy was carried by every media outlet from Martha's Vineyard to North Adams.

As he drove along Stevens Street on his way to a union local in Springfield, DeNucci was greeted by a block-long line of placard-waving supporters.

When he mounted the podium, nearly every elected official in the city and the county stood behind him.

"Some people say he's crazy for giving up a safe, secure state representative seat. He's run uncontested for how many years? But his history is doing things people says he has no business doing," said Anthony DeNucci, the candidate's younger brother.

DeNucci intends to do a little business in Springfield Civic Center on Saturday, when more than 4,800 delegates meet for the Democratic State Convention.

To get on the September primary ballot, he needs to be endorsed by at least 15 percent of the convention. The other contenders are Boston City Councillors Maura Hennigan and Charles Yancey, and Rep. Richard Moore, of Uxbridge.

Moore, however, appears to be hedging his bets, having taken out nomination papers for the state auditor's post and for re-election to the House.

DeNucci's strategy for victory is a straightforward one.

"In the ring, I never worried about my opponents. I was just concerned with me. I will prepare, work as hard as I can to get ready and everything else will take care of itself. That's my philosophy," he said.

All signals are green for the Duke

That phenomenon, the emergence of Michael Dukakis as a national candidate, continues apace. The Duke and his helpmate, Kitty, have to be giddy about all the attention. Tip O'Neill sees him as a prospective vice presidential front runner. But who can tell?

The peanut farmer from Georgia came out of obscurity to get to Pennsylvania Avenue's oval office. Another governor, best known as the "Gipper" during his long movie career, became the commander-in-chief. The Massachusetts head of state has certain advantages over both. He is better known across the country than Jimmy Carter at a comparable pre-election stage. As for Ron Reagan, the Dukakis successes in a number of innovative programs and the Bay State's prosperity are marketable products of considerable value.

He has been on a shuttle to Washington putting his wares on display. His employment and training program drew posies from the President, no less, back in February. Tax amnesty has been copied. That is REAP--meaning Revenue Enforcement and Protection, conceived by the Duke's fiscal wizards to cope with a looming deficit in 1983. He also made good use of the nice-sounding "revenue enhancement" program already put in place by predecessor Eddie King. That meant raising fees and all kinds of other state charges for swelling the general fund without raising taxes.

ABC and the Washington Post were quick to see the Dukakis potential. New York's Mario Cuomo is the governor most mentioned in the White House trial run sweepstakes, particularly because he is perhaps the most articulate of any of the incumbents. But a political analyst over the past weekend put Dukakis with three other Statehouse figures of note, Robb, who has bowed out in Virginia to clear his decks for nationwide involvement, White of Texas and Babbitt of Arizona. Cuomo got no mention.

Just maybe the country needs a Dukakis after all the Reagan charisma. Michael is low key, no orator, pedantic rather than flamboyant, given to crisp, no-nonsense reports of administrative initiatives. He has established a "Mr. Integrity" mystique those suspicious of political practitioners can admire. How much of an asset that is will be determined in the months of preprimary shadow boxing that is to take place.

On home grounds, it is all euphoria. He is considered a safe bet for reelection in November, unopposed in his own party. He will have Republican opposition more vocal than effective in terms of vote-getting, it would seem. Formidable state issues are at hand, one being the Seabrook N-plant startup decision, and another the state spending cap being pushed toward referendum.

It's a national focus, nevertheless, with 1986 as a launching pad. It is no surprise to find Gov. Dukakis as part of a Democratic Policy Commission of 100 leaders committed to recast party policy. How well he impresses loyalists who will be exerting convention delegate power has to be the crucial factor. On that score, the manner in which he captured total control of the Massachusaetts party organization has significance.

In other words, the signal lights are all green for our No. 1 public official at this stage of the game.

Fight growing government

By Paula Kay

We are faced today with making a decision which will affect our city and our country for decades to come. The decision is whether to continue along the road of collectivist redistribution of wealth and increasing government power or to find our way back to the main thoroughfare of enterprise, individualism, and freedom which has so successfully led us for two centuries.

1986 is another re-evaluation year for Newton. The drum beat has begun for sharply higher assessments; the mayor is predicting financial disaster, and the unused taxation ability under Propositon 2 1/2 is mentioned every time the budget is discussed. However, in light of the $9 million budget surplus for fiscal 1985 the Newton Taxpayers' Association is calling for a decrease in the tax rate to allow at least half of the surplus to be returned to the taxpayers. As it stands, the surplus will otherwise fund more municipal government. Municipal elected officials and employees will make decisions about how to spend the money in accord with their self interests: maintain their voter base and increase their personal and collective power.

Who supports the growth of government? Those who receive money, work, or position from the government support this expansion. However, these constituencies do not understand the long term cost to themselves, their families, and their descendants of these short term gains.

All the "free" things, "subsidized" things, "discount" things have costs. The difference is that the cost is not borne immediately by the user of the good or service but by, e.g., the producer, by other consumers, or by present and future taxpayers. Higher prices for less favored groups mean a fall in their living standard. Too low a profit for a producer will terminate that business. And higher taxes move incentive and resources away from wealth-producing activities resulting in the loss of employment opportunity, and less government revenue.

Secondarily, large government borrowing means that capital is attracted away from business investing by higher interest rates, thus retarding economic growth. All business then is burdened by higher interest charges than would otherwise prevail with these costs passed along to the consumer. Higher costs for products from interest rates, taxes, regulation, and government red tape make U.S. products less competitive on world markets.

Business moves abroad or shuts down. A greater amount of tax revenue goes to paying interest charges each year with future taxpayers inheriting the carrying charges and the debt. Jobs, opportunity, and money are taken for granted but these are evaporating as the economic climate becomes more hostile.

Most significantly however, government's involvement in the economy and society grows both to spend revenue and to justify the need for more spending. Vulnerable segments of the society are exploited albeit under the guise of 'caring' and bureaucrats become primary players in the economy.

No country on this planet has been as successful as the United States in achieving the greatest good for the greatest number by dedicating itself to "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness." The economic engine of this country was the ability to work hard and enjoy the fruits of one's labors. This was the land of opportunity. However, the spirit and the reality of the centrally governed welfare state are antithetical, nay, destructive of the principles that are the ingredients of our success.

However, it may be that the American voter will continue to embrace the socialist model. For him there is one, more ominous caveat. Presently we are the defender of the free world. Changes that undermine the economic strength of this country pose the direst of risks for not only ourselves but all Western civilization. We simply do not have the option of going the way of the European socialist states and living in the world as we know it now.

We have an opportunity presently, at the local level, to say "no" to more government and comparatively inefficient use of resources, and "yes" to personal initiative, economic vigor, and government for all the people–not just the captive constituencies.

There has been collected a surplus of taxes above and beyond what the approved 1985 municipal budget mandated. The cost of uncontrolled government growth to ourselves and our children will prove to be many times the dollars involved. It is time to find our way back to the American way. Make your decision today to rededicate this city and this country to the principles that have made us a beacon and a haven to the world. Then act to communicate this decision to our elected officials. Tell them that you agree with Thomas Jefferson: "Less government is better government."

Letters

They've come a long way

To the Editor:

Excerpt taken from "The First Hundred Years" ... A speech given at the centennial celebration of Newton's "Social Science Club" at Braeburn Country Club on April 31:

"By all accounts 1886 was a very busy year. Not only was Coca Cola invented and the Boston Symphony dedicated, but the Social Science Club of Newton was founded by a group of dedicated women who believed (according to the spidery handwriting of the minutes of that year) that ... if women had a say in matters of true importance–and in particular, alcoholism, political dishonesty and man's tendency to believe that war was the only way to solve international problems--then there would be a greater chance of peace and prosperity."

At that time, Women's Clubs were in their infancy and masculine disapproval hard to combat. It is hard to realize that some ladies literally had to creep out to meetings, unbeknownst to their husbands. But they were determined. They succeeded.

Their immediate aim was to improve their own minds through study and the writing of weekly "papers," but behind their literary efforts lay a deep commitment and a sense of responsibility towards helping others. From 1887 to 1908 the club ladies personally ran a "Vacation School in Nonantum" for over 500 children every summer, with classes ranging from sewing to gardening and cooking to carpentry. When the Newton school system finally took this enterprising venture over, the club began a scholarship fund designed to help a Newton girl go to college every year. In 1924 it was $200. In 1986 it is a $1,200 girl's scholarship at Newton North, the largest given by any group in the city.

This year, in their own centennial year, the membership voted to raise a minimum of $1,000 to be sent to the Newton Community Service Center, where so much is done for so many from the rocking horse to the rocking chair. By March 31, $1,100 had been received, and through an anonymous offer of a $450 matching grant, a further $900 will be sent to N.C.S.C. before June 1.

In an era where trauma and tragedy, disaster and plain sick news stare us in the face every day, this GOOD news of caring people doing good things is just what the founders of the Social Science Club would have wanted when they started the club one hundred years ago.

His 'act of faith' unheralded

To the editor:

The 'An Act of Faith' article that appeared in the Newton Graphic recently was somewhat erroneous and also lacked vital pertinent information.

My father, Joseph Roiter, was one of the founding fathers, a charter member and first president of the Agudas Achim Anshe Sfard Synagogue on Adams St., Newton, since its inception in 1913, and remained president until his passing in 1954.

A correction in the Newton Graphic to the above statement would truly be 'An Act of Faith' to him and his family.

Thanking you.

Minimal care facility needed

To the editor:

This letter is to add my voice to the many who protest that elderly people are being sent home from the hospital before they are medically and/or psychologically ready to go home, regardless of whether someone is in the home able to care for them.

Recently my husband collapsed and had to be taken by ambulance to the local hospital. After several hours in emergency he seemed to be recovering and was told to go home, even though no definite cause for his collapse was diagnosed at that time.

After the experience of thinking that he was dying, picking him up off the floor, waiting several hours and having no reassurance from the hospital staff, I was told to take him home. I was fearful, exhausted and near hysteria — in no condition to care for my sick husband. "The doctor said he will see you next Tuesday."

When I protested, we were told, "Under the new rules...Hospital cost containment...Not for patient covenience...Not just for observation...If he collapses again, bring him back again...Money... Cost containment...Rules...Money..."

This writer respectfully suggests that minimum care beds at minimal cost be made available to those patients who need temporary observation or temporary care until adequate home or other care can be arranged. Social departments of the hospital could set some time limits and could assure that such beds are used judiciously. These beds could be entirely separated from the acute care hospital, while still being under the hospital umbrella.

Patients and their families would be spared much stress and anxiety. This could be financed through existing insurance or Medicare or Medicaid. Cost containment must not crowd out humanitarian consideration.

'Outstanding counselor' cited

Open letter to Dr. Strand:

It is with pleasure that I write to inform you that your college counselor Dr. Margaret Addis, has been selected by the collegiate members of the New England Association of College Admissions Counselors as an Outstanding Counselor for 1985-1986.

Three years ago NEACAC established a Committee to Improve School/College Relations. Our first project has been to establish a means by which high school counselors can receive some annual recognition for the tedious and often all-too-thankless work. After receiving nominations from nearly one hundred college members, we have selected as award winners one public school counselor and one independent school counselor from each of the six New England states. These counselors deserve recognition for the following qualities: integrity, efficiency, thoroughness, patience, sensitivity, sense of humor.

May I congratulate you and your college counselor on the fine job you are doing in helping young people make the transition from secondary education to higher education as smoothly and painlessly as possible.

But how about Chernobyl?

To the editor:

Nuclear power is alive and well! On March 18, the Nuclear regulatory commission issued the 100th generating permit for a nuclear electric generating plant to Cleveland Electric for its Perry unit one plant. Already the U.S. generates nearly 15 percent of its electricity from the peaceful atom, soon it will be over 20 percent. About 15 percent of the free world's electricity comes from nuclear energy–in France over 65 percent.

The age of water power is in the past, the age of fossil fuels is passing, and the age of renewables may never come–although, of course, solar, wind, geothermal, etc., will be a small but useful supplement to the atom.

The intelligence and creativity granted to mankind by our Creator has been put to good use to assist nature in supporting our fellows in health and comfort through electricity, while reducing a dependence on diminishing fossil fuels. The productivity of an electricity-based society will provide the financial means to take care of nature, while helping nature serve people's needs.

Waldheim's shadowy past

Heroism expected of our leaders

By Barbara Harrison

By a hair's breadth, Kurt Waldheim lost the majority of votes needed to win Austria's presidency, and he now faces a June 8 runoff against Socialist candidate Kurt Steyrer.

At this critical juncture in the unfolding of Waldheim's destiny, his supporters would say, as he himself says, that the wretchedness of war etched itself into his conscience; thus his parfUkYary-General of the United Nations, and his bid for the presidency of Austria are a result of fierce determination to prevent such atrocities from happening again.

But Waldheim's story cannot be so generously set aside. Allegations that he was a Nazi war criminal prompt myriad questions and reveal staggering ironies and complexities.

This is only the beginning of a journey of conscience that will catapult the Austrian people into the realm of self-examination, for Kurt Waldheim reminds them of a past most would choose to forget. But it is not only the Austrian people who must make this arduous journey in search of truth. People everywhere concerned about human dignity and human promise, must confront the questions raised in the Waldheim affair.

Within war, there are codes of conduct and acceptable parameters of behavior. How far did Waldheim sidestep these parameters? How accountable is he for atrocities committed against Jews and non-Jews in Greece and Yugoclavia? Why, if, in his words, he was simply a decent man doing his duty as a decent soldier, has he so vehemently denied the Balkan phase of his military service?

If, in 1948, the seventeen-member United Nations War Crime Commission gave him an "A" listing, meaning he should be tried as a war criminal, why was he not extradited by the Yugoslavs along with his commanding officer, General Alexander Loehr, who was tried for war crimes and executed in 1947 as a war criminal?

How is it that the issues raised today were not raised in 1971 when he was seeking the United Nations position? Would Waldheim have been elected as Secretary-General if the information now available had been known? Who, then, is Kurt Waldheim?

After repeated denials, in an interview with the Belgrade daily newspaper Vercernje Novosti, Waldheim finally admitted that in 1942 he was in the Kozara Mountains during the Kozara Operation, a brutal massacre in which the Germans in a vigorous antipartisan drive killed thousands of civilians or sent them to concentration camps. In answer to questions about earlier disclaimers that he had taken part in Yugoslav military maneuvers, he is quoted as saying, "Who can remember everything from the war period?"

In response to the accusation that he was in Greece during the year that thousands of Greek Jews were deported to Auschwitz, and thousands of non-Jewish resistance fighters suffered mercilessly, he said he was merely serving as an interpreter. "I never had anything to do with such cruelties. I was in the hills doing my work, rarely going to Salonikka so I never knew."

Of course, it is impossible for him not to have known. Leon Benmayor, leader of Salonika's small group of Holocaust survivors, states, "How can Waldheim say that he came to a city where maybe one-quarter of the population wore the yellow star and didn't notice they all disappeared. It would have been better for him to say, 'Yes, I was there, I know, but I could do nothing.'"

Waldheim also has acknowledged, after many repudiations, that he was enrolled in a Nazi youth group. As a member of a Nazi student union in 1938, while studying at the Vienna Consular Academy, and as a member of the Brownshirts, the paramilitary organization also own as the S.A., he would have been subjected to unrelenting propaganda and indoctrination. He would have sung the Nazi anthem with its horrific lines, "When Jewish blood spurts from the knife/Then things will go twice as well." And he would have been well-acquainted with Adolf Hitler's mandate to young people, "Youth must be indifferent to pain. There must be no weakness or tenderness in it. I want to see once more in its eyes the gleam of pride and independence of the beast of prey.'

By far the most charitable image rising from the cauldron of growing speculation is that of a just man picked up by the scruff of his neck and thrown into an unwanted war. By far the most piteable spectre is that of a human being acting under orders, with little feeling or thought, ignorant of the issues in which he is involved, and totally oblivious to any call to the ethical. Brainwashed by a cruel state, and conditioned out of any semblance of his former self, he becomes a hollow man. Love disappears from his heart, and like one of George Orwell's barely recognizeable characters in his book, 1984, he has "no dignity of emotion, or deep or complex sorrows." The memory of what it is like to be able to put oneself in someone else's shoes, becomes dimmer and dimmer, and the call to a higher good fades from the human mind.

Waldheim's inability, by only a single hair, to capture a clearcut majority in the May 4 elections is a major victory for truth; for time, will be truth's ally. The Waldheim story bears scrutiny; it is compelling for many reasons, not the least of which is the puzzling and contradictory images it conjures. On the one hand, we have the image of a soldier of war in the Balkans, allegedly translating unspeakable orders; on the other hand, we have the image of a soldier of peace in New York negotiating settlements and feeding the world's poor. The juxtaposition of these two contrary symbols stares at us like William Blake's two contrasting states of the human soul.

As human beings, to a certain degree, we are all imitative creatures and we are all vulnerable to the social mythologies or our times, and we must ask of our leaders no less than we would ask of ourselves. Yes, we have the capacity to be plummeted to the depths and to be no more than ignoble spirits in an ignoble world, but we also have the capacity for heroism.

In May 1941, shortly after the Nazis entered Athens and raised the swastika on the Acropolis, two young students, no older than Kurt Waldheim when Austria was forcibly annexed by Germany, climbed the steep hill leading to the Parthenon in the deep of night and tore down the swastika in a courageous and memorable act of resistance. We would all want to have the capacity to perform such acts of heroism. Certainly we should expect it of our leaders.

GOP hurdles plentiful

By William G. Robinson

Candidates for statewide office in Massachusetts are up against many hurdles. One of these, especially difficult for Republican candidates, is getting signatures for nomination papers.

Depending on the office, a candidate must have a certain number of certified signatures to have his or her name appear on the ballot. Most statewide offices require 10,000 certified signatures while others require 5,000. No real reason is apparent for the different requirements. For Republican candidates, the signatures must be from either registered Republican or Independents and for Democrats, only registered Democrats or Independents may sign the nomination papers.

Republicans have had an especially difficult time meeting this requirement in Massachusetts.

One obvious reason is that Republicans make up only 13 percent of the registered voters in this state. While this percentage continues to grow, it is still admittedly low.

Another reason is that many voters are simply unaware of what they are signing when it comes to nomination papers. There is a common misconception that by signing nomination papers, the person is committing support for that candidate. In fact, a signature only helps to put a candidate's name on the ballot. The voting booth is where the vote is cast.

Obviously, there must be some reseasonable signature requirement to ensure that only serious candidates names appear on the ballot. Some reduction in the number of signatures required would be appropriate, however. The legislature would be wise to consider the prevailing circumstances and change the the requirement.

Volunteers who worked very hard recently to collect signatures for their respective candidates deserve congratulations. Whether they did this for Republicans or Democrats, these people participated in the Democratic process and ensured that the voters of Massachusetts have a chance to consider voting for these candidates in the election.

(William G. Robinson is House Republican Leader)

Jewels & Gems
BY CAROL
THE GOLD LADY
EMERALD SPLENDOR
The lure of the emerald has always been its exciting green hue. Even uncut, unpolished crystals are immediately recognized as something special. Indeed, when evaluating emeralds, color is the most important quality factor. The most popular cut for emeralds is a rectangular step cut. It is so widely applied to emeralds that it is called the "emerald cut." It is preferred because it shows the fine color to best advantage. Emeralds are used in a wide range of jewelry styles, from dainty pinky rings to the most extravagant emerald and diamond necklaces. Emeralds are also popular as center stones in rings, earrings and pendants, either encircled or offset by diamonds. Small emeralds are often combined with diamonds in cluster rings or set into anniversary rings.
Precious stones are "precious" because of their scarcity and delicate tendencies. Therefore when you find a jeweler who displays a fine selection of all stones in a variety of pieces you know that jewler knows his gems and how they should be worn. This is what you'll find at CAROL THE GOLD LADY." We have a knowledgeable staff who can custom design pieces and we repair your jewelry too. Stop in to 109 Dalby St., Newton. Tues., Wed., Sat. 10-6; Thurs. & Fri. til 9. Tel. 332-5935. Most major credit cards accepted.

City: inaccuracies in DA's complaints of the governmental body."

The DA's decision said the committee has made a "continuing practice" of violating the OML.

"Based on the information the office has obtained, I conclude that the executive session minutes maintained by the committee do not comply with the requirements of the Open Meeting Law ... in several respects.

"Our investigation has also revealed the following additional violations of the OML: some executive sessions appear to been held for improper purposes; the committee's open session minutes are deficient insofar as they pertain to the convening of executive sessions; and executive session minutes are being improperly withheld from the public," Harshbarger wrote.

Funk said there could have been "less of a misunderstanding" had the district attorney's office made an effort to contact him before going to "the extreme."

The School Committee did not improperly hold executive sessions, he said. According to the minutes, the committee described the reasons for going into executive session with "language that was too loose" and could be interpreted the wrong way, Funk said.

"If they had checked with us first we would have explained the situation to them," he said. "The problem is not the reasons for holding executive sessions, but the way the reasons were described by the committee in the minutes."

Executive sessions are called to discuss "pending or threatened" litigation, but cannot be held for "possible" litigation, he said.

"The committee members often used the word 'possible' when in fact they were in their right to call it 'pending,'" he said. "They didn't go as far as they should have in their language."

There has also never been a policy of not releasing the minutes of executive sessions to the public, he added.

"Nobody recalls anyone coming in and ever asking to see them. No one has ever been turned down," Funk said.

The technical areas of noncompliance, such as maintaining more specific records, as cited in the decision, were "well taken" and the committee "will improve on them," he said.

Funk said the next step is for him to draft a formal set of guidlines and changed record-keeping procedures for the committee to follow.

a letter from the governor, Coletti said.

"By joining together in these activities," Dukakis wrote of divestment, "we are able to say that a society which separates its people and treats them in vastly different ways on the basis of the color of their skin will not be helped economically or otherwise by the civilized nations of the world."

Jefferson is seeking the petition because the Retirement Board has decided any divestment decision should be left to a vote of the pensions fund's beneficiaries, the city's 3,000 present and retired employees.

Board members pointed out that switching investments from American companies that do business in South Africa to those that do not is financially risky.

Cohen disputed the fear that divestment is a fiscal hazard. Studies show that divested portfolios are only 8 to 9 percent less stable than those which retain South African-related investments, he said.

"You can have financial soundness and what I believe is a moral decision," said Cohen, D-Newton.

Backman, D-Newton/Brookline, noted the two counties he represents - Middlesex and Norfolk counties - have divested, as have the communities of Boston and Brookline.

Former state Rep. Mel King and he wrote the bill which forced the state to divest its pension fund of South African-related investments several years ago, Backman said. It was the only bill to survive a veto by then Gov. Edward King, he said.

Finance members needed little or no convincing on Jefferson's proposal.

Only Alderman Wendell Bauckman raised any objection. He told the audience he wanted to consult with the Retirement Board before voting the issue. Bauckman said he would vote for divestment when it comes to the full board.

"You've got to hear both sides of the story," he said, adding that some of the board's members are long-time friends whose views he respects. "Please give me this consideration without condemnation."

Aldermen Richard McGrath said the issue is so clear cut he does not need to hear the Retirement Board's views. Coletti said he made every effort to have a member present at Monday night's meeting.

"I'm not even interested in listening to more discussion because the thought of this is so distasteful," said McGrath. "There's nothing I can imagine that would temper my position."

Alderman Richard Bullwinkle asked Cohen and Backman why the Legislature did not settle the issue years ago by forcing the commonwealth's 351 cities and towns to divest along with the state.

"We're seeing a grass roots movement because those in charge have not been doing the job," Bullwinkle said.

Cohen said the Legislature probably did not feel it was appropriate to tell cities and towns how to conduct their business.

"They pass laws all the time telling us what to do," Bullwinkle later said in response. "What about the seatbelt law?"

Alderman Verne Vance, who is chairman of the Legislation & Rules Committee, said he is concerned about the time element of the petition. His committee will be responsible for drafting its wording.

Newton's divestment should "exist only so long as the government of South Africa continues with its obnoxious policy," he suggested.

After the meeting, Jefferson said he was encouraged by the Finance vote. "Newton is a government with a social and political conscience," he said. "Hopefully, that's the way the board will think."

Classical opera from a brown bag

And the group is further expanding its repertoire with a performance on the history of Black opera and instrumental music from the 1700s to the present. Currently being researched by two educators from a Roxbury school, the show will be performed by an integrated cast, says Stone.

"I have schools that want this show more than any other," she says. "There's a void in education concerning great composers who were black."

Stone's opera company "started very slowly," she recalls. The group began by performing "Hansel and Gretel" in libraries. Then, "little by little, the PTAs heard about us."

However, it was not until the group hooked up with the Cultural Education Collaborative — a state and national endowment, which mails a booklet full of educationally-oriented programs to public schools across the state — that Brown Bag truly achieved its fame.

"We've performed in First Night and we've received tremendous attention from the media," she says.

Indeed, last Thursday night, a newscast on Channel 2 featured a lengthy story about Brown Bag Opera and its performance of "La Traviata." Further, Stone has a large collection of articles written about her company, which are neatly copied and filed in a plastic organizer on her office wall at home.

How has Brown Bag Opera achieved such popularity? One reason may be that it "presents opera in a way people can understand," explains Stone.

"At a human level," she says, "(opera) is something that's rich and can lift the soul. The funny thing is, I think people believe it when I sing, and that's what they relate to."

But Stone relates to her audience in other ways besides singing. For instance, the group performs operas in English and, to further make the art a part of their lives, she performs while walking through the audience.

"You reached our children through all their senses," a Concord school educator comments in a letter. "Your interaction with the audience made them part of the program, part of the art."

Another technique used to make opera understandable to students is by making them shorter in duration than the real thing, so as "not to lose their attention," Stone explains.

Stone, who studied acting and music at BU and music at Oberlin and New England Conservatories, is also a certified teacher.

Prior to each performance, the children's opera company sends music and classroom teachers a study guide on the opera Brown Bag will perform. The guide relates the opera to the various subjects studied in school, including art, English, history, foreign languages, and geography.

Among other subjects, the "La Traviata" study guide discusses the health issues at the time the opera was originally performed. As one of the characters in "La Traviata" had tuberculosis, the study guide explains that the disease was also known as Consumption and as "the great killer."

Later, the guide discusses the discovery of streptomycin in 1951, which "helps control the contagious disease." It says that many opera composers wrote parts requiring their heroines "to expire of TB," leading some to jokingly refer to the ailment as "soprano's disease."

While many operatic stars died — on stage — of TB back then, today the singers hardly ever get the chance.

Stone says she never aspired to be a great opera singer because "You starve a lot.

"Opera stars in Boston are suffering, they're in debt. It's hard to get on stage."

That's why she started Brown Bag Opera. Says Stone, "We really want people to enjoy good music." That way, they will demand to hear it more often, and on stage.

Patience, precision pay off for city and budget

By Les Orsini
Staff Writer

NEWTON - The work is over 700 pages long, has a cast of more than 1,500 characters and took some 14 months to create.

No, it is not a Russian novel, though the city's 1987 budget is as difficult to understand as one of Leo Tolstoy's works - untranslated. Even the city official most responsible for the document claims probably only five people comprehend it.

And not all of them are top city officials.

There is, for example, Rosemarie Magnani, a 23-year old Boston University graduate hired last August as an auditor for the comptroller's office.

She had to compile tens of thousands of expense figures from the city's 31 departments - including the yearly and weekly salaries, sick leave and vacation pay for each of Newton's more than 1,500 full and part-time employees.

Like a smoke detector, she had to sound the alarm at the very whiff of an error. She noticed, for example, that some departments forgot to include a 1 percent bonus the city agreed to give some employee unions. This amounted to a $56,000 error.

The task virtually devastated her winter, consuming nights and weekends as the West Roxbury resident lugged the six-pound budget book home to proofread it with her mother. Everything had to be ready for Mayor Theodore D. Mann's March 31 budget address.

"I knew I had to make the deadline," says Magnani. "Sometimes it was overwhelming."

Magnani says she did not mind the intrusion into her personal time - not until it was over, that is. "When I thought the whole skiing season had gone by, it sure did bother me," she says.

What kept her going was a staunch self-discipline, a love of accuracy that can only be found in numbers and a vision of what those figures really mean.

"I'm used to homework," she says. "In college, I was premed for two years. When I switched to finance, I just kept with it. I like to see things done properly."

She points to the $40,000 for the city physician, whose job is to keep watch on the health of municipal employees. "I see all the services attached," says Magnani. "It's a service that the department is doing for the city. It's helping people."

What also kept her going was working alongside Ann Marie Daley, a city accountant who used to put together the budget before the position of chief budget analyst was created more than 10 years ago.

Daley, who guided Magnani through each step, says budget work isn't for everyone, but, for the right kind of mind, there is a special satisfaction.

"You have to like figures," says Daley, a city employee for the last 30 years. "It's like writing. You have to like things coming together ... To me, numbers are poetry. It kind of rhymes."

Being a Newton resident also helps, Daley says. As the city's surplus grows, she takes comfort in knowing Newton's financial picture is sound.

"If the city has a large surplus, it helps them out," she says. "Some of the money belongs to me. It's a great city."

Stephen Cirillo, the city's chief budget officer, acknowledges both the complexity of the budget book and the important role played by the two women.

Magnani and Daley do not make decisions on how much money will be spent and what services will be offered, but "they're intricately important because they have to do the grind work," he says.

It also helps to have a little imagination, says Daley. Watching the numbers grow to the $100 million range is something like the thrill of winning at Monopoly, she says. The money isn't real - or in the case of the budget, it doesn't belong to her - but it is nevertheless satisfying to be sitting on a large pile.

"You feel good," she says. "It's like winning the lottery. It is a fantasy because it's not your money."

Newton's book is especially complicated because it is so precise, he says. The budget details even the smallest expense, such as a $50 cleaning allowance for the youth services portion of the city's Human Services Department.

"It focuses on pens and pencils, what is expended, rather than what are the goals," he says of the Newton budget.

Because of it's emphasis on numbers over program explanation, only a handful of city employees - perhaps five - understand the book, he said.

For Cirillo, the budget is a never-ending cycle because it takes 14 months to create a single year's expense plan. For the two women, most of this year's budget work came to an end last Thursday when aldermen voted to accept the 1987 document.

Their vote followed six weeks of evening budget hearings, each of which was attended by Magnani and Daley or Comptroller Lawrence Marino after the day's work.

Their job was to offer explanations and to note any errors or cuts made by the board. They gained an appreciation for board members, who would often stay well past midnight debating programs and figures.

"I think it's a tough job," said Magnani. "They have to come here after work. It's a grind."

"You wonder how they do it," said Daley. "That's dedication."

Prepare for the parents

Large commencements this weekend

By Ed Cafasso
Staff Writer

Thousands of smiling parents will converge on the area's universities and colleges over the next two weeks to see their sons and daughters graduate.

Most of the large-scale commencement ceremonies will take place this weekend, with outdoor events planned at Boston College, Pine Manor College and Lasell Junior College.

The following list, arranged chronologically, highlights some of the area's upcoming commencement activities.

Lasell Junior College

Approximately 185 seniors will graduate during Lasell's commencement ceremonies scheduled for 11 a.m. Sunday on the college's athletic field in Auburndale.

Joyce B. Gregorian, vice president of Arthur T. Gregorian. Inc., will deliver the main commencement address.

In addition to helping the run the area's most well-known Oriental rug dealership, Gregorian is the author of three novels and the owner of Upland Fram in Holliston, where she breeds Arabian horses.

Pine Manor College

More than 220 degrees will be awarded during Pine Manor's 75th commencement ceremonies scheduled to begin at noon Sunday on the lawn near the campus' adminstrative buildings.

Prior to graduation activities, the college will dedicate its recently completed Annenberg Library and Communications Center.

Several members of the Annenberg family will attend the 11 a.m. dedication, including Walter H. Annenberg, former ambassador to the Court of St. James in London, Leonore Annenberg, former chief of protocol of the United States, and Wallis Annenberg, a trustee and almuna of Pine Manor.

Sharon Percy Rockefeller, a member of the board of directors of the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, will deliver the school's commencement address.

Rockefeller is the daughter of former U.S. Sen. Charles H. Percy and the wife of U.S. Sen. John D. Rockefeller IV, of West Virginia.

Judy Woodruff, chief Washington correspondent for "The MacNeil/Lehrer Newshour" and anchor of the PBS documentary series "Frontline," will receive an honorary degree.

Boston College

Close to 2,500 degrees will be awarded during BC's 110th commencement ceremonies, scheduled for 10 a.m. Monday at Almuni Stadium.

Jaime Cardinal Sin, the archbishop of Manilla, will be the commencement speaker and one of six honorary degree recipients.

Guido Calabresi, dean of Yale University Law School, Jacques D'Amboise, founder of the National Dance Institute, Annie Dillard, Pulitzer prize-winning author, singer/songwriter Richie and Francis C. Rooney Jr., chairman of the Melville Corporation, will also receive honorary degrees.

Mt. Ida College

More than 300 students will receive degrees from Mt. Ida during commencement ceremonies scheduled for 11 a.m. on Saturday, May 24 near the Shaw-Hall Fountain.

U.S. Navy Admiral Grace Hopper, a 78-year-old computer whiz stationed in Washington, D.C., will deliver the school's commencement address.

Hopper, a special advisor to the National Data Automation Command, was the third person to program the world's first computer "Mach 1" and the co-developer of "COBOL," a breakthrough computer program.

Aquinas Jr. College

Approximately 120 women will graduate from Aquinas during commencement ceremonies scheduled for 6:30 p.m. on Thursday, May 29 on the lawn along Walnut Park.

Susan M. Lanagan, a 1981 graduate of Aquinas, will deliver an address designed to highlight the school's 25th anniversary.

Lanagan, who is currently completing studies in business administration at Suffolk University, is the chief planner of the school's anniversary celebration.

Post Office needs location

NEWTON — The U.S. Postal Service is continuing its search to locate a new 2,000-square-foot post office in Newton.

The search began several years ago when it was determined that the present 900-square-feet of space was inadequate to meet the Postal Service's future needs.

Since then, the Postal Service has remained at its present location on short-term lease arrangements. Recently, the lease was extended until April 1987.

"The only reason why we have been able to continue postal operations at the present site is because of the superb coopc tion of the lessor," said Cher. Hamilton Terrell, the Postal Sei vice's project manager for the Newton relocation.

"We need more space to conduct our postal business and to improve postal customer needs, such as parking, counter space, and lock boxes; in addition to improving postal employee working conditions," said Terrell.

Leasing inquiries should be directed to Cheryl Hamilton Terrell, 860-4449.

Diet Pill System Sweeping U.S.
Super Dream Pill
Guaranteed Weight Loss
Eat Your Favorite Foods
SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH — According to the latest review of customers' files, here's what some people are saying about the remarkable Dream Pill System for guaranteed weight loss:
"I lost 25 lbs. with a 30 day supply."
Mrs. J.N.S., Ft. Payne, Alabama
"Losing 1 lb. per day."
Mr. J.G., Pineville, Kentucky
"Your Dream Pill is working for me . . . ordering another supply."
Mrs. G.W., Fort Gay, West Virginia
"I have been on Dream Pill for one month and feel great...have lost 27 lbs. Mr. A.D., Anadarko, Oklahoma
The System's Dream Pill combines the natural substances L-arginine and L-ornithine which can stimulate the body's production of growth hormone. Dr. Robert Harris, a specialist in nutritional medicine in Stafford Springs, Connecticut, was recently quoted as explaining: "Growth Hormone may be what's responsible for allowing teenagers to down thousands of calories in hamburgers and other foods and still be thin as a rail."
"Growth Hormone is present in people up through the teenage years, then slowly diminishes with age. But L-arginine and L-ornithine make the body 'think' it belongs to a teenager again, allowing adults to eat [their favorite foods] — and still be thin and wiry."
Life Extension Authors Confirm Results
Durk Pearson and Sandy Shaw, graduates of MIT and UCLA respectively, introduced these miracle substances to the public in their runaway best selling book, Life Extension. They discovered the weight-loss effects by accident. Sandy fell and broke her foot and started taking L-arginine because of its well-known healing qualities. Much to her amazement Sandy lost 25 pounds of fat and put on 5 pounds of firm-toned muscle in six weeks. According to Durk's calculations, the pill caused Sandy to lose 400 times as much fat as she would otherwise have lost — without dieting!
Lose Weight 24 Hours A Day
One beautiful thing about the Dream Pill System is the ease with which it works. The pounds melt away 24 hours a day. You wake up every morning, slimmer, happier and feeling younger. The best time to take the pills is just before you go to bed at night. That way, the pounds melt away even as you sleep. You wake up every morning, slimmer, happier and feeling younger!
The super Dream Pill System is already sweeping the country with glowing reports of easy and fast weight loss from formerly overweight people in all walks of life who are now slim, trim, and attractive again. Naturally, individual weight loss results (like those above) may vary depending upon initial weight, metabolic differences and adherence to the Dream Pill System.
Extraordinary Guarantee
Place your order now. If you are not completely satisfied with the thinner "new you" simply return the empty container for a full refund of your entire purchase price. No questions asked. Now what could be fairer than that?
You can order the Dream Pill System and a 30 day supply of the remarkable Dream Pills for $19.95 or a 60 day supply for $34.95.
To order simply call Dream Pill TOLL FREE (1-800-453-4810 and use your VISA or MasterCard. Operators are standing by 24 hours a day, seven days a week. If you don't have a VISA or MasterCard, Dream Pill will also accept C.O.D. orders right over the phone! But please don't wait. Order today. You won't risk a thing. Either you get a slender new you —or you get a full refund of your purchase price.

Police briefs

Man pleads guilty to driving violations

NEWTON — A 39-year-old Newton man pleaded guilty in district court to charges of operating a motor vehicle without a driver's license and registration and speeding. He also admitted to sufficient facts on a charge of driving while under the influence of alcohol. The defendant was released on personal recognizance. The case was continued to May 29.

Car break nets duffel bag and racquet

WEST NEWTON — A duffel bag, an Arthur Ash tennis racquet and assorted cloths and jewelry valued at approximately $550 were stolen from a 1985 Nissan on Washington Street Saturday morning, police said. The owner of the car, of Franklyn, said he heard his car alarm go off at 12:40 a.m. and he ran out and found the front passenger window broken.

Items stolen from car parked at mall

CHESTNUT HILL — An Escort radar detector valued at $300, a $250 Alpine AM-FM stereo and cassette deck and $100 worth of cassette tapes were stolen from a 1984 BMW parked at the Chestnut Hill Mall Friday night, police said. Entrance was gained by punching out the lock of the driver's door.

Not guilty plea entered on charges

NEWTON — Two Dorchester residents were arrested Saturday for attempting to steal $350 worth of merchandise from Filene's. Gladys Jones, 34, is charged with larceny of property over $100. Thomas E. Bell, 35, is charged with receiving stolen property over $100.

Jones allegedly placed the merchandise in a bag and handed it to her companion, Bell, who left the store with the stolen goods, police said.

Both pleaded not guilty to their charges in district court yesterday. Judge Monte G. Basbas released the defendants on personal recognizance. Their cases were continued to May 15.

Detector taken from car in hotel lot

AUBURNDALE - A radar detector, valued at $300, was stolen from a 1986 Hyundai parked at the Marriott Hotel on Commonwealth Avenue last Wednesday evening, police said.

Theft victim suspects local repair shop

WABAN - A Spectrum radar detector valued at $220 was stolen from a 1985 Chevrolet Blazer that belongs to a Larkspur Road resident, police said. The theft is under investigation by police because the owner believes the detector was taken while it was at a Newtonville auto repair shop Wednesday, police said.

Youth kicks holes in restroom doors

NONANTUM - A youth, described as 5 feet 9 inches tall, medium build with brown hair kicked two holes in the restroom door of the McDonald's on California Street last Wednesday afternoon, police said. The suspect fled the scene through the side door and was chased by an employee who was unable to catch up with the youth.

Police set fingerprint schedule

NEWTON — "Many parents have recently contacted the police station requesting information on a spring fingerprinting program for children, wondering if one is being planned," stated Chief William F. Quinn.

In response, the chief assures residents that the program, after 3½ years, has become tradition and is indeed being planned for the months of May and June.

"In fact", he states,"offering citizens a convenient time and location to have their children printed has become an integral and essential part of the Newton Police Department's ongoing personal safety programs as operation identification and neighborhood watch."

The children's fingerprinting program is sponsored in full by the Newton Crime Prevention Commission. Several evenings each week the Newton Police Crime Prevention van, manned by Deputy Chief Jay Moscow and the members of the auxillary police, will be parked at various sites throughout the city from 7:15 p.m. to 9 p.m., weather permitting.

Parents have an opportuinty to have their children printed in their own neighborhood under noncrowded conditions at a time that fits into a busy family's schedule.

Dates and locations for the fingerprinting van have been set for the month of May as follows:

May 14, parking lot Purity Supreme, Route 9.

Monday, May 19, parking Lot, Chestnut Hill Star Market.

Tuesday, May 20, parking lot, Legal Seafoods, 57 Boylston St.

May 21, parking lot, Newton Center Square.

Tuesday, May 27, parking lot, Newtonville Star Market.

May 28, parking lot, Stop and Shop, Route 9.

In closing, Chief Quinn stressed that all dates are subject to change. In the event of rain that evening's program will be cancelled.

Gordon to lecture on scriptures

Dr. Cyrus H. Gordon, distinguished academician and archaeologist, will deliver three lectures at Temple Ohabei Shalom in Brookline as the congregation's 1986 Sidney A. Lang Scholar-in-Residence during the weekend of May 16-18. The theme of the weekend will be, "New Discoveries Bearing On Hebrew Scriptures." All three lectures are free and open to the public. The schedule of events is as follows:

On Friday night, May 16, as part of Shabbat evening services, Dr. Gordon will discuss "Ancient Israel In Its International Setting." The service begins at 8:15 p.m. On Shabbat afternoon, May 17, at 3 p.m., Dr. Gordon's subject will be, "Our Sojourn In Egypt." And on Sunday morning, May 18, at 10:30 a.m., Dr. Gordon will speak on "Ebla and Our Pre-Abrahamic Background." The Sunday morning program will be preceded by a breakfast which is open to the community by advance reservation for a modest charge ($3 per person). For more information, call 277-6610.

'Puttin on the Ritz'

A cabaret meeting, called "Puttin' on the Ritz," will be presented May 18 at Temple Beth Avodah, 45 Pudding Stone Lane, Newton, at 2:30 p.m. The Production is directed by Toby Hall and choreographed by Liz Bruce. Tickets for the show may be purchased at the door or by calling 527-0045.

4 sculptor finalists at Manor

CHESTNUT HILL — Four Massachusetts sculptors have been voted finalists in a sculpture competition at Pine Manor College. David Chamberlain, Dimitri Hadzi, Penelope Jencks and Marianna Pineda were among 15 candidates reviewed by the College's Sculpture Committee, a jury of arts professionals, Pine Manor faculty, alumnae and a student representative, chaired by Barbara Brown Lee, and alumnae, Class of 1960 and Curator of Education at the Milwaukee Art Museum.

On May 16 the Committee will choose a winner who will then be commissioned to complete a permanent piece of sculpture for the courtyard of the College's Annenberg Library and Communications Center. The sculpture will be dedicated in May 1987 as part of the grand finale celebration of Pine Manor's 75th Anniversary, a year-long event which begins this May.

David Chamberlain, of Concord, is the President of Chamberlain Studios and has exhibited his works in one-man shows at the Gallerie Oboussier in Nantucket, and the Lyme Academy of Fine Arts in Old Lyme, Connecticut. Mr. Chamberlain has completed commissioned works for Brandeis University and Babson College. He is listed in Who's Who in American Art.

Dimitri Hadzi of Cambridge has completed sculpture commissions for the Fountain at Copley Place in Boston and Harvard Square, Cambridge. He is Studio Professor at Harvard University, and has been Acting Chairman for Harvard's Department of Visual and Environmental Studies. Mr. Hadzi is a member of the American Academy and Institute of Art and Letters in New York.

Penelope Jencks of Newton has exhibited her work at the Helen Shlien Gallery in Boston, and has completed commissioned works for the Batterymarch Corporation in Boston and Brandeis University. Ms. Jencks has been a professor and visiting artist at Brandeis, and she has been a recipient of the Massachusetts Artists Foundation award.

Marianna Pineda of Boston has completed commissions for Sumner Street Housing, a project sponsored by the Boston Redevelopment Authority, and for the State of Hawaii's Capitol Building. She has been a visiting associate professor at Boston University and is a fellow of the American Academy of Design in New York City.

Each of the four finalists will receive an honorarium to complete a maquette, or model of their proposal, for a sculpture. The sculpture competition, funded by gifts from two alumnae, was begun in support of the College's commitment to the arts. The final piece is intended to complement the distinctive design of the Annenberg Library and Communications center which houses the newly renovated Hess gallery. The Center will be dedicated on May 18, 1986.

Fish Fare demonstration Saturday

On Saturday May 17, the Charles River Watershed Association will hold a Charles River Fish Fare from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. The purpose of the event, planned by CRWA Board member Ralph Abele of Newton, is to demonstrate the fishing techniques that various Charles River fish will respond to, to inform fishermen about the variety of fish that inhabit the river, and to instruct anglers in cleaning and cooking techniques.

The demonstrations will take place in three locations: behind one Washington Street in Wellesley, behind CRWA on Commonwealth Avenue in Auburndale, and off Charlesbank Road at Roberts Bay in Waltham. At noon the anglers will be encouraged to take their catches to the peninsula at the Newton Marriott for cleaning and cooking — and of course eating. Fresh fish from the Charles are healthy and delicious, CRWA Executive Director Rita Barron said, "but people are also encouraged to take along a supplemental picnic lunch in the event that the fish prefer not to become lunch on Saturday." Children should be accompanied by an adult.

The Fish Fare is non-competitive, intended to promote fishing the Charles for fun as well as for protein. All three sites are within the pool behind the Moody Street dam and are popular and productive fishing spots. A fishing license is required for anyone between 15 and 70 years old; licenses can be purchased locally at town/city halls.

While some equipment will be available at the demonstrations, CRWA asks people to bring their own rods and reels if at all possible. Expert anglers from the Massachusetts Division of Fisheries and Wildlife, from the local bass anglers club, and from CRWA will provide instruction. Division Director Richard Cronin is billed as head cleaner and cook, assisted by members of the Myrtle Baptist Church Men's Club.

Also supporting the Fish Fare is the Newton Marriott, whose general manager Olof Arnheim is also a member of CRWA's Board of Directors.

Further information about the May 17 Fish Fare, or about CRWA, is available on request by calling 527-2799.

Judy Woodruff will receive Pine Manor honorary degree

CHESTNUT HILL — Judy Woodruff, chief Washington correspondent for "The MacNeil/Lehrer NewsHour," the national evening news program carried on the Public Broadcasting System (PBS), and anchor for "Frontline," the PBS documentary series, will receive an honorary degree from Pine Manor College on Sunday, May 18, at the College's 75th Commencement ceremonies. Sharon Percy Rockefeller, a member of the Board of Directors of the Corporation for Public Broadcasting (CPB), and former chairman of the CPB Board, will serve as commencement speaker at the graduation ceremony which begins promptly at noon.

The graduation of the Pine Manor class of 1986 will immediately follow the dedication of the College's new Annenberg Library and Communications Center, at which a number of distinguished guests will be present, including the Center's primary benefactor, the Honorable Walter H. Annenberg — former Ambassador to the court of St. James in London. His wife, Leonore Annenberg, former chief of Protocol of the United States under the Reagan Administration, and their daughter, Wallis Annenberg, member of the editorial staff of TV Guide in Los Angeles, and trustee and alumna of Pine Manor College, will also participate in the dedication ceremony.

The dedication of the Annenberg Library and Communications Center, scheduled to begin at 10:30 a.m., and the commencement program at noon, will launch Pine Manor's year-long celebration of its 75th Anniversary.

Vets ready for Memorial Day

NEWTON — On behalf of the Newton Veterans Council, Carleton P. Merrill, Veterans' Agent of the City of Newton, has advised that 12-by-18-inch American flags for the decoration of graves of Newton servicemen and servicewomen are presently available at the office of the Newton Department of Veterans' Services, Newton City Hall.

Saul Klashman, president of the Newton Veterans Council, and Thomas Medaglia, Adjutant General for the 1986 Memorial Day parade and Memorial Observances, jointly announced this week that the graves of Newton servicemen and servicewomen at the Veterans Lots in the Newton Cemetery will be decorated with American flags on Wednesday evening, May 21, starting at 6 p.m. and that again this year the members of the Newton Veterans' Council will be assisted by members of Cub Packs and Scout Troops of Norumbega Council.

There are over 400 veterans buried within the two Veterans Lots at the Newton Cemetery. Further, prior to the Memorial Day activities Roger Marrocco, past commander of Nonantum Post 440, American Legion, will attend to the decorating of the graves of veterans of the Revolutionary War which are located at the Winchester Street cemetery, the River Street cemetery and at the Center and Cotton Streets cemetery. Robert Vassalotti, also a past commander of Nonantum Post 440, will assist Mr. Marrocco. Past Newton Veterans Council Adjutant General Nick Gentile has been appointed as the 1986 "Avenue of Flags" chairperson and, along with Carleton Merrill, will arrange for the replacement of flags stolen or damaged in 1985. The "Avenue of Flags" will again be along Walnut Street from Newtonville Square to Newton City Hall.

To help defray a part of the annual Newton Veterans Council Memorial Day parade ar Memorial Observance costs, members of the Council have "1986 Newton Veterans Council Booster" decals for sale which has a waving American flag in the center. The decals will also be available at the office of the Department of Veterans Services. Frank Howley, treasurer of the Newton Veterans Council, advises that the City of Newton budgets $5,012 for the annual Newton Veterans' Council parade and observances. However, but that the Council must raise an additional $3,000 to meet the overall expenses. This year the council will place three cement and redwood benches around the "Living Memorial Garden" located in front of the Newton War Memorial Building at a cost of $1,200, with the cooperation of James L. Hickey, Commissioner of the Department of Public Works; Russell J. Halloran, Commissioner of the Parks and Recreation Department; and Richard Metro, Superintendent of the Newton Forestry Department.

The benches will be in place and the "Living Memorial Garden" area refurbished for the May 26 Memorial Day observance which will follow the annual Memorial Day parade which will be held on that same date starting at 1:15 p.m.

League School fundraiser May 22

NEWTON — The Friends of the League School, a volunteer nonprofit organization, located in Newtonville, will hold its Third Annual Spring Gala at Boston Pops May 22. The concert will be preceded by a supper in the Cohen Annex at Symphony Hall. Tickets: $70, may be reserved by leaving a message at the League School at 964-3260. Proceeds go to League School students who are handicapped by autism and related disorders.

Launching a fund drive

5 teachers win Brown Fellowships

NEWTON — The Newton Teachers Association has announced the 1986 recipients of its annual Charles E. Brown Fellowship Awards.

The awards, named for the renowned educator who served as superintendent of schools in Newton from 1960 to 1968, recognize promising proposals submitted by Newton's professional educators.

The program enables the association to support and encourage the professional development of its members by paying for substitute teachers while recipients pursue their projects outside the classroom.

Joan Warner, who headed the association's selection committee, said the selection decisions were difficult because of the high quality of the many proposals that were submitted.

The five award-winning proposals and recipients are Sally Glickman and Nancy Kreevoy (Ward School): Six days to develop a new design for the learning center at Ward; Marjorie Montgomery and John Stark (Day Jr. High School): Five days for preparation of a teaching unit on "The People vs. Benedict Arnold;" Gisela Clark (Newton North High School): two days to participate in a seminar on the classical world at Yale University; Joanne Ekizian Clamage (art specialist): Four days to study the use of adaptive equipment for special needs students; and Normean Hyett (Newton South High School): five days to research and develop a reaction policy in the area of adolescent suicide. For further information, contact Tony Croce at 244-9562.

Baton twirling held Sundays

NEWTON — Newton Parks and Recreation Dept. sponsors baton twirling at the Lower Falls Community Center, 545 Grove St., Newton Lower Falls Sundays at 2 p.m.

Mary Ann Flynn, a competitive twirler for 12 years who has won over 200 trophies and medals, will be the instructor for this program. Under the direction of Mrs. Patricia Morely of Watertown, Flynn represented Massachusetts in the world baton competition held at the University of Notre Dame, South Bend Indiana, and placed in two separate events.

Flynn has placed in the following competitions: Miss Shamrock, Miss Pilgrim, Miss Holly, the Northeast Regionals and Miss Majorette, of Massachusetts. She also held a Massachusetts State Championship title for five consecutive years.

No experience is necessary. Batons can be ordered at registration. For further information, call Judy Dore 552-7120.

Jackson Homestead Benefit is a 'roaring' success for all

NEWTON— "The Roaring 20s" was the theme at a recent capital campaign fundraising dinner sponsored by Jackson Homestead Trustee Peter Vanderwarker and Directors Vicky Danberg and Walter Mercer. At the turn-of-the-century home of Vicky Danberg more than fifty Newton residents dressed in their great aunts' period costumes, antique tuxedos, and even gangster apparel to return to the flapper era.

A sumptuous buffet was served with all the trimmings donated by several of Newton's finest gourmet foodstores. Two hors d'oeuvres trays of fanci-filled cheese and salami, artichokes, along with delightfully decorated stuffed mushrooms were donated by Bond and Burkhart Americhan Charcuterie of Newton Center. Captain Marden's Seafoods, Inc. on Washington Street were most generous in their gift of two smoked salmons which were elegantly served with capers and chopped onion. Purity Supreme, Inc. also on Washington Street provided discounts on their delectable cut vegetable platters, and a wheel of brie which was served with slivered almonds in butter sauce and sourdough French bread from Bond and Burhart.

Murray's Liquors of Newton Centre gave a substantial reduction in cost of the wine, beer, and gin which featured the custom-made Jackson Homestead "Bathtub" gin label designed by Peter Vanderwarker. In all deference to Mr. Jackson, whom history has recorded as a temperate man, this benefit was in the spirit of pre-prohibition times where indulging was the recipe for the "good life." Laughter and 1920s merriment followed the feast, which included a browned-to-perfection, stuffed turkey from Hunnewell Market with complimentary pasta and salad dishes made by the host couples.

The 'piece de resistance' was truly the assorted dessert table. Oskar's Gourmet Takeout, a division of Oskar's Restaurant housed at the Howard Johnson's in Newton Corner, offered the guests a deliciously dense, double chocolate fudge cake, three layers high, along with their raspberry linzer torte. Sweet Sis Cheesecake Co., of West Newton Square, contributed an array of mouth-watering cheesecakes - original, swirl and chocolate.

The chocoholics in the crowd had additional home-baked delights in Richie Vanderwarker's double chocolate cheesecake and Vicky Danberg's Chocolate Mousse Alaska. Yet, the dieters (if there were any) were grateful to Hunnewell Market's owners, Jimmy and Mark, who also gave an unseasonably scrumptious fruit boat drizzled with their Carriage Trade Raspberry Port Wine preserves.

Along with the lavish menu, the guests enjoyed the Scott Joplin piano music cordially played by the talented Kurt. All enjoyed the splendid repast remembering those by-gone days and knowing that their contribution was going to benefit the Jackson Homestead.

Teens invited to run race to help homeless

NEWTON — Boston for the World has announced a three-mile road race for teenagers, to benefit the Fund for the Homeless and other Boston-based international hunger relief agencies. The race, scheduled at noon Sunday, June 1, is to start and finish at MDC Lee Pool and run along the Charles River.

All teenagers from high schools, prep schools and youth groups in the Greater Boston area have been invited to participate. Schools are encouraged to raise the $50 entry fee for each runner, and they can solicit sponsorship from clubs, businesses, friends, and relatives.

Prizes will be given to the fastest boy and girl who raise the most money, as well as to all schools who raise more than $1,000 as a group. The big winners of the race will be the charities it benfits. The Boston for the World Fund will distribute 50 percent to the Fund for the Homeless and 50 percent to Boston-based international hunger relief agencies servicing Africa, Asia and Latin America. The Boston for the World Fund will be administered by the Boston Foundation.

Boston for the World recently invited teenagers from Boston to hear about the project from others who already have begun fund raising projects and from other participating celebrities about how to create fund raising projects at their schools or in their communities.

For more information, contact Boston For the World, 2 South Market Building, fifth floor, Boston, 723-5250.

Tax changes require new thinking

MONEY TALK$

Neville Frankel is Vice President of Financial Planning Associates Inc., a Boston and New York affiliate of Confidential Planning Network, an international network of more than 120 financial planning firms. Direct questions to Frankel, care of this publication.

Dear Mr. Frankel:

What impact do you think coming tax changes will have upon the devices now in fashion that allow the transfer of funds to children or to those in lower tax brackets?

Y.K., Newton

Dear Y.K.:

Here are some of the possible changes, and ways that might still be available to save on taxes.

Family gifts: Currently, when a parent gives cash or other assets to a young child, the investment earnings on the gift are taxed at the child's low tax bracket. One proposed change would tax the investment earnings of a child under 14 at the parents' tax rate, if the gift was given by the parent. Such a move would mean a larger tax bite in most cases. Under this proposal, some of the child's investment income would be offset by the child's own personal exemption. And at 14, all investment income would be taxed at his or her own rate.

Trusts: In a Clifford Trust, a parent in a high tax bracket can shift assets to a child and then get back the original investment after 10 years and a day. The child would receive income from the trust, but would probably pay little or no tax on it. In the shorter term Spousal Remainder Trust, assets given to the child revert to the giver's spouse. Both kinds of trusts can be used to provide income to an elderly parent in a lower tax bracket.

One proposed tax change would tax the income from such trusts at the tax rate of the people who set them up. This would apply to new trusts, and for those that are grandfathered, to new money added to existing trusts.

However, don't rule out gift giving, or the establishment of trusts. Gifts from grandparents will still probably be taxed at the child's rate, regardless of age. And in the case of trusts, there may be ways to soften the blow. A grandparent, for example, might use municipal bonds to set up a trust for a grandchild. The income from the bonds, which is tax free, would be paid to the child and reinvested in higher paying, taxable issues. The child would pay tax on the higher yields at his or her own rate.

Another area in which proposed tax changes will require new thinking is the lowering of tax rates, which may drop to a new high of 35 percent — or even 27 percent. This would cause paper losses from tax shelters to lose value. It would also make tax-free municipal bonds less attractive. On the other hand, however, high dividend paying investments might be more desirable than they are now, since there would be a smaller tax bite on that income.

Choosing a caterer

Decide the services offered, wl.at's needed

By Changing Times
The Kiplinger Magazine

Whether there's a summer wedding ahead or you want to throw a party without investing lots of your time, choosing a caterer might be on your agenda.

If you decide to have an event catered, you'll need to know the kinds of services a caterer offers and how to tell a good one from an also-ran.

Part of the reason for hiring a caterer is to make an event run smoothly. Coping with catastrophe is often what separates professionals from the scores of semi-amateurs who have appeared in the last few years.

You can purchase as many or as few of a caterer's services as you like. You might want to buy the liquor yourself or hire servers on your own, leaving only the job of food preparation to the caterer. You can even save a delivery charge and pick up the food for the party yourself.

On the other hand, you can turn the whole thing over to your caterer, making her or him the "party planner." Some caterers charge for that service, with fees that range from a nominal $30 to a percentage of the tab.

Most don't charge extra for planning, although they often collect from the subcontractors — the florists, bartenders and bands — they hire. Review estimates carefully and check to see the caterer will be responsible for paying those bills. Separate billings from several firms can get confusing and lead to misunderstandings.

The cost of a caterer depends on what you serve your guests, where you serve them and the cost of a band or orchestra. Parties for 100 have cost $10,000 and more, but you can expect to pay less than $50 a person for a top-of-the-line party in many cities.

Buffets are less expensive, running from about $25 to less than $10, depending on the fare. Finger foods, dips and cheese and crackers, for example, might fetch $5 a person; roast beef or a turkey carved at the table could cost twice as much.

Foods grilled at the buffet table are popular. Also on the rise: Strolling waiters who deliver the food to your guests, who in consequence consume less food. Prices here generally range below dinners but above buffets.

For recommendations, turn to friends or colleagues who have hired a caterer. Or you can review the parties and receptions you have attended and pick names from those you liked best.

As with any other service you hire, you'll need references. Check them, and ask to see pictures of the caterer's work. You might ask a prospective caterer if you can watch the staff set up a party, although not every caterer will agree to this. Be sure to sample the food before you hire anyone.

Changing Times suggests you ask the following questions:

— If food will be transported, how will it get to you? Ask to see the trucks. Some food can spoil in a matter of minutes if improperly handled.

— What about seconds for hungry guests? Will that be included?

— Will china or paper plates be used? Silverware or plastic?

— Will guests serve themselves or will a server control portions?

— How long will a caterer serve and guarantee food on the table?

The caterer should be insured and licensed by a local board of health.

While you shouldn't be straying beyond the terms of your agreement, it's a plus for you if the caterer has a reputation for making last-minute accommodations, although they'll likely be at a cost. Be certain you know the terms of any agreement — to feed unexpected guests, for instance.

Determine who gets the leftovers. Usually you're entitled to them. Liquor is likely to belong to you if it is opened. But many caterers or the bartenders they hire will give you credit for unused bottles. Again, make the distinction clear so you're not buying stock you don't need.

Anticipate the party running long; know what it will cost and agree beforehand on the procedure you'll follow if the situation arises.

After you settle on the caterer you want, visit the site of the party together to be sure of logistics.

Always sign a contract. Expect to pay a deposit of up to 50 percent. You could forfeit that or even the entire cost of the service if you cancel just before your party. The contract should include hours of service, food costs per guest, quantities to be prepared, beverage charges, rental fees, labor costs per helper and provisions for overtime. Check to see if gratuities and taxes are included in the estimates.

Your house becomes a restaurant when the caterer arrives. Caterers recommend you have the kitchen ready for them before they arrive. You should remove as much from the kitchen as you can to give them room to work.

RSVPs are your best assurance you'll have just the right amount of food and drink for your guests. If you sense there will be a problem, even a few hours' notice to the caterer on the day of the party can head off disaster.

Both you and the caterer should designate an official contact person to be in charge and handle any problems that might arise during the party.

Eat your way to the top

By Terry Hiller
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

Eating for success might sound like a takeoff on John Molloy's dress code, but nutritionist Robert Haas says you can eat your way to the top.

Haas, who has a doctorate in philosophy, is author of "Eat to Succeed: The Haas Maximum Performance Program." It's the lay version of his best-seller "Eat To Win," in which he presented a high-energy diet for athletes. Tennis superstars Martina Navratilova and Ivan Lendl used it.

Haas slightly revised his approach for the new book, which he claims boosts the average person's on-the-job performance, sex life, attitude and overall health.

He claims the diet will lower cholesterol, blood pressure and significantly help diabetics. He refers to Cher and Don Johnson of "Miami Vice" as two people who found new energy for their high-powered careers by following the program.

"When you see the positive results of the diet — you get weight loss, more energy, a better self-concept — you want to do other things as well," Haas said. "There are probably hundreds of thousands of people who have adopted healthy lifestyles as a result of eating this way."

The 38-year-old author's diet is high in carbohydrates and low in protein, fats and cholesterol. "The foundation of it is to make the bulk of your meals cereals, grains, starches, pasta, rice, potatoes and vegetables (all you want) with a limited amount of fruit," he said. "I recommend using chicken, fish and beef as the side dishes or condiments to the meal. That's the basic diet."

Complex carbohydrates should provide about 70 percent to 80 percent of daily calories, simple carbohydrates should equal about 5 percent, protein 10 percent to 20 percent and fats 5 percent to 25 percent.

Richard Haas' new book followed work with Cher and Don Johnson. Cher was burned out and overweight when she called Haas, and Johnson was in poor health, having just begun recovering from alcoholism and drug addiction. Both have experienced good health and career upturns since undertaking the diet.

File photo

Haas also recommends taking vitamins and mineral supplements. He says food should not be salted and people should hold down caffeine intake to two cups of coffee, tea or the equivalent a day.

For weight loss, he has put together a 28-day regimen, which recommends two liquid meal replacements and one meal daily for a total of 800 calories. Recipes are included.

He also suggests that anyone embarking on his diet see a physician and get a blood test that monitors body chemistry. "It's not necessary to do the blood test," he said, "but it's the single most powerful, least expensive comprehensive test to predict your probability of having heart problems, diabetes and other problems."

Haas developed his system after being turned down in the 1970 draft. He weighed 200 pounds at the time and was told he had heart trouble, hypertension and high blood pressure.

"'Is it my diet?' was my first question. I was a wrestler and weight lifter and I ate a lot of steak and eggs," he said. "They said it wasn't diet. They said it's a disease, we don't know why it happens and there's nothing we can do except give you these drugs. Well, the side effects of the drugs were worse than the disease."

He dropped out of law school to study nutrition, which he felt was the key to his survival. Eventually he earned a doctor of philosophy degree in the field. In the course of his work, he changed his diet, lost 60 pounds, overcame hypertension and began advocating his high-carbo/low-fat philosophy to sports professionals. Few heard him.

"A few years ago you had dietitians and physicians recommending high protein diets," he said. "Some people still think mine is an outlandish nutritional approach. But 'Eat To Win' stimulated enough controversy and research that people began looking into it and now we know that it's common sense to eat this way."

Haas' association with Navratilova clinched his success and inspired "Eat to Win." In 1982, the tennis star was upset in the quarterfinals of the U.S. Open. Feeling that diet had something to do with her chronic low performance, she contacted Haas. He instructed her to eliminate fats and forgo junk food altogether. Since then she has been the top female tennis player in the world.

His new book followed work with Cher and Johnson. Cher was burned out and overweight when she called Haas, and Johnson was in poor health, having just begun recovering from alcoholism and drug addiction. Both have experienced good health and career upturns since undertaking the diet, he said.

Haas follows his own advice. He does not drink coffee, tea, alcohol or carbonated beverages.

New brewer keeps coffee fresh for hours

By Margaret Anne Huffman
Scripps Howard News Service

SHELBYVILLE, Ind. — An Indiana company, working with General Foods researchers, has invented an unbreakable coffee server that will keep coffee fresh for three hours.

Restaurants and other institutions have long sought a better way to keep coffee fresh. Glass coffee servers last an average of three to four weeks, according to Ron Kennedy, part of the four-man team at Williams Industries of Shelbyville, Ind., that invented the new coffee server.

Coffee sometimes becomes bitter and cold in 30 minutes and restaurants find it expensive to keep making new pots.

General Foods began searching for an unbreakable server that would maintain the proper heat and freshness about seven years ago. Two years ago, Kennedy, learning of the search, suggested that Williams might be able to find a solution.

"We can take new ideas and develop a prototype first instead of requiring large orders before we even begin development," he said.

The result is a 60 ounce polysulfone body/handle coffee server sealed to a stainless steel bottom that is designed to sit on any standard institutional-style heat plate, solving the first problem of breakage.

"Air is what makes coffee stale," said Kennedy, "so we designed a hollow plastic lid that floats right on top of the coffee...which now stays fresh on the warmer for up to three hours."

The lid, which has a small tapered hole, remains on the coffee from brewing through serving. The entire system is easily cleaned.

Response to the Flavor Fresh bowl, whose design patent is held jointly by Williams and General Foods, has been positive in restaurants. More than 10,000 have been tested.

Full commercial production began this week. The bowl will soon be made nationally available to restaurants, according to Jon Finger, product manager of General Foods in New York, in conjunction with sales of the company's Sanka, Brim, Maxwell House and Yuban decaf brands.

Society changing family mealtime

CARSON, Calif. (AP) — A common mealtime for the whole family is becoming an endangered tradition, but there are ways to counter the trend, says Dr. Virginia Long, a counseling psychologist at California State University, Dominguez Hills, in Carson.

The kids are busy with after-school or sports activities, and as American women continue to join the labor force, both they and their husbands may be working late, she points out.

Fast foods and frozen meals have increased in variety and availability, and with more and more women working, they have less and less time to cook.

"We're not rearing a generation of young women who know how to cook, who seek as a life goal to be Julia Child," says Long, who as part of her practice works with clients who suffer from eating disorders such as anorexia and bulimia.

But with planning, mealtime can still be a positive family experience, she says. One way of accomplishing that goal is to set aside a specific day to plan a meal and eat it together as a family. To make the event even more family oriented and to take the burden off one individual, she suggests dividing up the food preparation tasks among all family members.

"You have to have the entire family understand it's not the sole responsibility of the female in the house to do all the shopping and planning," she says. "I see the family in a state of change. You now have women struggling to have the chores divided, trying to get husbands and children to cooperate more."

On the other hand, Long says, if one family member has a specific dish or meal he or she likes to prepare from beginning to end, that can become a special family occasion.

"At our house, my daughter has one special meal she likes to make. My husband has one he likes. That person has the responsibility to do the shopping and put it together. It's a treat for the family. You get rewarded psychologically because the family enjoys it."

Along with the health and fitness craze, attitudes about foods and meals have changed, Long notes.

"People are not into heavy meals as much as they used to be. I can remember my mother cooking three meals a day of heavy, heavy food," she says. "People realize now you don't have to eat as much."

Once a family has come together to share a meal, there are ways to make the experience more meaningful, Long says.

"I don't agree that mealtime has to be totally pleasant. I don't think families do enough serious talking," Long says.

Common sense and a few safety tips are all that's needed for a cookout to be fun.

Striking up the BBQ grill, safely

By The Associated Press

Spring has sprung, the grass has riz, and the first pitches have been thrown (on the field and on the porch).

It must be outdoor barbecue season.

Although rabid football fans might argue for the tailgate barbecue later in the year, this is the peak season for those who sell as well as those who fry.

In addition to all the summer guests who will have suggestions on how to barbecue, here are some tips from Scripto, the makers of Aim 'n Flame, a butane torch charcoal fire starter.

First, line the grill with heavyweight foil, preferably long before cooking. Using gloves, arrange the charcoal on the foil, starting with a base of a single layer, each touching the other. Build up the coals evenly, with fewer coals on each layer. Spaces between coals allow air to feed the fire.

When you're ready to light the fire, squirt a little starter fluid into the spaces of the lower layers of coals. Then light the dampened coals.

When the coals are gray, use a long fork or tongs to rearrange the top coals and spread them around. Then place the metal grill on top with a heat-proof mitt.

Any meats normally broiled indoors can be cooked over a charcoal fire. Meats marinated overnight usually produce the best results.

> 'Place your grill on grass or cement, not dirt, so dust doesn't fly in your food. Never cook under a tree, since sparks can ignite the leaves and start a fire.'

Then put the meat on the grill, set out the accompaniments and greet your guests.

A twist on the usual outdoor cooking is to use aromatic woods, long-time staples of regional barbecues.

Each wood has a distinctive flavor of its own, according to Roger Brashears, who holds barbecues for up to 500 people at a time for the Jack Daniel's distillery.

Mesquite, for example, has an intense, slightly sweet flavor, while hickory wood lends a tangy, smoky, bacon-like taste, he says. Apple and cherry woods are milder in flavor, so are excellent for cooking poultry and fish, Brashears adds.

Summertime barbecues are fun, but could be dangerous if a few simple safety rules are ignored.

Never use gasoline to light a fire, says Rich Reichert, food service director at United States International University in San Diego, Calif. Use only approved lighter fluid.

Never spray a fire with fluid after it has been lit, since the fluid may "flash up" at you.

Reichert offers these other safety tips:

— Place your grill on grass or cement, not dirt, so dust doesn't fly in your food. Never cook under a tree, since sparks can ignite the leaves and start a fire.

— Use forks and wear fireproof cooking mits when handling large pieces of meat. Always wear shoes when barbecuing, in case of dropped embers.

— Parboil chicken before you put it on the grill, to remove excess fat and avoid flare-ups.

Food poisoning can spoil the fun

By Randolph E. Schmid
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Picnics, barbecues and camping meals are staples of summertime recreation, but the fun can turn unpleasant if the warm weather leads to food poisoning.

The Food and Drug Administration estimates that as many as one American in six suffers from some form of food poisoning each year, although most cases are passed off as a minor stomach problem that's "going around."

This illness can prove more serious in some cases, though, forcing people to miss work or part of their vacation, causing plenty of discomfort and even leading to a rare death.

Warm summertime weather encourages baterial growth on foods, and virtually every food has some bacteria on it, the Food and Drug Administration points out.

So they suggest selecting foods that are resistant to the growth of bacteria, especially for situations when good refrigeration isn't available, such as on a picnic.

These items include scrubbed whole fruits; processed lunch meats and hot dogs, which have preservatives in them, and canned or scrubbed raw vegetables.

If taking along raw meat or poultry, keep it cold in a leak-proof container until it can be cooked, the agency cautions.

If the diet permits, cookies, cakes and potato chip-type snacks are good picnic items, since salt and sugar are preservatives, the agency said. But leave cream-filled items home.

The agency recommends using special care with items that are very susceptible to bacterial growth, such as meat, poultry, eggs, seafood, custards, cream pies, potato salads, milk and milk products.

Wash the hands frequently when preparing foods, use only pasteurized milk products and use only clean utensils, health officials say. They warn against using knives and other items on meat and then moving on to other foods, since bacteria can be easily transferred.

And don't let foods sit at room temperature — one of the most effective ways to avoid food poisoning is to remember the simple maxim: keep hot foods hot and keep cold foods cold.

Ways to reduce allergens in a house

By Sam Spatter
Scripps Howard News Service

Some people with allergies turn to over-the-counter drugs, others consult doctors, but Christine Peterson decided on a different treatment. She consulted architect Robert Kobet.

The Petersons discovered the pollutants in their home aggravate Mrs. Peterson's allerges. So she and her husband, Dick, are building a sheltered house in Greenville, Pa., using non-toxic materials that will not produce allergy-aggravating pollutants.

The contaminants will be further reduced because only one side of the new house will be exposed to air, Kobet said.

What he hopes to achieve is a house — or an area in the house — that is nearly free of toxic materials and has an air exchanger system to constantly move pollutants out while bringing in clean, fresh air.

Kobet said this type of construction may cost 20 to 25 percent more than a traditional new home, but he points to the results these houses produce: comfort, savings in medical care and healthier conditions.

Air exchangers can make a home more comfortable for any family, regardless of whether any member has an allergy, Kobet said.

"The cost of a good exchanger, installed in a new or existing house, can be $1,500 to $2,500, although some cost more. Normally, the best use of the exchanger is to remove dust and pollutants at their source, which is usually closets and storage areas, or the kitchen and bathroom. We ventilate these areas without dragging the dust throughout the whole house," he said.

Kobet, 35, lists five basic considerations for construction of pollutant-free houses:

— Site selection: Don't build in an area that has pollutants that can aggravate an allergy. Analyze the site to determine direction of allergens and pollutants from flowers, industrial facilities and plants. Lake or seaside environments may not always be best because of salt air, spores and other items from the water. Pay attention to where the sun most often reaches the site because ultra violet rays in sunlight naturally sanitize the air and more light in the house reduces the dependency on artificial lighting.

— Foundation should be of solid concrete, not concrete block, because concrete is seamless and of tighter construction than concrete block. When using concrete, he suggests using vegetable oil to cover the forms that shape the concrete when it is poured, instead of a toxic petrochemical substance.

"I'm concerned about the mortar and the other additives used in concrete blocks. Also, try and stay away from things such as anti-freeze, often necessary when building in cold weather," he said.

Other suggestions include sealing and waterproofing the basement on the exterior; avoiding use of black tar, which is a petrochemical product and using a clay-based waterproofing material.

The best way to avoid basement problems is not to build one, he said.

— Structure: Ideally, use a masonry product. If concrete block is used, it is probably better to apply a coat plaster over it that will seal off the block from the interior air. Use dry lumber wherever possible and avoid pressurized-treated lumber because it is treated with extremely toxic materials.

Kobet urges the use of steel studs over wood studs in construction of the house. He uses insulation that has no binders on it. He suggests use of a metal vapor barrier, instead of plastic, and light foil because it will seal off the house and give it a good vapor barrier.

He said non-toxic drywall is available. Floors should be concrete. If wood is preferred, use maple, mahogany or oak. If carpeting is required, polyester is least offensive.

— Interior: Natural plaster is best. Avoid painting. Avoid dust-collecting wood trims on windows and doors. Put storerooms and cabinets in out-of-the-way places because many detergents have toxic materials.

"We are very careful about how we ventilate storage areas," Kobet said. "Controlled air flows through clothes closets will pick up dust and dirt and move them out of the house. We often isolate dressing areas."

Other areas of concern are the kitchen, where a constant change of air can help eliminate gas and food odors, soap pollutants and other toxic items. Areas where books, television, stereos, compressors and motors are located, should have good ventilation.

— Curtains carry pollutants. He suggests vertical metal slats.

— Furnishings: These are what Kobet calls the weak link in the whole housing system. Furniture, because it can burn, usually has been treated with toxic, fire retardant materials. Kobet prefers natural hard wood put together with wood or metal nails instead of glue. Built-in furniture is recommended. Foam cushions on chairs and couches are also high on his list of toxic items. Natural fibers such as cotton are best.

"The key to selecting the right furniture is finding out the materials which cause problems for the family member," Kobet said. "If a certain item causes an allergic reaction, then the family can draw up a list of alternatives.".

Sunlight and heat can cause wood to emit toxic gases. Put furniture out of the sunlight.

Kobet said it is not necessary to build an entire allergy-free house.

"Sometimes, the same amount of comfort can be achieved by designing just a portion of the house, or a room, to have clean air at all times. The big advantage to this is the cost of the house becomes more in line with traditionally built houses," he said.

Water filters remove dust

By The Associated Press

"People don't realize how important it is to have clean and safe water, not only for drinking, but for cleaning and cooking, too," says Don Burgess, vice president-sales of Peerless Home Products.

"It's so inexpensive to install a water filter yourself that it almost doesn't pay not to," he says, "especially considering what you have to gain from purer water."

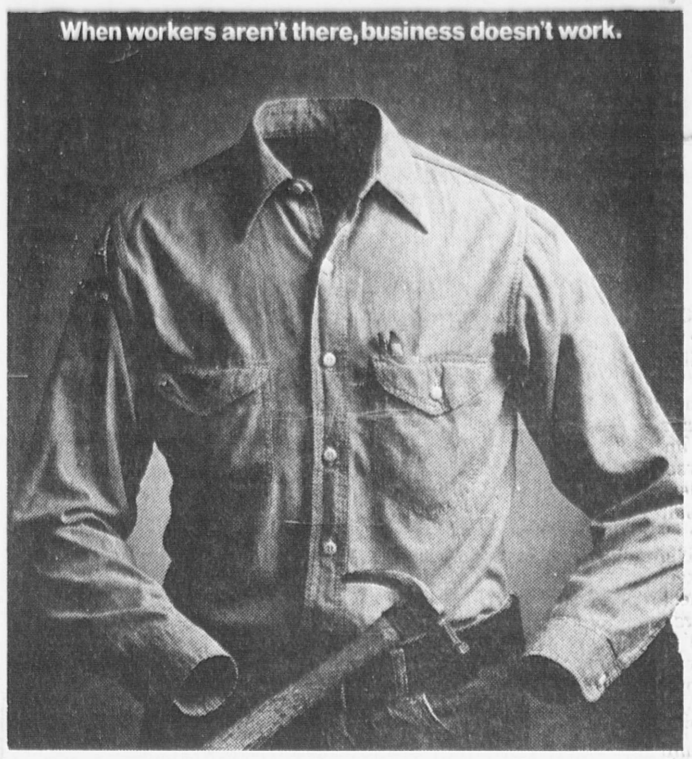
Burgess says a new line of do-it-yourself water filters can remove dust and rust particles as fine as a single grain of powder. Bad tastes and bad odors are also eliminated, he says.

Installing a water filter yourself is easy, says Burgess.

"Since there are several types of water filter models to choose from, customers can select the right one depending on their budgets and use — whether it be for kitchens, baths and wet bar sinks, refrigerator ice-makers, even recreational vehicles.

"To aid homeowners in installing the water filters, Peerless offers kits to help users install a water filter anywhere, for a no-tools hookup."

When workers aren't there, business doesn't work.



Cancer strikes 120,000 people in our work force every year. Although no dollar value can ever be placed on a human life, the fact remains that our economy loses more than $10 billion in earnings every year that cancer victims would have generated. Earnings that they might still be generating if they had known the simple facts on how to protect themselves from cancer.

Now you can do something to protect your employees, your company, and yourself. Call your local unit of the American Cancer Society and ask for their free pamphlet, "Helping Your Employees to Protect Themselves Against Cancer." Start your company on a policy of good health today!

'Exterior decorator' helps client shop

By Linda Weiner Seligson
York Daily Record

YORK, PA. — Some people hire interior decorators.

Millie Agarwal decided to hire an "exterior decorator" — not for her house, but for herself.

Raeann Waltersdorf isn't called an exterior decorator, of course. Her title at Salon Down Under and Associates is "image consultant."

In addition to the color analysis, clothing clinics and makeup consultations offered at some area salons, this one also offers a personal shopping service that includes checking out your closet and going along on shopping trips.

A former model in New York City, Mrs. Agarwal would seem an unlikely candidate to engage the services of a personal shopper. But her sense of style and self worth diminished over the years in direct proportion to her gain in weight.

"I've spent a long time depressed and upset with my self image," she said. "Now I need help to develop a new one.

"I was fat," Mrs Agarwal, now 50 pounds lighter, declared. But worse than that, she explained, she had let the whole package go. "I had long hair in absolutely no style and my wardrobe consisted of black and navy blue sweat suits.

"I had given up makeup," she said. "That involved looking in the mirror and who wants to look at three chins?"

Then in MarcEqfK-Hospital's Opti-Fast Program and the self esteem scenario reversed.

"Once I started losing weight, I began to take an interest in myself," she said. "I'm a registered nurse and I enrolled at York College to pursue a bachelor's degree."

Then one day, while waiting for her 12-year-old at Salon Down Under, Mrs. Agarwal decided to get a trim herself. A few weeks later she returned for a shorter style. Next came a perm.

The new interest in her appearance inspired Mrs. Agarwal to attend a lecture on color analysis, a philosophy which divides people into "seasons."

"The concept interested me but I wasn't thrilled with the speaker," she said — she suspected "spring" and its pastel palette was a misdiagnosis for her.

"I knew I'd be buying new clothes because of my continuing weight loss and I wanted to do it right, so I decided to seek a second opinion.

"My husband, who is a physician, kidded me that I'd want a third opinion too. But, when Raeann told me I was an autumn, I knew she was right. Those rich fall colors were perfect for me."

A makeup consultation followed. And then — after years of neglecting herself — Mrs. Agarwal decided to spend $45 an hour for the personalized shopping service.

"After all those years in sweat pants and tops, I felt I needed the extra help," she said.

Mrs. Waltersdorf visited her client's home to help her weed out clothing that was too big or in the wrong season and suggest others that could be altered. Next came a shopping trip with Mrs. Waltersdorf.

"Fads are fun if you have the money," said Mrs. Waltersdorf. But she prefers to see her clients save fad items for accessories and invest in a basic wardrobe.

As she helped Mrs. Agarwal assemble a minimal wardrobe to carry her through a final 20-pound weight loss, Mrs. Waltersdorf offered advice for solo shopping trips.

There is a mathematical formula for getting the most out of your clothing dollar, she said. Divide the cost of the item by the total number of wearings. For example:

A wool blend suit at $250, if it is worn five times a month, nine months per year for four years — or a total of 180 times — costs $1.39 per wearing.

An evening outfit at $250, worn once a year for four years — or a total of four times — costs $62.50 per wearing.

The consultant also warned of common shopping traps:

— The No. 1 reason for making clothing mistakes is to buy something just because it is on sale. If the item is not right for you, you're wasting money, not saving it.

— Beware of the designer label trap. Mentally remove the label and look at the stitching and fabric.

— Don't buy in a hurry. If you do, you may have a long time to regret your purchase.

— Plan ahead. Know what you're looking for before you go shopping.

Some tips on lawn care

WESTPORT, CONN. (AP) — Is lawn care a do-it-yourself chore, or something for a professional service?

It depends.

Many people use a professional service because the annual task of getting the lawn in shape for spring and summer requires considerable time and expense.

Lawn care companies usually charge fees based on square footage of yard space. Average cost on a national basis ranges between $135 and $150 for the year, according to Gregory T. Bushman, business manager for Stauffer Chemical Co., lawn care company suppliers.

"This annual fee buys you four or five visits throughout the season," says Bushman.

Usually, these visits include an evaluation of the lawn, soil testing, fertilization, weed, insect and disease control. Some companies also provide care of trees and ornamental shrubs, landscaping, and even complete lawn renovation through seeding or sodding — for an additional charge.

If the decision is to use a lawn care service, Bushman suggests, get estimates from two or more companies. Estimates should be free. Ask about guarantees, too.

Camp funding for needy kids

NEWTON — The West Suburban Campership Coalition is once again pleased to offer funding assistance to qualified families.

Since 1977 the Coalition, made up of local funding resources and area professionals in conjunction with the department of Social Services has provided funding for summer experiences for eligible children.

Children must live in Newton, Wellesley, Weston or Needham to be eligible for this scholarship assistance. Financial need, special needs of the child and the necessity of day care services are taken into account.

Families interested in obtaining scholarship aid for the child's summer program are welcome to call 965-9810 for an application. The application deadline is May 16, 1986.

Girls' softball roundup

North's Sullivan 2-hits Cantabs

CAMBRIDGE — Junior Nancy Sullivan fired a two-hitter and rapped out three herself as Newton North bounced Cambridge Rindge and Latin, 6-1, in Suburban League softball action on Friday. It was the Tigers' fifth league win without a loss.

Sullivan had a pair of 1-2-3 innings in dominating the Warriors. She fanned seven and walked five in going the distance.

The only Cambridge run came in the sixth on a bases-loaded groundout.

The Tigers spread their runs around, scoring singletons in the first, third, fourth and sixth, along with a pair in the fifth.

The Rogers sisters had a lot to do with the scoring, combining for five of North's 15 hits. Jody singled home older sister Wendy with the first run of the game in the first, and Wendy knocked home Robin Silver in the second with a groundout.

Meg Morahan's grounder in the fourth brought in Sullivan with an insurance run. Sullivan and Liz Speliotes both drove in runs in the fifth.

Morahan squeezes

Freshman Meg Morahan dropped a suicide squeeze in the bottom of the eighth, plating Jen Heesch with the instant game-winner Wednesday as Newton North punched out visiting Brockton, 5-4, in a Suburban League first-place, extra-innings battle.

Brockton rallied for three runs off two errors in the top of the seventh inning to tie the game, 4-4, but the Newton Tigers wasted no time once extra-innings rolled around.

Heesch drew a one-out walk before pitcher Nancy Sullivan reached on an error and Liz Speliotes beat out a bunt single to load the bases. Morahan stepped in and layed down a bunt first-base way for the game winner.

Sharon Silva tripled home North's initial run in the first inning, then scored on a Felica Moschella single up the middle for a 2-0 lead.

Brockton cut the lead in half with a run in the fifth, but North scored twice off errors in the sixth to take a 4-1 lead into the seventh.

Newton North is 7-3 overall.

South rolls

Senior Jessica Olansky punched out five hits and drove in six runs as Newton South exploded against Wayland to take a 22-9 victory on the road.

South led, 7-6, after three before blasting off for seven runs in the fourth inning.

Maria Crovo singled home two runs in the inning and Katrina Antonellis singled home two runs on two different singles. An error, a passed ball, and a wild pitch all scored single runs.

South added five more runs in the sixth on two walks, three hits, and an error.

Antonellis had four hits, including a triple.

Lancers win

After facing 24 Newton Catholic batters over the final two innings Wednesday, Mission pitcher Susan McCormick should be seeing Lancers in her dreams for quite some time.

Newton Catholic sent a dozen hitters to the plate in both the fifth and sixth innings, scoring a combined 14 runs to bust open a close game as the Lancers prevailed, 23-12.

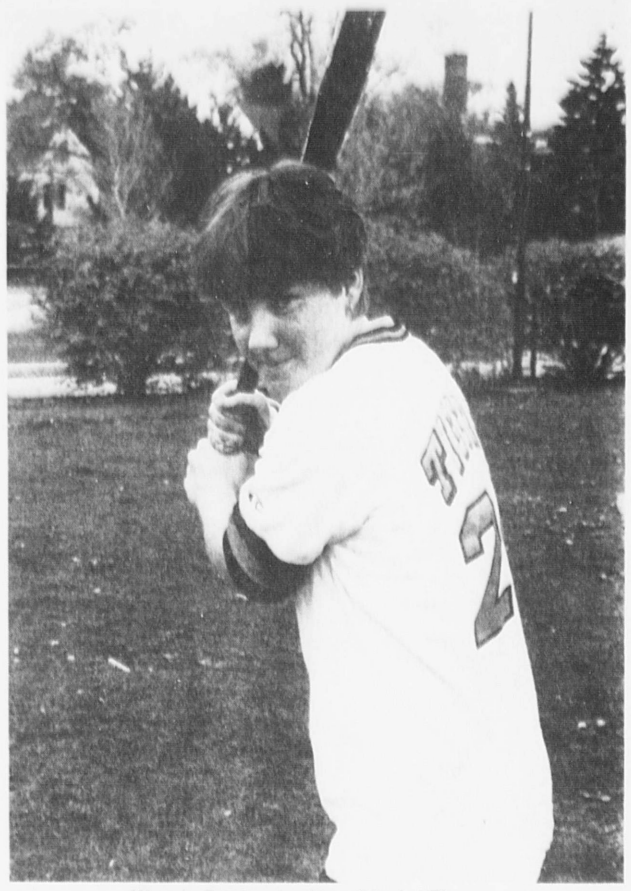
Before Newton's surge, the game had been a topsy-turvey affair featuring three lead changes over four and a half innings. Mission jumped out early, leading 8-4 after two, but Newton Catholic shot back with five markers in the bottom of the third for a 9-8 advantage. Mission came right back to take its second lead, 12-9, compliments of a four-run fifth inning. Then the fun started.

Newton terrorized McCormick for six runs in the last of the fifth to grab the lead for good, then battered the Mission pitcher for eight more in the sixth.

A Linda Leary (five RBI) single plated two runs in the fifth to pull Newton within one run, 12-11, then Cheryl Chagnon singled home the game-tyer. Michelle McLaughlin ripped a hard grounder to second base with the bags full to force in the go-ahead run, then a fielder's choice by Susan Williams and a single by Joanne Abruzzi (her second single of the inning) brought two more home as the Lancers took a 14-12 lead into the sixth inning.

The sixth was more of the same as Leary bashed a bases-loaded triple for the bulk of the eight runs and Williams knocked home two more with a sharp double. The Lancers had only five hits and one walk in the inning, but they gladly accepted three Mission errors.

On the mound for Newton, Leary pitched well enough to win, allowing 10 hits while walking nine.



Wendy Rogers had two hits for Tigers

Tiger stickmen slip at Lexington

LEXINGTON — Sean Murphy punched in four goals for Lexington and Newton North committed one too many mistakes as the Minutemen took an 8-7 decision over the visiting Tigers Friday.

Newton North blew a 5-3 halftime lead as Lexington took advantage of three defensive errors. The Minutemen cut it to one, 5-4, on a bomb pass to Murphy and a nice one-on-one move past defender Scott Lanciloti, then took the lead with an open-net goal of wandering netminder Matt Keegan.

Keegan again got beat while chasing a ball and the Tigers trailed by two late in the third quarter. Newton got the goal back to enter the fourth quarter deadlocked, 6-6, but the tie would not last long.

Mike Murphy snapped the tie just 56 seconds into the final frame to put Lexington up by one, and 1:30 later Dave Robinson tied it, 7-7, with his goal off a Dave Brescher pass.

Sean Murphy rolled around the North defense for the game winner, wristing home the shot with 3:40 left. Newton would threaten in the later stages, hitting the post in a last-ditch effort.

Newton North coach Rick Clark praised the play of Josh Carpenter, who led the scoring with three goals. Robinson added two for Newton while John Flynn and Otto Mariano tallied once each.

Newton North has a 7-6 record overall.

Tigers fall short

When a parent wants to measure how tall a child is growing, he or she sets up a chart on the wall. A runner or swimmer keeps careful records of each outing's time, to keep abreast of progress.

For a lacrosse coach, a game against Concord-Carlisle is just that kind of measuring stick. The Patriots are annually one of the powerhouses in Eastern Mass., and a coach can tell a great deal about how his club is coming along in 48 minutes.

Newton North was in that position on Tuesday, and Coach Rick Clark now knows his Tigers still have a way to go if they are to be any kind of a factor in the tournament this spring. The Pats put on a burst in the fourth quarter to pull away to a 9-6 victory at Concord-Carlisle High School.

North was down by three at the half, and that's the way it stayed until John Flynn scored the second of his four goals with 1:21 to play in the third. What had been a good strong period for the Tigers looked even better, with all the momentum going their way.

Just over a minute later, Brian Stout took that momentum by the scruff of the neck and twisted it 180 degrees.

That got the emergency medical team to work on the Tigers, but they appeared to still have a pulse when Concord was whistled for having too many men on the field as time ran out in the third.

With a 30-second advantage to start the fourth, it looked as though the Tigers might have a chance to get back in it. The Pats pulled the plug on the life-support systems 27 seconds into the period by scoring a man-down goal.

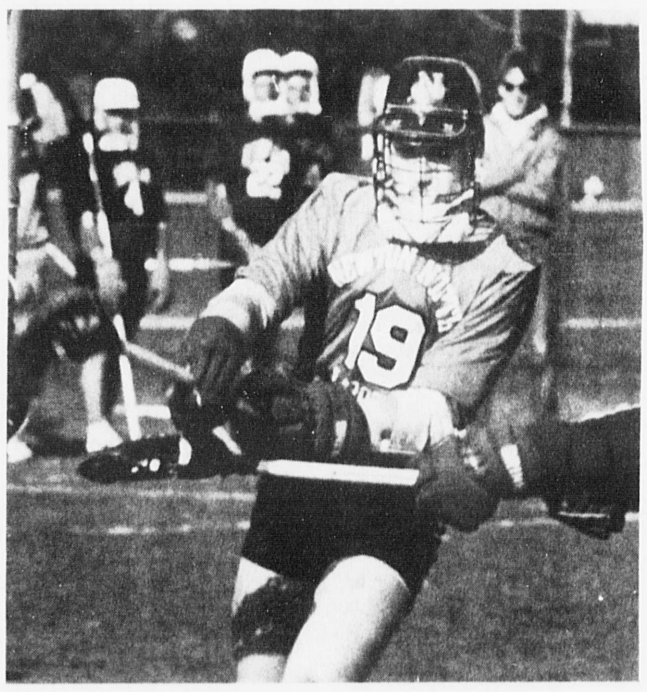
As was the case several times during the game, the winners were aided by a Newton mistake. Mike Duggan made a long, high pass from the Concord defensive end toward Cain, near the North net. Tiger goalie Matt Keegan (he and Vona shared the duties) gambled and went for the interception. When he was a little late getting there, Cain had nothing but net to shoot at and suddenly it was 8-4.

"Our man-down team has been playing a lot better," said Pat coach Jim McClellan.

Stout pulled the sheet over the patient at 4:01 with his second goal of the day, before Flynn finished up the scoring with two goals in the last six minutes.

"This is the first time we've played a whole game," McClellan added. "We've been playing in spurts."

The Pats had one of those spurts to open the game, scoring twice in the first two minutes.



John Flynn is Newton North scoring threat

Cain and Dave Moreau made it 2-0 on a couple of outstanding one-on-one moves before the Tigers knew what hit them.

The visitors didn't get off their first shot until half the period had gone by, and fired only three in the stanza, but somehow trailed by only that 2-0 margin at the end of 12 minutes.

Though the Tigers had dodged one bullet, they couldn't make it pay in the second as Concord came right out and scored early again to make it 3-0. Boynton, the number three scorer in Division 1 North, did the honors this time, from Cain, who finished with two goals and two assists.

Flynn finally got North on the board at 2:44, taking a fast-break pass from Dave Robinson and throwing it inside the far post. Boynton and Robinson then swapped scores before Duggan and Stout got the C-C lead up to 6-2.

Josh Carpenter managed to keep the Tigers within range with a quick-stick shot off a Robinson (one goal, three assists) pass with 26 seconds to go in the half.

North actually outshot the Pats in the game, 34-31, despite suffering an 8-3 disadvantage in the opening stanza. But the Pats made their chances count much more often.

Maroons prevail

Weymouth North erupted for three second-period goals to open-up a close contest Wednesday and last year's Division I Eastern Mass. lacrosse finalists defeated the Division II defending state champion Newton South Lions, 7-2, Wednesday.

Weymouth never trailed in this one, going up 1-0 before Jon Gleason tied the score for Newton midway through the first period. Weymouth North got the edge back with a Jamie Jackson score on a man-up sitution to close out the quarter.

Weymouth North exploded to take a 5-1 lead at the half before South coach Paul Murphy pulled goalie Alex Levine to strengthen the midfield.

Levine looked pretty good with the middie stick as he rifled home South's only other goal, a third-period goal on the man-advantage.

Bourland sparkles in Coaches' Meet

BROCKTON — Competition brings out the best in Peter Bourland, and he showed it on Saturday with an incredible performance at the State Coaches' Meet at Brockton High.

The Newton North senior took second in the low hurdles, running the event for the first time. He anchored the mile relay, which finished third, and took fourth in the triple jump.

The 330 hurdles was the most amazing performance of the day, however. Running the event for the first time, with a week of practice, he set a school record of 38.1, losing at the wire to Wayland's Ben Garfield. Garfield set a meet record at 38.0. What makes Bourland's feat more amazing is that he mistimed a hurdle and had to jump off the wrong foot much of the way.

"Peter had an unbelievable day," said Coach Hank Van Putten.

David Gates also bettered David Vento's school record of 38.4 (set last year) by running 38.2 for third place.

In the 1600-meter relay, Bourland set an unofficial school record. His 48.4 anchor leg was the fastest in school history, according to Van Putten, but it won't be recognized as a record because it came during a relay.

The Tigers finished third in the event at 3:25.5, a tenth of a second behind Cambridge Rindge and Latin. Belmont's 3:24.5 won it.

Chris Rutan led the quartet, followed by Eric Cosentino, Gates and Bourland.

In the triple jump, Bourland sailed 44-2¾ for fourth. First went to David Suarez of Xaverian at 45-9.

Newton North also entered two people in the 200. Cosentino and David Greenberg both set personal bests, though neither placed.

Rutan just missed in the 400, as his 51.2 was a tenth out of sixth. Junior John Fiske ran a PR in that event.

Eric Boemer and Dave Wilkins set PRs in the 800 and two-mile respectively.

Newton South didn't have anyone place, but send several competitors.

Micah Lowenthal ran 16.3 in the high hurdles, his best of the year. David Cuthbert ran his best in the low hurdles at 43.9.

Youth Soccer registration set

Registration for the fall season for the co-ed Newton Youth Soccer League will be open until May 31. Registration forms will be available in all Newton public schools — elementary and junior high, as well as at private schools and the Recreation Department.

The following five divisions will make up the fall program for girls and boys: grade 2, grades 3 & 4, gardes 5 & 6, gardes 7 & 8, grades 9 & 10. Only Newton residents are eligible for the league.

A $25 fee is required for the first child in a family, and $15 for each additional child. The fee covers uniforms, team equipment, referees, team photos and trophies. Games are scheduled weekly to be played on Saturdays for 11 weeks, and will commence on Saturday, Sept. 6. Required practices will be one day a week.

The league policy is to group players together from the same school whenever possible. Private school players will be placed on a team within their public school districts. The 11 years success of this co-ed league is due to its low-key philosophy which enables all youngsters to play no matter what their athletic abilities.

For further information, call 244-1650 between 4:30 and 8 p.m.

Brandeis' Coven named Bay State coach

Michael Coven of Chestnut Hill has been appointed the coach of the 1986 Bay State Games Women's Open Soccer team for the upcoming Bay State Finals, July 10-13, in Boston.

Previously, Coven coached the 1984 Coastal Boys Scholastic Soccer team which captured the coveted gold medal in a double overtime decision. He is currently the head coach of the men's soccer team at Brandeis University where he is in his 13th year of coaching. While coaching in the coastal region, Coven's Under 19 girls' team from Duxbury was the state champion for three straight years.

South nine having its problems

SUDBURY — Newton South baseballers continue to struggle, losing a 7-2 Dual County League decision to Lincoln-Sudbury Tuesday at the Sudbury field. The Lions dropped to 6-6.

Newton South took a 1-0 lead in the second when P.J. O'Toole doubled and eventually scored on Ben Burlingame's single. The only other Lion run came on Mark Maiocca's solo homer in the seventh.

The Warriors tallied four times in the third and added three in the sixth.

Rob Coviello doubled home the tying run in the third, and Dom Marrone followed with a two-run triple off starter and loser Chris Pappas.

A couple of errors and two passed balls helped the Warrior cause in the sixth.

Pitching fails

Wildness on the mound and an error in the infield doomed Newton South to a 9-8 loss to Bedford in eight innings in a Dual County League game at Bedford High on Wednesday.

The Buccaneers had already scored two runs in the bottom of the seventh to tie the game at 8-8, driving starter John Cappadona from the mound and bringing on Tom McGary.

McGary started the bottom of the eighth with a pair of called strikeouts, but then started the trouble with a walk. A wild pitch moved the winning run to second, and a single pushed it 90 feet closer.

Dana Harrison (who wound up as the winning pitcher) stepped up to the plate and grounded one to shortstop, but P.J. O'Toole bobbled it. By the time he recovered and threw to first, Harrison, hustling down the line, had beaten the throw as the run came across to win the game.

Walks also played a part in the rally in the seventh. A single sandwiched between two free passes loaded the bases for Harrison again. He squeezed one run home to bring his club within a run. Another walk reloaded the bases, but a single by White tied the game. Adam Gabriel made an excellent play to hold the winning run at third. A groundout ended the frame.

The two late rallies spoiled a Newton South comeback which saw the Lions erase a 6-3 Bedford lead with five runs in the sixth. The big blow was a grand slam by Pappas. He took a fastball out over the plate and drilled it to the gap in left-center.

Cantabs top North

A struggling Cambridge, Rindge & Latin crew belted out 12 hits and ace Jamie Holway turned in a four-hit, 12 strikeout performance as the Cantabs clobbered the host Newton North Tigers, 11-1, in a Suburban League battle Friday.

Cambridge struck for three quick first-inning runs off North starter Brian Scales, then buried the Tigers with a single run in the second and three more in the third. Cambridge led, 11-0, before Newton North managed its only score.

Tigers clubbed

Host Brockton took advantage of 19 walks by Newton North pitching to post a 15-2 Suburban League victory.

A series of Tiger pitchers couldn't find the plate, in most cases missing by plenty.

Newton did have one lead in the game, scoring twice in the top of the first inning. Ron Coppola contributed a triple, and Bryan Scales an RBI single to that rally.

Boxer starter Howie Rosen settled down after that and had little trouble the rest of the way.

The Boxers, meanwhile, were giving him a big lead to work with, without even using most of their vaunted attack.

In the bottom of the first they tied the contest without a hit, on five walks and Greg McMurtry's sacrifice fly.

Grand slam decisive

Newton North senior Mike Solomon had been reeling in the fish all afternoon, but the right-handed pitcher almost let the big one get away.

On a wet and chilly Monday afternoon at North Quincy High, Solomon's bat helped Newton North to a 13-3 lead, then his arm pitched a grand slam homer in the bottom of the seventh to close things up to within three runs.

Solomon pulled back hard though, as not to let the prize-winner escape, and the righty pitched out of a 3-0 count to notch the game-ending strikeout for a 14-11 Tiger victory.

Newton North beat up on North Quincy early, scoring four runs in the first and four more in the second. The Tigers gave the Red Raiders a break in the third inning, scoring zip, but resumed fire in the third frame with two more runs. Following a three-run fifth, Newton North rested on a 13-3 lead.

North Quincy had slapped Newton starter Andy Lyons for three runs in the third, then added three more against reliever Sid Queler in the sixth.

Beaver wraps up title

With a 12-0 record, Beaver Country Day School has clinched its fifth consecutive Eastern League championship.

Monday, host Beaver made Concord Academy its latest victim, 6-1.

Sophomore lefty Morgan Claussen twirled a four-hitter and fanned nine for the victory.

Friday, Beaver edged Rivers, 1-0, when Kurt Newman of Newton singled in the only run of the game in the top of the seventh inning.

Newton North girls roll on undefeated in tennis

NEWTON — It wasn't a shutout, but Newton North ran its girls' tennis record to 5-0 on Tuesday with a 4-1 decision over Brookline.

The Tigers didn't have too much trouble in the match, as all three singles players won easily in straight sets. Diana McCarthy, Lise Abrams and Lisa Amatangel posted victories.

It was a different story in doubles, as both matches went three sets.

At number one, Brooklinee's Amy Goldberg and Cara Dukakis outlasted Laurie Katz and Liza Moore, 6-3, 4-6, 7-6.

At two, North came back with Nancy Green and Catherine Saunders outdueling Stacey Hurwitz and Kelly McGarr, 4-6, 6-0, 6-2.

Thursday, McCarthy and Lauren Queler posted shutout wins at first and third singles as Newton North dropped Quincy, 5-0.

Katz had only a little more difficulty at number two, taking down Wendy Sterling, 6-2, 6-2.

In doubles, Saunders and Katerina Victoria won at first, 6-3, 6-0. Jen Weinstein and Lisa Feldman did the job at number two, 6-3, 6-1.

South blanked

For two years, Concord-Carlisle has been playing in a different league than the rest of the teams. This year appears to be no different, as the Patriots hung a 5-0 defeat on a good Newton South team on Monday.

Going into the match, Mimi Kaufman was 5-0 at first singles, Tamar Hausman was 4-1 at third, the first doubles team was 4-0, and Amy Freedman was 5-0 with three different doubles partners.

None of that seemed to bother the Pats, who struggled at only one spot. Justine Higgins took three sets to down Kaufman at number one, 6-1, 0-6, 6-4.

All of the other matches went straight sets, and none were particularly close.

Friday, the Lions dropped Wayland, 5-0.

Kaufman, Nicole Jackson and Hausman posted singles victories.

Stacey Millender and Ellen Jacobs won the only three-set match, an Freedman and Kyla Upshaw swept at number two.

Coach Bob Hoffman praised the work of the first doubles team, which was down, 4-0, in the third set before running off six straight points to win.

In another DCL outing, Lincoln-Sudbury nipped Newton South, 3-2.

The pivotal match came at first doubles, where Sharon O'Neil and Farrell Rubin outlasted South's Ellen Jacobs and Stacy Millender in a thriller, 5-7, 7-5, 7-5, to decide the match.

The Lions picked up their points at first and second singles. At number one, Mimi Kaufman downed Kathy Pryor, 6-2, 6-1. Nicole Jackson dropped Stacey Smith, 6-2, 6-2.

There was another three-setter at third singles, where L-S' Andrea Greenburg got by Kyla Upshaw, 3-6, 6-3, 6-3.

Seek National team

The Newton National Baseball League has an opening for one team. The league is either looking for a group of boys ages 16 to 18 to eneter the league as a team, or is looking for an adult to manage a team.

The league has equipment and uniforms which are available to any interested party. For more information, contact Joe Connors at 552-7120.

Newsmakers

Thomas R. Jackson was elected president of West Newton Savings Bank, with Robert P. Lurvey assuming the office of chairman and chief executive officer, it was announced at the bank's recently held annual meeting of the corporators.

Said Lurvey: "I am pleased about Tom Jackson's presidency, both for him personally and for the bank, who will continue to benefit from his strong leadership talents."

Lurvey also announced the election of Robert Johnson to trustee, representing the Town of Wayland. He noted with regret last November's passing of Parmelee C. Hill, whose office Johnson replaces.

Newton resident Sumner M. Redstone, State Crusade Chairman for the American Cancer Society's Massachusetts Division, has been appointed to serve a second year as volunteer leader of the Society's Cancer Crusade in 1986.

Redstone will lead the efforts of tens of thousands of volunteers in the state, who will attempt to raise a 1986 Cancer Crusade Goal of $5.25 million.

Redstone is president of National Amusements, Inc., which operates Showcase Cinemas. In addition to leading more than 80,000 Massachusetts Crusaders in the 1985 campaign, he supported the volunteers' efforts by underwriting the cost of producing materials for the residential Crusade in April. Redstone was also one of the state's largest contributor to Daffodil Day, when he purchased daffodils for the patrons of his 13 cinemas in Massachusetts.

Redstone's Showcase Cinemas presented the New England premiere of the film "The Cotton Club" as a statewide benefit for the division. He also presented the premieres of "White Nights" in Boston and "The Jewel of the Nile" in Worcester to benefit the American Cancer Society.

Wayne and Pat O'Hern, of Newton, are among the eleven state-wide recipients of the Massachusetts Historical Commission's Preservation awards.

Each year at this time, the Commission honors preservationists from across the Commonwealth who have demonstrated an exceptional commitment on behalf of historic preservation. Since 1979, a total of 95 preservation achievements have been publically recognized.

The O'Hern's were awarded the prize for their intensive and untiring efforts in successfully restoring their 908 Beacon St. residence.

When the O'Hern's purchased this property it was in a state of disrepair. The stick-style Victorian had been used as a rooming house, and regretably, over the years, "modernization" projects have obscured much of its fine architectural details.

Extensive interior and exterior rehabilitation work was done by the O'Herns themselves. One of the more serious abuses that had to be corrected was the of artificial siding, which the O'Herns removed and returned the exterior facade to its original late-Victorian color scheme.

Former Newton resident Daniel H. Miller has accepted the position as a Software Engineer at the Software Engineering Institute (SEI).

Prior to joining the SEI, Miller was an engineer with Litton Systems, Inc., Data Systems Division, in Van Nuys, Calif. He also has held positions with SofTech Inc., in Waltham, and Interactive Systems Corp., in Santa Monica, Calif.

A 1983 graduate of Carnegie-Mellon University in Pittsburgh, Miller holds a bachelor's degree in applied mathematics (computer science and statistics tracks).

A 1979 graduate of Newton South High School, he is the son of Dinah R. and Stephen N. Miller.

David P. Mittell, of Newton, has been appointed to vice president of sales at the American Brush Company, Inc., of Wellesley. Mittel, who has been with the company for nine years, was formerly national sales manager.

Dr. C. Ronald Kahn of West Newton was named as the first Mary K. Iacocca Professor. His work in diabetes research, particularly on insulin receptors, has won considerable praise. Harvard Medical School and Joslin Diabetes Center announced the Iacocca Foundation pledged $1.5 million to endow the professorship in medicine in honor of Mary K. Iacocca, the late wife of Chrysler Corporation Chairman Lee A. Iacocca.The Mary K. Iacocca Chair in Medicine is dedicated to research in the field of Diabetes and Metabolism, and will be located at the Harvard-affiliated Joslin Diabetes Center. Mrs. Iacocca died of complications of diabetes in 1983.

League to honor longest standing member in Newton

NEWTON — The League of Women Voters of Newton is proud to announce that the 50th Birthday Search for the longest-standing Newton League member has concluded and that Jane Segal will be honored at the Annual Meeting on Wednesday, May 14.

Segal joined the LWVN in 1946 and has served in a variety of posts, including president, a position she held from 1950 to 1953.

"I joined the Newton League after moving here in 1945 from Cincinnati, Ohio, where I had been a League member . . . I know I worked my head off. It was and is an objective organization — we worked for the issues. We really did, fighting hard to be non-partisan," Segal recalls now.

Segal says the League in the early 50s had a "full program" which resembles the activities of today's League, including keeping an eye on the schools and working to strengthen voter services.

"The League was also, of course, for the Marshall Plan, and the United Nations," she remembers.

Segal, 76, is a devoted resident of the Garden City, having moved during her 41 years here from Newton Upper Falls to Newton Centre to Newton Highlands, where she now lives — "We were never tempted to leave the city. We thought the schools were wonderful," she says.

Several years after serving as LWVN president, Segal went into Democratic politics — "It was such fun being partisan after all those years of staying out of the fray!" Segal laughs. She helped reorganize the Newton Democratic party, worked for several candidates to the state legislature doing door-to-door canvassing and moved up to the national level campaigning for Adlai Stevenson in his presidential race against Dwight Eisenhower.

"My League work definitely got me interested in issues, although I guess I was always on the liberal side," says Segal, a 1932 graduate of Bryn Mawr College.

In addition to her political activities, Segal worked for the Newton schools for 23 years, retiring in 1980.

POSTAL JOBS

CLERK & CARRIER POSITIONS
($9.48/hr to start)

Special announcement for all candidates planning to sign up for the Clerk-Carrier Examination at the Quincy and Dedham Post Offices, Waltham, Malden and Melrose Post Offices (last given in 1983) as well as many other Post Offices in the 020, 021 and 022 Zip Code Areas when it is announced. [Since it won't be offered again for at least 3 years, don't miss out!]

4-HOUR WORKSHOP
Score 95-100% or Your Tuition is Refunded!

NOW is the time to prepare. The pressure is on to score as high as possible to get the job. Career Postal Workers will now earn a starting salary of $18,532 plus benefits — with an accelerated step increase plan; men and women, regardless of age, are eligible. The first step toward a postal service career is getting your name onto the "Register of Eligibles," which is accomplished by passing this Exam. To be one of the first hired, you need to get one of the higher scores! And to be hired at all during the next three years, you will need to score at least 95%.

This workshop is being offered now, prior to the formal announcement of the examination dates, to give you adequate time to prepare for the test. Many post offices begin testing within a week of the announcement which isn't enough time to prepare properly. By starting now, you'll be ready to attain high scores using our methods when the test is given.

Come to the workshop. If you don't feel, at the end of the course, that it will help you achieve a score of 95% or better, don't pay for the workshop! Furthermore, if your score is less than 95% on the official exam after using our techniques, we will immediately refund your tuition in full!

WANT TO RELOCATE? We are the publishers of The Postal Alert, the bi-weekly newsletter giving you postal exam dates nationwide. Only The Achievement Center provides this service. Learn how you can relocate to any area of the country you like.

- You are invited to bring your tape recorder to record the workshop for personal exam review.
- You may attend as many extra sessions of the workshop as you like (on a space available basis) without additional tuition charge.

WORKSHOP TUITION — $40 (includes guaranteed 4-hour Workshop, The Corey Guide to Postal Exams [with 6 complete practice tests], a Sample Exam with Answers, Workshop Workbook, "12 Important Steps for Getting Hired into the U.S. Postal Service" Booklet, Follow-Up Consultation Privileges, Achievement Award to High Scorers and Practice Kit containing Six Additional Practice Exams with Answers, Memory Test Flash Cards, "Simulated Exam" on cassette tape, and ANNOUNCEMENT WITH SIGN-UP DATES MAILED TO YOUR HOME). Please bring two sharpened No. 2 pencils with you to the Workshop.

Seating is limited; pre-registration by phone is advised. Otherwise, you may register by arriving thirty minutes+ early. Tuition is payable at the door by cash, check, money order, MasterCard, VISA or American Express.

Humor on the fringe

By Howard Altman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The Bible, according to Jewish humor anthologist Moshe Waldoks, was just too funny for Moses and the boys. "That's why they switched to the Talmud."

"The Jewish people weren't always interested in theatrics and humor," the 37-year-old Newton resident, co-author of The Big Book of Jewish Humor, told his audience at the Leventhal-Sidman Jewish Community Center Sunday. "There was some humor in the Bible, a lot of slapstick stuff. Take the flood. You keep expecting the Three Stooges to show up. Or the plagues. Come on, if God wasn't fooling around, He wouldn't have given the Egyptians frogs and other plagues. He would have given them herpes right away.

"The whole Bible is families plotting and scheming against each other," he said. "It reads like a script for Dynasty. Also, at the end of the Bible, you keep expecting the punchline."

There was. Waldoks said Purim, a holiday described in the Book of Esther, provided Jews with an emotional and humorous outlet they otherwise would not have allowed themselves with respect to the rest of the Bible.

"The Jews were not into the Greco-Roman theater popular at the time," he said. "There was too much paganism and blasphemy. Purim, though, permitted Jews to have carnivals, wear costumes and parody, through the Purimspiel, their society."

> 'Some people may think Jews are famous for being able to deliver one-liners while they are being shot at, but Jewish humor is more complicated than that.'
> Moshe Waldoks

The Purimspiel was not unlike what "Gotterdammerung", the Teutonic passion play, would be if directed by Woody Allen — Allen Konigsburg to his friends back in Brooklyn. That, Waldoks said, is what Jewish humor is all about.

"By making light of the characters in the Bible," he said, "it brought them to life for the Jews of the middle ages."

Resisting drug testing

Firefighters risk back pay

By Les Orsini
Staff Writer

NEWTON - Opposition to drug testing language could cost firefighters a year of retroactive pay raises if they refuse to sign a contract before July 1.

A state law apparently limits retroactive pay to the fiscal year prior to the date the Board of Aldermen vote the raise.

The state law reads: "Whenever a city, town or district votes to grant a salary increase to all or any of its employees such increase may be retroactive to a date not earlier than the beginning of the fiscal year prior to the date of such vote."

The law appears to say the city could not grant firefighters back pay for fiscal 1985 if a settlement were reached after July 1, which is the beginning of fiscal 1987.

> 'If the city refused to pay ... they would have a serious situation on their hands.'
> Firefighter Kevin McArdle

Firefighters have been without a contract since July 1, 1984. The average firefighter would lose well over $1,000 if the law denied back pay for fiscal 1985.

Kevin McArdle, president of the Newton Firefighters Association, has reported opposition to the city's proposed drug testing language is the major obstacle to a settlement.

Asked if the law limts retroactive raises to the previous fiscal year, Harry Grossman of the state Department of Revenue said, "Quite frankly, I think that's the intent. I think it looks perfectly clear to me."

A source with experience in labor negotiations agreed with this assessment. "That's pretty much the way we've been operating," said the source.

Alderman Verne Vance, an attorney for Foley, Hoag & Eliot of Boston, gave the same interpretation.

"My view is the law seems pretty clear in providing that a municipality cannot grant a salary increase that is retroactive to a date earlier than the fiscal year prior to the fiscal year in which the increase is voted," he said.

If firefighters and the city agreed to a contract in late June, aldermen would probably have to hold an emergency session to appropriate funds before the July 1 deadline, he said.

Grossman, who is head of the department's Property Tax Bureau, cautioned that the issue has not previously been brought to the attention of his department.

It is not known if other statutes permit exceptions to the law.

"As to whether you can get around (the state law), I would say it is a possibility," Grossman said. "Whether or not it's appropriate is a different point."

McArdle questioned whether the law would actually prevent

Big round for DeNucci

By Ed Cafasso
Staff Writer

SPRINGFIELD — A relentless campaign organization and U.S. Rep. Barney Frank's impassioned plea for party unity brought a strong first ballot victory to State Rep. A. Joseph DeNucci's campaign for state auditor Saturday at the Democratic State Convention.

Privately, DeNucci and his staff expected to capture 48 percent of the convention delegates on the first ballot, but wound up with slightly more than 54 percent and the party's endorsement.

He dedicated the first victory in his first bid for statewide office to retiring State Sen. Jack H. Backman (D-Newton/Brookline), with whom he co-chaired the Legislature's Committee on Human Services & Elderly Affairs since 1980.

"He may be imitated, but he'll never be duplicated," DeNucci told the few thousand delegates and supporters left in the Springfield Civic Center when the auditor's tally was announced at around 6:30 p.m..

Boston City Councilor Maura Hennigan earned a spot on the September primary ballot with 20.6 percent, as did her colleague, Charles Yancey, who barely qualified with 15.1 percent.

A "tremendously disappointed" Rep. Richard T. Moore, of Uxbridge, could muster support from only 10 percent of the convention and immediately endorsed DeNucci.

The 46-year-old West Newton native and former world-ranked middleweight boxer captured 85 percent of the local delegates.

In the Newton delegation, 72 members backed DeNucci, seven supported Yancey and one voted for Hennigan. All but one of

A healthy, happy 105th

By Howard Altman
Staff Writer

NEWTON UPPER FALLS — James Garfield was president, the flag had only 39 stars and the major mode of transportation was still the horse when Gertrude Strout was born on May 15, 1881.

Last week, friends, city officials and fellow residents of the Stone Institute, a retirement home for women, helped Strout celebrate her 105th birthday with presents, music and a cake honoring her favorite pasttime, bowling.

"If I went through this every year," she said, referring to the commotion in the former Pettee mansion in Upper Falls, "I wouldn't have lived this long."

Despite her status as "the city's oldest taxpayer," Strout displayed the wry sense of humor that friends say was her trademark as a young woman who departed with tradition around the turn of the century.

"What kind of advertisement are you selling?" she asked a photographer. "I had good taste in men," she added when asked why she chose to remain single. "That's why I never got any."

Representatives of the St. John's Society Episcopal Divinity School, where Strout worked for 27 years, presented her a plaque. Throughout the afternoon, she was roasted for her interest in the opposite sex. "Do you have women there yet?," she asked of the parisioners. "If you did back then, I never would have worked there."

According to Stanley MacNeill, a 64-year-old Newton resident who has befriended Strout for the past 20 years and acts as her "historian", as a young woman she was considered "racy" for her time.

"Gertrude used to like to travel," he said. "Back then, it was considered spunky and even racy for a young woman to travel by herself. When she was about 25, she took a train trip to California. That was really something for her day."

Though she never married, Gertrude Strout had many "beaux", MacNeill said. She was the Cosmo girl before Helen Gurley

Retirement Board member resents divestment pitch

By Les Orsini
Staff Writer

NEWTON - At least one Retirement Board member resents the implication that his board voted to retain South African-related investments solely for financial reasons.

There were moral reasons as well, said Lawrence Marino, who is also the city's comptroller. "There are people who say America's presence in South Africa is morally a good thing," he said.

Marino said many officials agrue that American companies which adhere to the Sullivan principles are helping to improve conditions for South African blacks. The board's policy is to invest only in U.S. businesses that go along with those principles, he said.

Created by black minister Leon Sullivan, that code says U.S. businesses operating in South Africa must use fair labor standards and actively seek to abolish apartheid.

Retirement Board critics have charged the only way to pressure that nation to abolish apartheid is divestiture.

But Marino wonders how consistent those critics of the Retirement Board are. Many of America's leading companies have holdings in South Africa under the Sullivan principles.

> 'If you assume those companies are twentieth century slave traders, let's divest yesterday.'
> Lawrence Marino

"If you want us to divest, let's do it 100 percent," he said. "Let's stop buying their products."

"I want to know if the people who want us to divest drink Coca Cola, have American Express cards, drive GM cars, use Kodak film or Johnson & Johnson Band-Aids," said Marino.

At issue is the $3.5 million the city's pension fund has invested in American companies doing business in South Africa.

Richie, Cardinal Sin send off BC grads

By Andrew McCloy
Correspondent

CHESTNUT HILL — With pop star Lionel Richie leading them off, 2,500 Boston College graduates sang "We Are the World" Monday, ending their four years at the school on a positive, even inspirational, note.

"I wouldn't have missed this for the world," Richie said. "This is a college with a great heart. And remember, as you go out into the world, the most important commodity is love for other people, not money."

Richie's role a year ago in the USA For Africa fundraising campaign for the famine victims of that country has brought him into the international spotlight. Renowned as a socially concerned artist, Richie first gained fame as the lead vocalist and songwriter for the Commodores. With his parents watching from the crowd, he recieved an honorary degree at the commencement.

Popular songwriter Lionel Richie led BC grads in a version of "We are the World" before sending them off into "the real world."

Jaime Cardinal Sin, Archbishop of Manila, who received the Honorary Doctor of Sacred Theology degree, told the graduating seniors in his commencement address that the world should learn from the peaceful Phillipine revolution.

"We changed the structure of our government peacefully without bloodshed," Sin said. "We did it with prayer, with laughter, with love."

A popular and influential leader of the Catholic Church in the Phillipines — a nation where about 85 percent of the population is Catholic — Sin is an outspoken advocate of human rights and defender of the Church's independence. After the assassination of Benigno Aquino, he was also instrumental in the peaceful transition to democracy in the country. He credits divine grace and the people of the Philippines for the change in power that made Corazon Aquino president of their country.

Sin told of his own efforts after meeting privately with Aquino, including pastoral letters, trying to deal with corrupt elections and finally sending old and young into the streets to stand before loyalist soldiers.

"Even before the elections, they were buying votes all over the country," Sin said. "I wrote to all my people: 'If they offer you money, take it. But vote according to your conscience.'

For the most part, though, Jews shied away from jocularity and preferred the Talmud, he said. So little faith was attached to the success of the Book of Esther that God is not even mentioned. That way, if the book were edited out of the Bible, "It shouldn't be a total loss."

With time, the humor of Purim caught on, Waldoks said, and lead eventually to the "Badchan", forebearer of the standup comedian.

"In the 14th century," he said, "if say a rich Polish Jew had a 13-year-old daughter, he would try to marry her off as soon as possible. The badchan, or wedding jester, would be hired to joke about the tension between the two families. 'You sweet, little, pure thing,' the badchan would tell the girl. 'Look at your sister, she looks like a barrel and she's only 17,"

The next great development in Jewish humor came via the Chassidim in eastern Europe. Because they were a revisionist sect "like Jerry Falwell and the boys," Waldoks said, they were animated and theatrical. This was the final missing ingredient.

"It just went to show that not only intellectuals appreciate humor," he said. "Jerry and the boys certainly aren't intellectuals."

The combination of chassidic theatrics and the resurgence of Yiddish, a dialect once thought to be the language of the lower class, is the direct antecedent to vaudeville, Waldoks said.

"Before the Jews came to this country, there were only two funny men in America," he said. "Mark Twain and his uncle somewhere. With the immigrants came humor. Jews, Italians, Irish and later Blacks."

It was the brothers Marx, Waldoks said, who served as an important benchmark in the development of American Jewish humor.

"The Marx Brothers were a very important act," he said. "They were among the first comedians to combine the Jewish, immigrant humor with the mainstream, melting pot American tastes. While it was plainly evident that they maintained their ethnic humor, Chico played an Italian, Groucho played the fast-talking urban Jew and Harpo couldn't speak at all, they played to a wide audience both Jewish and non-Jewish."

Other comics important to Jewish humor were Samuel Levinson, Myron Cohen and Lenny Bruce. Each, Waldoks said, was a kind of guru for his "schtick."

"Levinson believed that you couldn't separate being Jewish from being American," he said. "He thought it was demeaning. Cohen, though, stayed with the dialect humor. Bruce introduced a new type of comedy, what I call 'urban spritz.' He made it fashionable to deliver therapy on stage by talking about his deepest fears and feelings. This was later picked up by Richard Pryor and George Carlin."

While Jewish humor may be many things, Waldoks is careful to point out what it is not.

"There are a couple of myths that I would like to kill," he said. "The first is that Jews are funny as a reaction to suffering. That is unfair and also untrue. Some people may think Jews are famous for being able to deliver one-liners while they are being shot at, but Jewish humor is more complicated than that.

"The second myth is that Jewish comics are self-hating," he added. "I'll kill myself if I ever hear that again."

Another point he likes to make is that there is a difference between Jewish humor and what he terms "Jew Jokes."

"Jewish humor is a takeoff on Jewish life and Jewish culture," he said. "In order to understand it, you have to have some degree of sophistication about Judaism. Jew Jokes, on the other hand, are mearly sterotypes, like Jewish American Princess jokes. Joan Rivers tells Jew Jokes, she is not a Jewish humorist."

The reason Jews are funny folks, he said, is because of their perspective on society.

"The Jews have always been on the fringes of society," he said. "Because of that, they are on the outside, looking in. I think that one reason Jews have been interested in comedy — 80 or 90 percent of the comedians are Jewish — has to do with the fact that it is often a better vantage point to joke about society when you are on the outside looking in."

Sadly, Waldoks said with the Americanization of Jews, we are seeing the end of Jewish humor in this country.

"As Jews lose touch more and more with their heritage," he said, "they lose their sophistication of Judaism, which Jewish humor depends on. Younger people don't understand Yiddish anymore."

Young, old celebrate Israeli independence

By Andrew P. McCloy
Correspondent

OAK HILL — For some people who have lived in America their entire lives, freedom is a byproduct of this land often taken for granted. But for Maria Rodkina, a Jew who emigrated from the Soviet Union in 1979, freedom is a precious gift beyond any price.

"You can't be a Jew in the Soviet Union," Rodkina says. "In every document there is something that speaks out against the Jews. In the Soviet Union, if you are a Jew, you cannot have a good job and you can't go to any college of your choice."

Last week, Rodkina and her friend Gina Fish, also a Soviet Jew who emigrated, experienced the beauty of freedom at a celebration of the 38th Anniversary of the State of Israel at the Gosman Jewish Community Campus.

"We feel as if it is a very big holiday," said Rodkina, who was never able to celebrate her faith in the Soviet Union. "When we came to America we received support that we never received in the Soviet Union. America helped us. We are free, and it is nice. Peace ... Shalom — It is most important."

With those words, Rodkina, perhaps, captured the essence of the celebration yesterday. The State of Israel represents freedom for all peoples, according to Stanley Hurwitz, assistant director of public affairs for the Combined Jewish Philanthropies of Greater Boston.

"The whole idea of this event today is freedom. What we are celebrating is thirty-eight years of Independence for Israel," Hurwitz says. "America Israel's best friend. There is a great solidarity between the people in Boston and Israel. We can share the great industrial and cultural contributions with the Jewish Community and the entire world."

As children's choirs from many local synagogues sang for the crowd, visitors enjoyed Israeli food, ethnic costumes, a media presentation, "Another Israel," and a variety of other attractions.

A simulated Israeli farm, or "kibbutz," allowed children to pat baby lambs, sheeps and donkey's or take a ride on a camel. Also, under a big tent, a "shuk," or typical Israeli marketplace, was set up, where visitors could peruse Jewish art work and obtain information on the various Jewish organizations available in both Israel and America.

Bohnen estimated that 5,000 people participated in the celebration, about 2,000 of them children. Throughout the day, senior citizens were bused in from all over the greater Boston area.

Moshe Waldoks, walked along one of the pathways with his two-week old daughter, Brina, wrapped in a bundle in his arms. He spoke about how the celebration was designed for both young and old members of the faith.

"Israel is a major center for Jewish people," Waldoks says. "I can't imagine life without it. It is a state dedicated to the survival of the Jewish community everywhere."

Aldermen plan halfway house conditions

NEWTON — Ward 2 aldermen have hammered out conditions they hope will make a proposed halfway home for mentally ill adults acceptable for Newtonville residents.

After a recent Land Use hearing, aldermen Elaine Gentile, Joshua Davidson and Louis Irwin met for 45 minutes with two residents who have expressed concern about the proposal.

Plans call for Alternative Home Inc., a nonprofit agency, to use 515 Walnut St. as a halfway house for 10 mentally ill adults.

Gentile said the conditions were acceptable to Dr. Linda Kraus and her husband, Thomas Kraus, residents of 480 Walnut St. In the past, the couple has joined with neighbors to question the proposal.

Many Newtonville neighbors expressed opposition to the proposal at aldermanic hearings when it was first raised this winter.

"It's very amiable," Gentile said of the private meeting with the two Walnut Street residents. She declined to reveal the conditions the three Ward 2 aldermen would seek until they are first presented to Land Use Chairman Cynthia Creem.

But Gentile did say, "I don't see how Land Use will have a problem."

"I believe we have reached conciliatory language ... that will be acceptable to the neighbors and to the three ward aldermen," Davidson said.

Thomas and Linda Kraus were not available after the private meeting for comment. Just before the private meeting, Linda Kraus said she was concerned with how Alternative Home will utilize the psychiatrist it plans to have associated with the facility.

Would the psychiatrist, for example, have the power to veto a person being accepted as a client, she asked.

During the public hearing before Land Use, she described herself as "neutral" on the proposal.

Kraus said the city's Planning Department and Alternative Home have answered a number of the neighborhood's concerns.

Because the cost of renovating 515 Walnut St. is being paid for by the state, residents were afraid that the facility would have to remain a home for mentally ill adults, even if Alternative Home Inc. were to prove unable to operate the facility.

David Schultz-McGuire, executive director of Alternative Home, explained that the state would listen to proposals to use the home in other ways - such as for low income or elderly housing - should the facility fail.

Dorm construction could start in August

NEWTON — Construction could begin as "as early as August" on two dormitories being proposed by Boston College, according to BC Community Affairs Director Laurence Barton.

The aldermanic Land Use Committee recently paved the way for the construction off Commonwealth Avenue by approving site plans for the dorms.

BC officials and attorney Jane Pitt had come before the committee and the Board of Aldermen before, but were not granted the site plan approval until last night after they agreed to certain restrictions and conditions.

By giving their approval, committee members agreed that BC overcame neighborhood concerns that the dorms would strain local parking and traffic.

Pitt assured aldermen that parking for the 384 students would be provided until a 700-car garage on the Lower Campus is completed.

No signs of progress in firefighter talks

NEWTON — After four hours of contract talks, the city and its firefighters remain "extremely far apart" on several issues, according to the city's chief administrative officer.

"It's not appropriate to comment on the specifics other than to say the city and firefighters are extremely far apart on several major language issues," said Richard Kelliher.

There were no signs of progress after the session. The contractual dispute — which reportedly centers around salary and the city's proposed drug testing policy — has lingered for 22 months.

The city and Newton Firefighter Association (NFA) bargaining teams are scheduled to meet next Tuesday morning. That will be the third negotiating session in a 12-day period.

Kelliher said the situation has the city "concerned."

"The city is most concerned about the elapse of time with this kind of extreme gap between the bargaining teams," Kelliher said.

Carmichael first enter race for state rep

NEWTON - Ward 1 Alderman-at-Large Bruce B. Carmichael has become the first candidate to officially enter the race to succeed State Rep. A. Joseph DeNucci (D-Newton/Waltham).

Carmichael, 33, of 178 Linwood Ave., has been an alderman since 1979 and works as a special investigator for the Executive Office of Administration & Finance.

A prepared statement accompanying his announcement promised the kind of commitment to constituent services that residents of the 10th Middlesex District have come to expect.

"A state representative must first and foremost be accountable to people in his district and their unique problems," Carmichael said.

Carmichael is one of four Garden City candidates who have certified nomination papers for DeNucci's seat, which serves northern Newton and southern Waltham.

To get on the ballot, candidates must file their papers with Secretary of State Michael J. Connolly by May 27, but they have until June 4 to decide whether to stay in the race.

Carmichael served as Board of Aldermen vice president for the 1984-85 term, but lost his bid for the presidency during a 1985 caucus battle.

He emphasized his experience involving several controversial development issues in Newton's villages.

Carmichael, who helped pass a limited citywide moratorium on commercial construction, recently filed a Zoning Board of Appeals petition on behalf of Newtonville residents seeking to halt a commercial development they feel will degrade their neighborhood.

He also worked with a group of residents to rezone more than 200,000 square feet of property in the Crafts Street area in an attempt to prevent further commercial encroachment into residential areas.

Activist Torchia vies for DeNucci's seat

NEWTON — Democratic activist Thomas A. Torchia has become the second candidate to officially enter the race to succeed State Rep. A. Joseph DeNucci (D-Newton/Waltham).

Torchia, 40, of 78 Adella Ave., has worked for the state Office for Children for the last 12 years establishing pre-school programs and monitoring the Chapter 766 special education law.

Newton Alderman Bruce Carmichael's announcement preceded Torchia's by less than a day, while former Garden City mayoral contender David J. Berkeley announced his intentions a week earlier.

Torchia is vice district chair of the Newton Democratic City Committee for Wards 1 through 4 and is former chairman of the Ward 3 Democratic Committee.

If elected, Torchia said he would follow in DeNucci's footsteps by seeking an assignment on the House Committee on Human Services & Elderly Affairs.

He said he is interested in addressing issues like the state stabilization fund, child care, employment and training programs and elderly services.

A delegate to every Democratic State Convention since 1980, he has been active in campaigns for DeNucci, U.S. Rep. Barney Frank (D-Newton), State Sen. Jack Backman (D-Newton/Brookline) and Newton School Committee member Sally Rizzo.

He has served as neighborhood liaison to the state Department of Mental Health in an effort to establish a community residence for developmentally disabled adults.

Torchia, the recipient of the 1981 Newton Jaycees Distinguished Service Award for Outstanding Community Service, also has been a member of the Davis School Reuse Committee.

A lifelong resident of Newton, he and his wife, Teresa (Plati), have one daughter, Victoria Ann, who is three and a half.

Human Services Dept. loses Lipton's services

By Les Orsini
Staff Writer

NEWTON — He will be remembered as a sincere, "low-key" person who knew how to inspire volunteer support and work effectively with staff.

His steady leadership enabled the city's Department of Human Services to flourish despite the budget-busting of Proposition 2 1/2.

After 10 years as department director, Howard Lipton will resign next month to practice law with the Newton firm of Concannon, Rosenberg & Freedman.

"He was an honest, sincere, low-key person," said Stephen Holmes, Council on Aging member for the last 16 years. "He never made great fanfare, but he always did the job."

"I'm very sad to see him leave," said Charles Feeley, current council chairman. "He's an extremely competent person in a low-key way."

The Council on Aging is just one of the four commissions associated with Lipton's department. Human Services is so complex its organizational chart looks like a blue print for the latest personal computer.

In addition to working with the council, Lipton and his staff has to implement the decisions of the Human Rights and Youth commissions and the Mayor's Committee on the Handicapped.

His department offers senior citizens, youth outreach, fuel assistance and consumer affairs programs. Among other services, Human Services publishes the monthly senior citizens newsletter, "Golden Times," and transports the elderly to local supermarkets.

Richard Kelliher, the city's chief administrative officer, noted that Lipton also played a key role in making City Hall accessible to the handicapped.

"It's a diverse job, probably one of the most diverse positions in the city government structure," said Lipton recently.

A Connecticut native, Lipton came to Massachusetts armed with a bachelor's degree in political science and a masters in urban affairs.

"I think I went into human services because I liked working with people and I enjoyed working in government," said the Sharon resident. "I like to develop and create. Human services is certainly a field where you can do that."

This creativity was never more apparent than when the department almost lost two senior citizens drop-in centers, Feeley and Holmes said. Through a variety of moves that resembled a high level chess game, Lipton managed to preserve both facilities at new locations.

A few years after Lipton arrived, Proposition 2 1/2 cut deeply into the department's budget and Lipton began recruiting volunteers so programs could continue, said Holmes.

"Howard was able to take the cuts and still provide services," Holmes said. "We never lost any services."

Human services now has 150 volunteers, 90 working on the commissions or their advisory boards, 60 offering help at the drop-in centers.

Lipton earned his law degree from the New England School of Law five years ago. In switching to law, he is not abandoning the goals - being creative and helping people - that brought him to human services, Lipton said.

"I think it's the opportunity to be creative and solve problems," Lipton said of his new career.

"I guess you could say my clients were all 83,000 residents," he observed. "In law, my clients are clearly defined with different kinds of problems."

Taking a bite out of apartheid

The Newton Graphic does not follow the reasoning of the city's Retirement Board in its refusal to divest more than $1 million in investments from companies doing business in South Africa. We urge the Board of Aldermen to approve Matthew Jefferson's petition for a Home Rule judgment that would force the members of the Retirement Board to do what their consciences apparently will not move them to do.

It seems incredible that, in the city that was the cradle of abolitionism decades before slavery was abolished in this country, requests for divestment would be answered with pure pragmatism.

The argument that the companies invested in adhere to the Sullivan principles and that, because of this, our investment is actually improving conditions in South America ignores the facts.

Rev. Sullivan, himself, has said that the almighty principles that allow American companies to profit from the woeful conditions of a slavery-based economy are headed for the trash can in 1987, if apartheid has not been abolished by then. If those principles will be wrong-headed a scant year from now, they must surely be out-of-line at this time.

Moreover, while those principles might govern the treatment of blacks in the workplace, South Africans do not live in the workplace. Some of them have to travel hours to and from their dismal, segregated townships — where the Sullivan principles are little more than a rumor — just to get to the workplace.

And those who are lucky enough to secure employment with the companies in question represent only a small fraction of the 20 million blacks who are forced to live under a system of institutionalized oppression and violence.

Those who would contend that advocates of divestment are being hypocritical when they refuse to divest across-the-boards are also missing the point. They say that divestment should be total or not at all ... that those wishing to protest conditions in South Africa should stop drinking Coca Cola, stop using IBM products, stop using their American Express cards and boycott any firm that deals with the white majority.

What they are insisting on is that anti-apartheid advocates must tackle the whole beast or leave it alone ... do the whole job or leave every part of it undone.

We would remind them of an old epigram that relates to the elimination of a beast the size of South Africa's dominant social institution. "How do you eat an elephant?" is the question. "One bite at a time," is the answer.

The city's Retirement Board has a chance to take a small bite out of the beast, apartheid. At the same time, it has a chance to add to the city's longstanding record of fighting racial oppression. It also has a chance to reflect the attitudes of the majority of the citizenry of the city which was once the railhead of the Underground Railroad and of the mayor elected by that citizenry, whose sentiments are clear.

Members of the city's Retirement Board, you are out on a limb. With every added argument in favor of maintaining your present relationship with an economy that thrives on the machinery of slavery you are cutting that limb off.

As far back as 1843, John Greenleaf Whittier proudly declared to his colleagues in Virginia, "No fetters in the Bay State ... no slave upon our land."

The tail will not wag the dog for long. Not in South Africa. And not in the City of Newton. As to the security of the board's investments, it should be remembered that "When one door is closed, many more are opened."

A primer for Memorial Day

By Kevin C. Kennedy

This coming weekend, Memorial Day weekend, thousands of area residents will honor departed loved ones — friends and relatives who have fallen in this country's wars.

They will visit area cemeteries, where they will honor the dead with flags and flowers, petitions and prayers ... and tears. In those moments, their emotions will be focussed on the real reason for memorial day, a day when we take inventory of our human expenditures and assess the real cost of our freedom.

Later on Memorial Day, many will attend parades where somber vets, who have squeezed into their old uniforms (How could this have shrunk? I haven't washed it in years?), file through town behind marching bands to podiums covered with red, white and blue bunting.

It is there that the focussed emotions many felt while visiting their local cemeteries begin to dissipate. It is there that the taking of inventory becomes diffused, especially in an election year like 1986. The praises of political candidates and parties, recognition of those who helped organize Memorial Day events and other, more parochial concerns tend to creep into the verbiage, taking up space which should belong to the original concerns of General John Alexander Logan when he dedicated the holiday in 1868.

In order to assure that the speechmaking this Memorial Day stays on track, commemorates our fallen and reminds us of the high price we have paid for the liberties we enjoy every day in America, the Newton Graphic passes on this primer for those with speaking engagements next weekend.

While the quotations praise the courage of those who fought and died, they also remind us that violence breeds violence, just as every war has set the stage for the war that follows it.

These are the words of great men, from ancient times to the present day. The methods of waging war might have changed over the centuries, but its aftermath is still the same. We pay the price with our best and our brightest.

Beginning with the ancient Greeks: "War never slays a bad man in its course, but the good always." Sophocles

"In peace, children inter their parents. War violates the order of nature and causes parents to inter their children." Herodotus

"We make war that we may live in peace." Aristotle

"The scars of others should teach us caution." St. Jerome

"Soldier, rest! Thy warfare o'er. Sleep the sleep that knows not breaking. Dream of battled fields no more, days of danger, nights of waking." Sir Walter Scott

"It is well that war is so terrible, or we should grow too fond of it." Robert E. Lee

"'Not in vain' may be the pride of those who survived and the epitaph of those who fell." Winston Churchill

"Older men declare war. But it is youth that must fight and die. And it is youth who must inherit the tribulation, the sorrow and the triumphs that are the aftermath of war." Herbert Hoover

"I have seen war ... I hate war ... More than an end to war, we want an end to the beginnings of all wars." Franklin Delano Roosevelt

"War is not an instinct but an invention." Jose Ortega y Gasset

"Uncommon valor was a common virtue." Admiral Chester William Nimitz, on Iwo Jima

"Soldiers are dreamers; when the guns begin, they think of firelit homes, clean beds and wives ... And when the war is done and youth stone dead, I'd toddle safely home and die — in bed." Siegfried Sasson

"In war, there is no second prize for the runner-up." General Omar Bradley

"Either Man is obsolete or war is." Buckminister Fuller

"Our researchers into public opinion are content/ That he held the proper opinions for the time of year:/ When there was peace, he was for peace; when there was war, he went." W.H. Auden

"Unconditional war can no longer lead to unconditional victory ... Mankind must put an end to war or war will put an end to mankind." John F. Kennedy

"Men die but an idea does not." Alan Jay Lerner

"Old soldiers never die. They only fade away." British Army song

"And when he goes to heaven/ To St. Peter he will tell:/ Another Marine reporting, sir;/ I've served my time in hell!" Epitaph of Pfc. Cameron, Marine Corps, Guadalcanal

"Stay with me, God. The night is dark./ The night is cold: my little spark/ Of courage dies. The night is long;/ Be with me, God, and make me strong." A Soldier's Prayer

"This is the grave of Mike O'-Day/ Who died maintaining his right of way./ His right was clear, his will was strong,/ But he's just as dead as if he'd been wrong." Anonymous rhyme

"When elephants fight, it is the grass that suffers." African proverb

"Fight on my merry men all,/ I'm a little wounded, but I am not slain;/ I will lay me down for to bleed a while,/ Then I'll rise and fight with you again." Dryden, "Johnny Armstrong's Last Goodnight"

And finally: "If a man hasn't discovered something that he will die for, he isn't fit to live." Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr.

Q. and A. on our real sports heroes

By Mark White

O.K. everybody, it's springtime (finally), and what I love best about the spring is sports. So, to commmerate the warm weather, grab your pencils and let's have a quiz to test your knowledge of the big games.

1. Who posted the most strikouts in the last couple of weeks?

2. Who posted the best come from behind victory.?

3. What horse originally favored to win, lost the first race, but came back to win the second?

4. What favorite was surprised by the performance of the underdog?

5. What underrated team is in the first place through pure hard work?

Okay now the answers. On question one, most of you probably answered Roger Clemens for his record-setting performence. But, sorry, that is the incorrect answer.

The correct answer is Evelyn Murphy for her performance at the Democratic Convention.

Evelyn was supposed to win in a walk but was totally surprised by the performance of Gerry D'Amico. She struck out not only for failing to get the endorsement herself, but she challenged up another "K" by allowing D'Amico to capture the endorsement.

Evelyn struck out with her vaunted organization, struck out with her organized video presentation, and, most important, struck out with a campaign strategy that emphasized gender instead of issues.

Evelyn Murphy has a good record and a lot of accomplishments. She is an excellent candidate. It's a shame that her campaign has adopted a strategy of voting for her because she's a women.

A friend of mine jokingly said, "Well, if women are voting for Murphy because she's a women, then men should vote for D'Amico because he's a man."

To my way of thinking, this gender logic is no better than saying vote for somebody because they're Jewish, or vote for somebody because they're Irish.

When will people learn to vote for candidates on issues, and qualifications? The same logic the Murphy people are pushing is the same logic that got us Sandra Day O'Connor on the U.S. Supreme Court.

And believe me, Justice O'Connor is no friend of anybody who believes in women's rights or in social justice, male or female.

Evelyn had one more strikeout, her people blaming D'Amico's victory on the political insiders helping him. First, Evelyn is hardly an outsider, after spending so many years as a cabinet secretary for enviornmental affairs and secretary of economic development.

Second, D'Amico has been working his tail off these past few weeks. He did things, as John Houseman might say, "the old fashioned way." He earned it.

I expect that in the next few weeks you'll see a new Evelyn Murphy. If not, it's stike three!!!

2. No, it wasn't the Houston Rockets who came from behind. It was Gerry D'Amico.

For a guy whom nobody gave a chance of clearing 40 percent of the votes to win the endorsement was really something. He's a strong candidate with a darn good record.

3. This racing question is easy. "Snow Chief" you say. Yes, he was the leading two-year-old. Yes, he lost the Kentucky Derby. And yes, he won the Preakness. But again, you're wrong. The answer is Michael Dukakis. He won in 1974, lost in 1978, won in 1982. (O.K. I was stretching it on that one. But the guy has put together a phenomenal organization, he will win in a landslide, and deserves to be mentioned somewhere in this article.)

4. Now this one you should have gotten, but you blew it. It's not the Los Angeles Lakers. It's Jim Shannon. Let me state that there is no stronger supporter of Jim Shannon than yours truly. Jim's a longtime friend and I believe he is a very unusual type of politician. He's brilliant, astute, knowledgable in many different areas, and also one of the nicest people you would ever want to meet.

However, how Joanne Shotwell got almost 40 percent of the vote just boggles the mind. Give her credit for a strong performance but elect Jim Shannon to the AG's office.

5. The underrated team in first place? The Red Sox right? Wrong!!! The answer is clearly Joe DeNucci's team. Joe was ready for that convention. His organization was good and he himself has been diligently learning about the auditor's office and ways to improve it.

This office has enormous potential as a strong investigative tool of state government. DiNucci's accomplishments in handling enormous human services budgets, as well as being one of the best at responding to constituent concerns, make him a perfect candidate for this job. Joe is in first place because of hard work. And he deserves it.

Didn't score too well, huh? Well that's because you narrowly defined the word "sports".

But I ask you, are there anymore entertaining games than those played by Massachusetts politicians?

Different kinds of 'terrorism'

Recent events have riveted the nation's attention on terrorism. In Newton, student trips are cancelled and our Police Department is preparing to respond to possible terrorist acts.

When people think of terrorism, they usually think of individuals or groups. They think of "them," not "us." I found a recent newsletter on terrorism put out by the Friends Committee on national legislation (245 Second Street NE, Washington D.C. 20002) very thought provoking. The newsletter notes that both terror and deterrence stem from the Latin word terrere, meaning to frighten, and poses these questions:

What exactly is the difference between nuclear deterrence and terrorism? Each seeks to compel or prevent a particular behavior. Does the difference lie in ultimate goals. Then who is to decide whether a country's goals are illegitimate and its actions terrorism? Does the acceptability of the act lie in the size of its perpetrator, so that the acts of smaller groups are relatively illegitimate?

Does the difference lie in whether the action is taken by a government or by a private group? Are non-governmental groups held to higher standards than governments? Is a person who threatens to blow up an airplane more culpable than a president or general secretary whose actions can forfeit the lives of millions? Does the difference lie in scale: Is the threat to use nuclear weapons legitimate deterrence, while the threat to use a rifle or bomb illegitimate terrorism? Is deterrence different from terrorism because it involves only the threat of violence, not its actual use? But if deterrence is to be more than bluff, must not officials be ready to use nuclear weapons?

"Terrorism"—Arab style—is the latest bogeyman with which to divert Americans from the "balance of terror" which our vast nuclear arsenal is designed to maintain. If "terrorism" is understood in a broader sense, then it is indeed our most formidable problem.

Kudos to Day Music Dept.

Most people, when writing to the editor, have complaints or suggestions. I have praises and congratulations to give several people, for I think that credit should be given where credit is due.

Recently F.A. Day Jr. H.S. produced the adapted version of the musical, Peter Pan, by James M. Barrie. The show was a smashing success, and in this particular show, there wouldn't have been any flow or rhythm without a few praiseworthy people. Mrs. Aline Shader, the director and choreographer of the show, and Ms. Bea Maier, the vocal director are two of the aforementioned people. I would also like to thank the accompanist, the costume designer, the orchestral director, the set constructer, with her wonderful creative backdrops, and of course the stage and light crews.

Finally I would like to thank the School Committee and Mayor Mann for their continued support of the excellent Music Department in our school.

Faring well on Charles River fish

By Lauren McFalls
Assistant News Editor

AUBURNDALE — Twenty years ago, when raw sewage was dumped straight into the murky Charles River waters, most people would have choked at the thought of actually eating fish out of it.

Today, some still do. But the Charles River Watershed Association has proved their fears are now based in the past.

The association sponsored its first annual Fish Fare on Saturday, which began with fishing lessons from one of three riverbank locations — just over the Newton border in Wellesley, behind the CRWA on Commonwealth Avenue, Auburndale, and off Charlesbank Road at Roberts Bay in Waltham. It also featured a picnic on a peninsula behind the Marriott Hotel, Auburndale, where the group had the opportunity to prepare, grill and feast on their catch.

Starting at ten o'clock in the morning, men, women and children cast their lines into the Charles, and by 1 p.m., the first group of fishermen had taken their first cautious nibbles out of bluegills caught somewhere in the vicinity of Roberts Bay.

"It's sweet," Roland Ungerer declared, surprised. But, he added later, "It's not like what you'd get in a restaurant."

"It's not fishy," commented Beth Surgens of the Fish and Wildlife Service, after finishing off her portion.

"It's good," surmised both Heather Bartlett and her dad, Mike.

Unlike Heather, Mike and the others, catching and eating fish from the Charles River was apparently not what many had in mind for fun on this first warm Saturday of the month.

Possibly because the day started out so dismally, only 25 people showed up for the event, though CRWA was set up to handle 60 to 70, according to Ralph Abele, Fish Fare organizer.

He said the low turnout is due to "growing pains," since it was difficult obtaining enough fishing instructors and equipment, let alone finding the time to advertise adequately for the event.

However, according to Rita Baron, of the CRWA, the lack of participants can be blamed on the river's poor image.

"People have the sense that the river is filthy in this area," she said. "But it's 10 times cleaner than it needs to be to meet swimming standards (in Massachusetts)."

Still, John Riley, president of the Massachusetts Bass Federation, said it has only been within the last five years that "a lot more people" have started fishing on the Charles.

"Ten years ago, we'd come out here and see pollutants coming into the water," he said.

"My grandfather says the Charles is the cleanest he's seen it since the 1920s," said Fish Fare participant Joseph Corbette, of Dedham.

One way to help the river remain clean is to use it, according to Abele. "Fishing is one way to keep an eye on the river," he said. "If stuff starts going wrong, fishermen are the first to notice."

DeNucci sweeps convention crowd

Waltham delegation's 23 members voted for DeNucci.

He also received support from 19 of Watertown's 26 delegates, but garnered only three votes to Hennigan's four in Weston.

By all accounts, DeNucci's floor network was the best of the convention. At the start of the balloting for auditor, he had close to 350 whips and aides deployed at strategic positions.

About 50 key workers, wearing black fish-net "DeNucci" shirts to distinguish themselves from the colorful masses, were linked by rented radio headsets to a communication system based in a mobile home trailer parked in the Springfield Civic Center exhibition hall.

Although DeNucci was favored coming into the convention, his "pro-life" stance on the issue of abortion threatened to dampen his chances for a strong showing.

Frank's nominating speech, which singled out for rebuke "those who preach one-issue politics," sought to erase any leverage the abortion issue might create for DeNucci's opponents.

"That type of politics will lead to a continuation of a fractricidal and divisive Democratic party," he said, appealling to the delegates to unite around the party's "core principles."

Acknowledging the instances when DeNucci delivered him political support, Frank said, "For 10 years, he has been one of the best friends in government of the people who need a friend.

"Joe DeNucci has indisputably been one of the champions of the Democratic party and it's time for this party to recognize that."

Afterwards, he said his address had been directed at those who differed with DeNucci's stance on abortion and, to a lesser extent, parochial school funding.

As it became clear that the tactic had worked, Frank called the result "a meaningful demonstration" of the Democrats' ability to transcend such narrow issues and rally behind the best overall candidate for the party.

When DeNucci's turn at the podium came, he was greeted by a sea of orange-bordered "DeNucci" placards that had been distributed throughout the convention floor at specific locations.

After quelling a brief chant of "Joe, Joe," he continued on the path cleared by Frank, saying he would "best represent the party's principles and agenda."

It took more than hour and a half for the final delegate tally to be announced because of a number of behind-the-scenes maneuvers that allowed Yancey to overcome the 15-percent threshold needed to get on the primary ballot.

After dedicating the win to Backman, DeNucci said he welcomed the primary process "so we can get in shape for the most important title bout in November.

"And then it won't be bagpipes, it'll be 'Rocky,'" he added, just before predicting a sweep for the Democratic ticket in November.

Healthy, happy 105th

Brown had been born.

Strout, according to MacNeill, was also one of the first women in the state to own a car. She drove her last vehicle, a 1936 Plymouth, into her 90s, until her license was revoked due to failing eyesight.

Nowadays, Strout, a modern-day version of the "Little Old Lady from Pasadena" made popular by the Beach Boys, is not quite as mobile, but she still gets out every week to bowl a few strings.

"She loves to bowl," MacNeill said. "I take her down to the West Newton Catholic Club. She bowls good. She can't see the pins, so she has to spot bowl. She just picks out a spot in the center of the lane and throws the ball."

Aside from the cake, Strout was given a trophy with the number 105. "Hey, that's my bowling average," she said.

As a reward for his friendship, Strout, who had long since outlived any family or friends, gave him her Lowell Avenue home and the Plymouth.

In addition to the other attention she garnered, Strout received a scroll from Board of Aldermen President Michael Malec honoring her as "the oldest living property taxpayer in the city of Newton."

"I never paid any taxes," she quipped. There was also a gift of a talking alarm clock with a male voice given by representatives of Bay Banks/Middlesex for being the oldest depositor.

Bumper sticker contest winner announced

NEWTON — The Newton Human Rights Commission is pleased to announce that the winner of its Human Rights Bumper Sticker Contest is Vicki Nielsen, an eighth grade student at Bigelow Junior High School.

The purpose of this contest is to promote and encourage "mutual understanding and respect among all persons in the City of Newton." The winning bumper sticker with "Newton, We Are Family" and accompanying graphic was felt by the Selection Committee to be an excellent example of the understanding and respect among Newton residents.

The bumper sticker is currently being printed and will be available for distribution at Springfest, May 18, Newton City Hall. The winner will be honored in a ceremony that day.

Firefighters' back pay in jeopardy fiscal 1985 back pay. The city has always paid full retroactive raises, he added.

"We've gone longer than this and gotten retroactive," he said. "If the city refused to pay ... they would have a serious situation on their hands."

He termed the law "ludicrous" if it in fact prevents municipal employees from collecting full back pay.

"The city has had use of that money which I'm sure they rollover and collect interest on," he pointed out. "It's the employees' money."

The union president said he could not speculate on whether the threat of lost retroactive pay would soften firefighters stand against the city's drug testing proposal.

"I only represent the union," he said. "I can't really comment wholesale for 243 members."

McArdle and other firefighters have termed the drug testing policy an invasion of privacy and an erosion of rights. Since it gives so much power to the fire chief, the policy would leave members open to harassment, he has said.

Negotiators will do everything they can to settle the contract before the July 1 deadline, said Richard Kelliher, the city's chief administrative officer.

"The city hasn't had to face this issue in the past," he said. "The law represents a serious obstacle."

The law may make it impossible for the city to grant fiscal 1985 back pay, Kelliher said. "I'm not sure whether it's a question of invoking the law," he observed. "This was a statute passed by the Legislature and it doesn't appear to have any local option in it."

Passed in 1973, the law seems designed to protect communities "against demands for retroactive salary that go back so far in time that they could seriously disrupt financial planning," Vance said.

'Spaced out' art is his specialty

By Howard Altman

WEST NEWTON — If you can see, then you probably have seen something painted by George Guzzi.

From movie posters and album covers to board games, television promotional campaigns and illustrations for magazines like Cosmopolitan and Redbook, his paintings, sketches and illustrations have been seen by millions. George Guzzi may not be a household name, but chances are there is some of his artwork in your house.

While it's commercial artwork that he and his wife Rita choose for a vocation, it is his paintings of the Air Force and space program that the 51-year-old Guzzi chooses for an avocation. Last week, he received honorable mention in a contest sponsored by the Smithsonian Institute's National Air and Space Museum for his dipiction of shuttle astronaut Dale Gardner's space walk. The painting of Gardner floating above earth with the blue haze of the atmosphere in the background was part of the museum's "Earth Views" exhibit.

"There were 600 people who sent in artwork for the competition," Guzzi says in his cluttered basement studio in the same West Newton house that "I was brought home from the hospital to." On the walls are pictures of Guzzi with the rich and famous, including a couple of shots with him and "the Columbus Clipper," Joe DiMaggio. On his desk are sketch pads containing artwork he has been commissioned to do for a coloring book about the Apollo 11 mission. There are coffee cans full of paint brushes, piles of photo albums and, of course, easels all over the room with oils, acrylics and watercolors. "I thought it was a tremendous honor that they considered mine. There were some terrific pieces that didn't get any awards."

Art has been part of Guzzi's life "since I was six." After four years at Tufts as a pre-med student, the call to create took over and he entered the Art Institute of Boston. It was there that he not only fine-tuned his talent, but he met his wife-to-be, Rita. She was a recent graduate who just happened to be teaching one of her first classes that Guzzi was taking as one of his first classes. It was a marriage, he says, that was "meant to be."

In 1967, the Air Force asked him to join its art program. Since then, he and his wife have travelled the globe, painting planes, pilots and installations. The subject of one of his sketches, an F-111 bomber at Lakenheath Air Force base in England, took part in the raid on Libya.

In 1983, Guzzi was asked to join the NASA Art Project (NAP). The program utilizes the skills of painters, illustrators, drafters and other visual disciplines to capture and commemorate man's bid to conquer "the final frontier."

More than just a commercial artist, Guzzi takes part in history, recording it not merely with tape or film, but with the trained eye and steady hand of a master. It is as if DaVinci were given a press pass and turned loose in the atomic age.

"There is nothing like being at a launch," Guzzi says of his visits to Cape Canavaral as part of NAP. "I was at one launch at night. It was dark, and then all of a sudden it was brighter than daylight. There was a tremendous roar as the space shuttle lifted off the pad. Above it were noises like firecrackers going off. My pant legs fluttered from the sheer power given off by the rocket going up. Everyone was hushed. Even people who had been with the space program 20 years told me that their stomachs knotted up in anticipation. After all, the shuttle booster has power equivalent to 23 Hoover dams. When you see the launch, experience the tremendous energy and think about that, you can't help but admire the courage of the astronauts who put their lives on the line."

It wasn't too long ago that we found out, via live television, just what can happen when the tremendously explosive potential of these vehicles is realized. Millions have mourned for the Challenger astronauts, but Guzzi says the artist-subject relationship that he built up with the seven shuttle passengers brought the tragedy out of the television and into his basement studio where he painted their portraits.

"When you paint somebody," he says, holding up a painting of Challenger Commander Richard Scobee, then pointing to a group portrait, "you form an intimate bond. When I found out about the explosion, I felt a sense of personal loss. It really hurt us when they got killed."

Despite the disaster, Guzzi is confident space exploration will continue.

"It is really sad that it took seven people to give their lives before we realized how dangerous space travel is and how courageous the astronauts are. If reaction by the nation is any guide, we will get this behind us and get back out in space. NASA has received millions of letters of sympathy and encouragement."

He adds that he has tinkered with the idea of going "out there" himself.

"As an artist," he says, "I think it would be a tremendous opportunity to be able to see the earth from the space shuttle. After the disaster, I hesitated a little bit, but I think that, if offered the chance, I would go. I have seen some great events: Roger Maris' 61st home run in Yankee Stadium, the Boston Celtics first championship ever, Yaz' 3,000th hit. But, just seeing one launch paled all those experiences. To actually take off myself would be awesome."

Celtics among youths cited

By Howard Altman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Casting aside their various differences, the 21 city legislators attending Monday night's Board of Aldermen meeting rose in unison as members of the Newton Celtics and winners of the eighth annual Youth Awards were introduced in the aldermanic chambers.

The emotional ceremony, which took place before the regularly scheduled Board of Aldermen meeting, was held to honor the developmentally disabled athletes and those who have helped make it easier for them to be involved in sports.

Alderman Richard Bullwinkle presented the hoopsters with a plaque congratulating them on a successful season and wishing them luck in the Bay State Special Olympic games this summer.

Taking center stage, one of the cagers summed up the confidence they gained from being involved with sports.

"We're the greatest," he said. "If you don't believe that," Bullwinkle replied, "no one will."

After the Newton Celtics were given their plaque, Parks and Recreation Commissioner Russell Halloran and Board President Michael Malec introduced award winners Sally and Nicholas Pasquarosa, Stephanie Kelsey, Randall Johnson and Matthew Swenssen.

The Pasquarosas won the Judge Franklin N. Flaschner Award for adults over 25. Named for the former alderman and Chief Justice of the Massachusetts District Court, the Flaschner Award honors the couple for their contribution to Newton youth sports.

Both have been working with youth football, baseball and basketball for more than 20 years.

"We are really thrilled to get this award," Sally Pasquarosa said. "I always thought awards were something other people got."

Kelsey, 21, won the Judge Julian Yesley Young Adult award. Named for the former Chief Justice of the Newton District Court, the award honors Kelsey for helping the developmentally disabled take part in the Special Olympic swimming program.

"Stephanie has dedicated every Sunday afternoon for the last two years to training athletes," Malec said. "As a result of her time and commitment, she has developed 10 very limited swimmers into competitive athletes who have experienced challenge and success."

Johnson, 17, won the Police Youth Officer Robert Braceland Senior Youth Award for his help in rescuing children from a fire at the Newton North High School pool.

Named for the late officer who served the department for more than 20 years, the Braceland award also honors Johnson's involvement in the Myrtle Baptist Church and the Boy Scouts.

For volunteering his time to teach developmentally disabled children how to swim, Swenssen, 11, won the Irene Bickelman Junior Youth Award.

The award, commemorating the work of the former Weeks Junior High School teacher, honors Swenssen for providing a role model to a group of children learning a new skill.

Retirement Board member rejects divestment pitch

The Retirement Board on April 29 rejected demands that it purge the fund of those investments. Members decided instead to let the city's 3,000 present and past employees advise them first by voting on the issue, since the pension fund belongs to them.

Divestment proponents - including Alderman Matthew Jefferson, State Rep. David Cohen, State Senator Jack Backman and more than 20 Newton North High School students - are now trying to seize the issue from the Retirement Board. Jefferson has asked the Board of Aldermen to support a home rule petition that would force divestiture by Dec. 31, 1987.

The aldermanic Finance Committee on Monday voted to support Jefferson's petition. The full board is expected to take up the matter June 2. If they adopt it, the petition then must be approved by the state Legislature.

Jefferson challenged the Retirement Board's decision to let present and past municipal employees have an advisory vote. The board has never asked for such a vote in the past, he said.

In response, Marino said the board has never before had to deal with such a controversial issue. Aldermen, themselves, are now breaking precedent by "interjecting" themselves into a Retirement Board issue, he said.

Marino stressed the employee vote is simply advisory. "If 1,600 said to divest and 1,400 said no, I wouldn't say it's a groundswell, but I'd certainly consider divesting," he observed. "I think it's the employees money."

Marino said the divestiture movement across the nation would hurt the cause of black South Africans if it succeeded in removing responsible U.S. companies from that nation.

He cited a study which states American companies adhering to the Sullivan principles pay higher salaries and have more employment, training and advancement opportunities for blacks than other businesses in South Africa. He added, however, there is no way to tell if that report is biased.

"We are assuming those companies are acting for the moral good of the people of South Africa, just as they do for the people of the United States," he said.

"If you assume those companies are twentieth century slave traders, let's divest yesterday," said Marino.

Many observers of the South African situation contend the Sullivan principles have not changed conditions for that nation's blacks. Leon Sullivan himself has called on companies to leave South Africa by May 1987 should apartheid still exist.

If Sullivan does in fact demand companies to leave next year, Marino said he will support divestment. "By virtue of our vote, we'll have to divest," he pointed out, adding he was speaking for himself and not the entire Retirment Board.

Marino termed "absurd" Backman's charge that he was being duped by propaganda from South African government lobbyists. Backman, D-Newton/Brookline, made the charge during the April 30 Retirement Board meeting after Marino said statistics show divested portfolios are more "risky and volatile" than non-divested ones.

"The government of South Africa could care less what the city of Newton does," Marino contended. "We don't invest in South Africa. We invest in American businesses that do business in South Africa."

BC grads get an inspirational sendoff

"The Marcos regime was very angry at that. They thought that I was teaching the people to steal their money."

Sin said there was massive fraud in the voting and he gathered the bishops, began a fast and issued a statement condemning the election. That was preamble to the confrontation beginning Feb. 23.

The cardinal said the final action was the departure of former president Ferdinand Marcos from Malacanang Palace.

He noted that Mrs. Aquino and her husband, Benigno, lived in exile for three year across Commonweaith Avenue from the Boston College campus.

Afterward, under the hot sun in Alumni Stadium, four seniors — best buddies since they met in a freshman dorm four years ago — paused a moment to reflect on their college careers at BC and looked toward the future with great excitement.

"This is probably the most important day of my life," Frank Garcia, a senior from Ft. Lauderdale, said. "It was definitely worth the $50,000 I spent to come here."

One of his friends, Mark Seman, of Kingston, Penn., agreed, but added he was anxious to get his career started and enter the "real world."

"It's been a good four years, but I'm ready to go," the 21-year-old graduate said. "I certainly won't forget all the good times I had at this school."

Dave Newsham, an economics major said "it feels great" to be graduating, adding that he was excited about starting his new job at an investment firm later this summer.

Perhaps Mario Robles, a biology major from Bristol R.I., summed up the feelings of the four most accurately when he said, "I will never forget these guys. I can still remember when we met in the dorm four years ago. Over the years, we've remained the best of friends, and I know we're going to stay in touch."

Veterans Council plans Memorial Day activities

NEWTON — The annual Memorial Day observances and parade will be conducted within the City of Newton on Monday, May 26, under the direction of the officers and member organizations of the Newton Veterans Council.

Thomas A. Medaglia, past commander of Nonantum Post No. 440, American Legion, has been appointed as adjutant General for the Memorial Day Activities and Carleton P. Merrill, past commander of Newton Post 48, American Legion and present vice commander of Newton Post No. 1664 Veterans of Foreign Wars, has been appointed as the parade adjutant. Following the tradition of past years, Mayor Theodore D. Mann has been appointed as chief of staff.

The honorary chiefs of staff will be former Newton mayor Howard Whitmore and former mayor Monte G. Basbas, the present presiding justice of the Newton District Court. The Honorary Adjutant General will be the recently appointed Israel Trieger, a 91-year-old World War I veteran and a member of Newton Post 211, Jewish War Veterans.

Marshals appointed for this year's Memorial Day activities are Rev. William Lowe, Church of the Messiah in Auburndale and Fr. Anthony Moore, St. Bernard's Church, West Newton.

The Newton Veterans Council will conduct a Memorial Service at the Newton Cemetery Veterans Lot on Monday morning, May 26, at 10 a.m. to which all members of the public are invited to attend. Following the service, at which the Gold Star Mothers and the Widows of World War I will be honored guests, a wreath-laying ceremony will be held at the Newton Memorial to Newton Citizens of All Wars which is located at the corner of Walnut Street and Commonwealth Avenue in front of Newton City Hall.

At 1 p.m. the Newton Veterans Council, along with city and state officials and members of Newton veterans organization, will conduct a Memorial Service at the new Vietnam Veterans Memorial which is located on Washington Street, Newton, opposite the Jackson Homestead.

Following this service, the parade units will form on Jackson Road, and all units will proceed up Washington Street to Newtonville Square, south on Walnut Street to Commonwealth Avenue where all units will "Pass-In-Review" on Commonwealth Avenue next to Newton City Hall. Following the parade, all units will join with Newton citizens in front of the Newton War Memorial Building, at the site of the "Living Memorial Garden" where a Memorial Service will be held and the annual Memorial Day address given by Mayor Theodore D. Mann. Again this year the Newton Veterans Council will have an "Avenue of Flags" along Walnut Street from Newtonville Square to Newton City Hall.

Marching along with the League of Women Voters of Newton will be members of Newton Lodge of Elks No. 1327, members of cub packs and scout units of Norumbega Council and scout units of Patriot Trail Girl Scouts, the Blue Knights Law Enforcement Motorcycle Honor Guard, the Newton Parks and Recreation Twirlers under the direction of Judy Dore, the Reading Youth BatonColor Guard, banner carriers and flag line and members of the Newton Boys' and Girls' Clubs.

Popular with Newton citizens in past years, the parade will also feature the Newton Fire Department Color Guard and detail the Newton Police Department.

Along with the Waltham American Legion Band other parade musical units will be the Redmen's Band of Wakefield, the Newton North High School Marching Band, the Stuart Highland Pipe Band, the North Reading High School Marching Band and Color Guard, and the Holy Name Band of West Roxbury, who have several times been named the championship band of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

In preparation for the annual Memorial Day activities the Newton Veterans Council have had three benches installed at the location of the "Living Memorial Garden."

Further, the two flag poles in front of the Newton War Memorial Building have been scraped, primed, and completely repainted and the two damaged flagpoles at the Newton Memorial To Citizens of All Wars and at the new Newton Cemetery Veterans lot have been replaced with new poles in time for the annual Memorial Day activities.

Mayor's 12th Prayer Breakfast May 22

NEWTON — The Twelfth Newton Mayor's Community Prayer Breakfast will be held on Thursday, May 22, at 7:45 a.m. at McElroy Commons Dining Room, Boston College, Newton.

This year the 1986 Newton Centennial Medallion will be presented by Mayor Theodore D. Mann to three outstanding and dedicated members of our community.

The Honorable Wendell R. Bauckman has served the Newton Community as a member of the Board of Alderman for 44 years, during which time he was president of the Board for 20 years. For the last 18 years he has been president emeritus. In addition, he has been community active in many organizations.

The Honorable Robert L. Tennant has been a member of the Board of Alderman for 23 years and is well-known for his involvement in a variety of service and civic organizations. His commitment to the community spans, business, fraternal, veterans service and youth organizations.

Eloise K. Houghton has long been recognized in Newton, defending the disadvantaged. A founder and Board of Director of the Newton Community Development Foundation, past President of Church Women United, Founder of The Newton Times, and a strong advocate of human rights for equal housing, education, and employment.

The principal address will be delivered by Dr. Max Stackhouse, Professor of Christian Social Ethics at Andover Newton Theological School.

A special presentation will be made in the memory of Andrew Wolf, the Founder and Director of the All Newton Music School.

D.A.V. installs officers

NEWTON — At its annual installation meeting, the Disabled American Veterans invited more veterans to join the Willam J. Farrell Post 23, and announced newly elected officers.

The new chief is Commander Joseph A. Alexander, a past president and present Executive Director of the Newton Taxpayers' Association.

The following were elected as officers: Sr. Vice Commander-Stanley E. Fields; Jr. Vice Commander-Edward Aucoin; Adjutant-Stanley E. Fields; Treasurer-John J. Sturniolo; Judge Advocate-Francis Linnehan; Chaplain-Arthur Homsy; Trustees-Vicent DiGironomo (3 yrs.), Benjamin Oriel (2 yrs.), Saul Klashman (1 yr.); State Executive Committeemen-John Sturniolo, Stanley E. Fields (alternate).

Alexander praised Past Commander DiGironimo, Adjutant Fields, and Treasurer Sturniolo for their leadership and diligence in promoting the activities of the organization. Trustees and two-term past Commander Salu Klashman were similarly cited for his work with Post 23 and as a founder, treasurer and current president of the Newton Veterans Council.

The D.A.V. helps see to it that veterans with service-connected disabilities are better cared for. All veterans are invited to help work toward this cause. Veterans wishing to join are invited to phone Mr. Stanley Fields at 332-9259 or leave a message with the Veterans office at Newton City Hall. Present membership is 673, next year's goal is 800.

Channel 2 Auction donators honored

NEWTON — A tip of the hat will be given to area volunteers, merchants, and others who have donated to this year's Channel 2 Auction on Thursday, June 5.

Kate Grace of West Newton, area chairman for Newton, will be the auctioneer, and will appear between 5:30-7 p.m. on Thursday, June 5.

During the nine-day Auction, which concludes on Saturday, June 7, more than 50 communities in the state and New Hampshire will be honored for their contributions and donations to this major fund-raising event for Boston's PBS station, WGBH.

A display, presenting representative donations from this area, will be put up for high bid during the salute.

Jewels & Gems
BY CAROL
THE GOLD LADY
GEM CLEANING

Diamonds possess superior hardness. This adds immeasurably to their ability to maintain their high luster, brilliancy and fire. However, they should be kept clean. Oil and grease have an attraction to diamonds which leads to a film deposit on the stone. Diamond jewelry should be professionally cleaned and checked at least once a year. The jeweler will take this opportunity to check the gem's mounting and make sure that it is secure in its setting. In between professional cleanings, diamonds may be scrubbed with a commercial jewelry cleaner or with a solution of three parts water, one part ammonia, and one part mild detergent. Home ultrasonic units will clean diamonds satisfactorily. However, if other gems are involved, consult your jeweler.

Jewelry is fun to wear and great for investments. So take care of your fine pieces by coming in to CAROL "THE GOLD LADY". With a yearly cleaning your jewelry can turn into heirloom pieces. If you already own heirlooms we can reset them into modern pieces. We're your full service jewelry store and can assist you with all your purchases. Inquire about our exclusive 144 facet diamond. We're at 109 Dalby St., Newton and are open Tues., Wed., Sat. 10-6; Thurs. & Fri. til 9. Tel. 332-5935.

HINT:
With diamonds, "perfect" means free from any blemish or inclusion when viewed under 10-power magnification.

Police briefs

Tires, rims taken from Wash. St. shop

NEWTONVILLE - Four Michelin radial tires and rims valued at about $1,000 were stolen from Clark & White on Washington Street Monday night, police said.

Car and baseball equipment stolen

NEWTON HIGHLANDS - A 1978 Plymouth Volare with $1,000 worth of baseball equipment and tools was stolen from Needham Street last Monday night, police said.

Auto stolen from Washington Street

WEST NEWTON - A 1973 Chevrolet station wagon was stolen from the Chevron gas station on Washington Street last Monday night, police said.

Seismograph and senser stolen off site

CHESTNUT HILL - An $8,000 seismograph and a $2,000 sound pressure senser were stolen from a construction site at the intersection of Route 9 and Florence Street last Tuesday afternoon, police said. The equipment belongs to Goldberg - Zoino & Associates.

Vandals damage door with firecrackers

WEST NEWTON - Vandals threw firecrackers inside the storm door of a Parmenter Road home last Monday night and damaged the front door with burn marks, police said.

$100 stolen from laundromat register

NEWTON -Thieves broke into One Stop laundromat on Lexingtor Street and stole $100 from the cash register, police said. Entrance was gained through the rear bulkhead doors.

Red dye smoke bomb damages home

WEST NEWTON - A smoke bomb was thrown through the window of a Milo Street home last Monday morning and the floors, walls and ceilings were damaged with red dye, police said. The resident managed to cover the bomb with paper and brought it to the front porch. Police said it is uncertain whether the bomb was thrown or shot through the window.

Vandals throw rock thorugh window

WABAN - Vandals threw a rock through the window of a Varick Road home last Monday night, police said. The resident heard the breaking glass and saw a car take off when she looked out the window.

$200 stolen from Comm. Ave. bakery

NEWTON - Tuler's Bakery on Commonwealth Avenue was broken into last Monday and $200 cash was stolen from a cabinet at the front of the store, police said. The intruders forced the rear door open.

Youths injured in accident, driver cited

NEWTON - Three local youths were injured in a car accident on Cabot Street last Monday evening when their car crashed into an Edison pole. They were all treated and released from Newton-Wellesley Hospital. A 17-year-old Newton youth, driving the 1979 Dodge sedan, told police he swerved off the road attempting to avoid another car. He was cited for operating to endanger, police said.

The operator was treated for facial and head injuries. A 15-year-old passenger was treated for arm, leg and head injuries and his 17-year-old brother was treated for lip injuries.

Safety precautions set for prom night

By Maureen Azzato
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The high school faculties are taking every precaution to make sure this year's proms are safe and a night that seniors will remember.

"Kids do get killed on these nights that are supposed to be their final send-off," Newton North Senior Faculty Advisor David Geikie said. "We're trying to urge kids, in a positive way, to be careful on this particularly dangerous night."

Geikie said there is only so much the schools can do — the rest is up to the students and parents. He said the school is trying to discourage parents from allowing their children to rent rooms in the hotel after the prom. Letters have been sent to parents stating the schools do not think it is an "appropriate activity."

"If the parents want to throw parties for the kids we're hoping they will take place in the home with parents on hand," Geikie said.

The hotel staff and house detectives have agreed to tell prom chaperones if any students attempt to rent rooms. "They will stop them from getting their own rooms, but as you know there is only so much control we have," Geikie said. "If the kids really want to do something they probably will. We're depending on parents to reinforce their children's behavior."

When seniors pick up their prom tickets, they will also get a card with hotline number 965-5908 in case they need a ride if they have had too much to drink. Key chains with the slogan "Friends Don't Let Friends Drive Drunk" will also be given out to each senior.

This year the school has sent contracts to junior and seniors that both the parents and students sign. It is an agreement that their child will call, no questions asked, if they are in need of a ride. It is also intended to encourage dialogue on the issue of drinking and driving.

"Two students last year used the hotline number for help when they were stranded. These are the kids we want to help," Geikie said. "If they don't want to call their parents, there are people in the community who care and sign up for on-call duty."

"This is a night they want to remember and you can't remember if your drunk," he said. "Don't wreck it. I hope parents have enough sense to take every precaution and exercise some authority over the kids. They're young adults. They're not adults yet."

Newton South Faculty Advisor Ernie Chamberlain said seniors will be required to see a movie and attend an assembly concerning drinking and driving before the prom.

"We tried to make this an ongoing education rather than a crash course before the prom," he said. "We were not as fortunate in getting a hotel early in the week. Unfortunately our prom is on a Thursday."

The school thought it appropriate not to give prom glasses as the party favor when they are trying to discourage drinking, he said. This year they bought "fancy keychains."

Both proms will be heavily chaperoned and intoxicated persons will not be allowed in. If liquor is found on a person, it will be confiscated and the student will be thrown out of the prom, Geikie said.

"There is going to be that inevitable time that a tragedy will happen," he said. "Thank God it hasn't happened yet and I hope it never does. I want these kids to remember this night for the rest of their lives."

Local rep reactions differ on drug test question

By Howard Altman
Staff Writer

BOSTON — While one of Newton's state representative says he opposes random drug testing, two of his Garden City colleagues on Beacon Hill say they need more time to evaluate a bill introduced this week by the Boston Police Patrolmen's Association (BPAA) calling for a ban on drug testing.

"I think that the use of random drug testing represents a serious threat to the rights of all citizens," Rep. David Cohen (D-Newton) says. "It goes against the right to be protected from unreasonable search and siezures."

Cohen says drug testing was not something the Continental Congress had in mind more than 200 years ago.

"When you think of it," he says of drug tests, "it is kind of a degrading situation to be forced to lower your pants as a price for continuing at any job. I can't imagine our founding fathers having that in mind when they drafted the constitution."

Though he was reluctant to comment on the current negotiations between the city and the fire department that include haggling over drug testing language, Cohen says the same rules apply for public safety officers and private citizens.

"What applies in general to employees and people throughout the country applies specifically to our public safety officers."

While he says he can support some form of testing if probable cause can be proved, Cohen says relying strictly on urine testing is a dangerous principle.

"The reliability of the test is an issue," he says. "From what I have heard, the error rate is as high as 50 percent. It is unfair to have a person's job, his livelyhood, depend on the outcome of a test that is only 50 percent reliable. It doesn't do the public any good to have those kinds of unreliable tests going on. You might be getting rid of a competent police officer who gave a false positive on his urine test."

He adds that his collegues will take their time before making any decision on the bill. It is currently being held by the House Commerce and Labor Committee pending a study report, due to the complexity of the issue. In addition, Cohen says legislators are awaiting the results of a lawsuit brought by the BPPA challenging Commissioner Francis Roache's recent decision to subject officers to drug testing.

Rep. Susan Schur disagrees somewhat with Cohen's point about police being in the same category with any other employee.

"I haven't really looked at the bill yet and I am not sure if it is necessary to solve this problem in the legislature," she says. "I can see how it is a legitimate concern that there are higher standards and higher expectations for police officers because they have to enforce those laws concerning drugs."

Rep. Joseph DeNucci says he will not comment on the bill until after the Commerce and Labor Committee makes their report.

Vegetables that are heirlooms

By Country Home

Some old-time varieties of vegetables are quite literally heirlooms, according to Country Home magazine. They have been passed from one generation to the next, just like grandmother's china.

Aunt Mary's sweet corn, for example, is an unusually toothsome variety that her green-thumbed nephew has been growing ever since Mary herself gave him seed during the Depression. Unfortunately, other old standby varieties do not receive the care and attention needed to prevent them from becoming endangered species.

Many seed companies drop older varieties in favor of newer and more profitable hybrids and patented vegetables. Kent Whealy, director of the Seed Savers Exchange in Decorah, Iowa, estimates 80 percent of the varieties sold at the turn of the century are now extinct.

Does that matter? Haven't those varieties been replaced by new and better vegetables? In some cases, yes. New varieties with disease resistance and compact growing habits are a boon to home gardeners. Yet many of the old varieties are exceptional in their own ways, and those traits have won them a loyal following among gardeners who think heirloom vegetables are worthy of preservation.

Simple curiosity prompts many gardeners to grow their first heirloom vegetables. They can't help wondering if Howling Mob sweet corn is really delicious enough to incite riots. Or, they risk their first taste of purple carrots, grown for centuries in the Middle East, and are pleasantly surprised by the marvelous mellow flavor.

Flavor is a big lure for gardeners of old varieties. Many find modern vegetables too sweet and bland. They prefer the rich taste of the Brandywine tomato or the hearty, old-fashioned flavor of the Black Valentine bean.

The notion that heirloom varieties taste better than new ones is hotly disputed by breeders. They admit, however, the cost of developing a new fruit or vegetable forces them to target the taste buds of the largest possible consumer group. The result is sometimes an inoffensive flavor that doesn't displease — or excite — anyone.

Heirloom vegetables satisfy the current craving for unusual-looking foods. Gourmet gardeners like to startle their dinner guests with salads made from the beet-red leaves of Redhead lettuce or the magenta crinkles of Ornamental kale. When other cooks are content with ordinary cherry tomatoes, these gardeners enliven their dishes with teeny Red Currant or Yellow Marble tomatoes. And they can't resist novelties like the All-Blue potato or the curly Crescent bean.

Of course, garden vegetables can't get by on good looks alone. They also have to grow eagerly. Here heirloom varieties excel because, in most instances, they have had to survive in the varied conditions of everyday gardens.

Many gardeners who enjoy their unusual produce gather garden seed year after year. Often without realizing it, these gardeners are fine-tuning their varieties to produce abundantly in the local climate without needing special favors such as irrigation, fertilizer or pesticides.

Historical tributes in seed catalogs may tempt some gardeners to sample an old variety, but the connection can be much more personal. Whether a gardener choose to grow old vegetable varieties out of curiosity about their performance or as a commitment to their preservation, the first step is finding an heirloom variety. People lucky enough to turn up seeds from a relative's garden should reward themselves by trying to determine the plant's history — what part of the world the plant originally came from, how long it's been in the family, and what growing conditions it prefers.

To locate regionally adapted varieties, talk to ribbon winners at the county fair, managers of local farmers' markets, or the most productive backyard gardener in your neighborhood. Regional seed companies are also excellent sources. Many of these companies offer a wide assortment of contemporary varieties as well as a good selection of old ones — anything that thrives under local conditions.

Finding an heirloom variety requires perseverance — some gardeners have spent decades looking for fondly remembered vegetables whose seeds slipped through their fingers. While searching, master the knack of saving seeds so you'll be able to preserve your heirloom vegetable's lineage once you establish it in your garden.

The foundation of this nationwide interest is an organization called the Seed Savers Exchange. The exchange originated in 1975 in Decorah, Iowa, through the work of gardener Kent Whealy. The exchange is not a seed company but a preservation project comprising gardeners who are keeping alive old and unusual varieties. Their annual yearbook lists seeds that members have available for trade as well as varieties they want to find.

Variety in furniture is trend

By Barbara Mayer
AP Newsfeatures

The furniture industry has a message for the American public: It's OK to mix and match.

Gone are the days when an ability to distinguish between Louis XV and Louis XVI could cause social embarrassment. At the recently concluded spring furniture market in High Point, N.C., where new styles are introduced to the nation's retailers, a number of manufacturers did the mixing themselves by combining a variety of furniture styles within a single collection.

"Now that we are coming towards the end of the 20th century, we can look back and select the best of it," explained designer Jay Spectre, whose new collection for Century Furniture combines oversized upholstered seating with wood funiture bearing touches of Art Deco and streamlined 1930s Hollywood modern. It was one of a number of new collections that reveal a new devil-may-care attitude about accurately-reproduced furniture and accessories.

"Some people live in one room; some people live in four rooms. Our goal is to provide choices people feel comfortable with so they can make their homes look as they wish," said Bettye Martin, president of Gear.

"People today have jeans and very formal clothing and feel comfortable in both." That's why the furniture designed by Gear for Hickory Manufacturing mixes styles and prices with abandon. A sofa in the collection, for example, retails for about $3,000, while a coffee table may sell for only a few hundred.

Choice was also seen in informal transitional furniture that can take on a different character through a change of fabric and accessories. Large overscaled pieces in the light wood finishes that dominated among style leaders could suggest the American Southwest or a European country farmhouse. Another indication of the desire to please was the large number of specialized storage furniture for home entertainment components.

In line with the return to tradition and conservatism many observers find prevalent in all areas of Americn society, design themes based on the past dominated introductions. Manufacturers borrowed freely from the 18th, 19th and early 20th centuries.

Furniture designer Roland Carter offered some clues to those who enjoy guessing the trends of the future.

"Look at what collectors are buying and museums are showing today. That's what manufacturers will be making tomorrow," he said. Since the hot collectible today appears to be Art Deco furniture, in Carter's opinion, look for this style to sweep the market in five years or so. Don't expect pure style, however, he warned. "We Americans like to live with the past, but not in it."

Supporting Carter's argument, copies of high-priced 19th-century styles were ubiquitous. Designers attending the market pointed out that the reproductions of grand Empire-style furnishing seen at Baker's showroom and of early 19th-century American pieces at Hickory Chair and late 19th-century pieces based on the designs of the arts and crafts era at Pennsylvania House will be useful. It has become prohibitively expensive to buy these antiques.

The 19th century also shone in upholstered furniture introductions. Traditionally, the spring market concentrates on upholstery and this season 19th-century florals, formal brocades and striped silk or silk-like synthetics were seen in many showrooms.

Pastel-colored fabrics continued to look great, but they were not the only look. Jewel tones and brilliant colors such as turquoise and rose red turned up in showrooms such as Thayer-Coggins together.

As for accessories such as lamps, clocks and vases, they supported the furniture introductions with numerous examples of Art Deco and traditional 19th-century pieces.

The public will get a chance to look at the merchandise on view at the market this summer and fall.

Rest easy on good mattress

By Editors of Consumer Reports

Whether or not you get a good night's sleep depends on a number of factors. Some of these, like anxiety about work or family problem, can be modified to a degree.

On the other hand, what kind of mattress you use is totally within your control. But which type and what brand should you choose?

The traditional mattress set consists of an innerspring mattress and a box spring or some other foundation. Mattresses vary widely in firmness and conformity, and only you can tell how much of each is comfortable for you.

A properly conforming mattress should mold itself to the shape of your body and readjust quickly as your position changes.

A too-soft or too-firm mattress set can leave you with aches and pains in the morning or even, over a period of time, with a bad back.

Some models are labeled with words like Firm, Extra Firm or Super Firm, but since different makers measure firmness in different ways, these descriptions are helpful only in comparing models within a brand line.

The only way to find a comfortable mattress is to lie down on the job. Try out model after model to discover what level of firmness and conformity suits you best. How comfortably does the mattress mold itself to the shape of your body? Don't be shy.

Recently, Consumer Reports' engineers tested the structural integrity of 32 twin-sized mattress sets using an odd-looking device equipped with a buttocks-shaped ram. The machine delivered 100,000 strokes to the center of each mattress set, where a sleeper's weight is concentrated. Then it delivered 25,000 strokes to an edge, where a person might sit.

Only six came through the ordeal without structural damage and with only minor changes in overall firmness. The six in order of increasing price are: The Simmons Beautyrest Royalty, the Ethan Allan Exquisite, Bassett Dreammaker Ultima, Restonic Vitality Sup-r-posture, Sears-O-Pedic Imperial Two catalog number 73272 and, the Sears-O-Pedic Imperial Elite catalog number 73582.

The Restonic Vitality Sup-r-posture was judged the firmest in the center where a sleeper's weight is concentrated and on its edges where a person might sit. The Sears-O-Pedic Imperial Elite was the softest throughout. Both were judged average in conformity.

The top-rated twin-sized mattress sets carry list prices that range from $420 to $800. However, Consumer Reports' experts suggest you never buy at list price. Bedding is frequently marked down by as much as 50 percent. Watch for the ads, especially around holidays.

Caring for antique wood finishes

By Better Homes and Gardens
A Meredith Magazine

The beauty and value of a fine wood antique depends largely on how well its finish has been cared for over the years.

With proper care, a finish need never be replaced, advises Better Homes and Gardens Traditional Home.

The most common finishes found on antique furniture are waxes, oils, shellacs and varnishes. Not only do these finishes enhance the wood's grain and color, but they also protect the wood from moisture and heat changes that can cause serious damage. Finishes also seal the wood pores against dirt and grime.

Protecting wood

In order for a finish to protect the wood, the finish itself must be protected. This can be done by cleaning and polishing the finish with a wax, an oil or a feeder product (a liquid mixture of wax or oil and an absorption promoter).

Many people prefer waxes because they're easy to apply and leave a brilliant shine. You can find waxes in liquid, aerosol spray and paste forms. Look for products that contain carnauba wax, a substance from a Brazilian palm tree. Carnauba wax is highly durable and produces a glossy shine when rubbed.

Another reliable furniture polish is beeswax. Various polishes containing beeswax are available in paint and hardware stores. You can make your own polish by mixing two parts melted beeswax with one part turpentine.

Oils such as tung, linseed and lemon oil have been used for centuries to preserve and polish furniture finishes. They're often mixed with absorption promoters, so they actually sink into the wood pores rather than remain on top as waxes do. Oils leave a lustrous shine that's softer than a wax shine, and they provide protection against moisture. Over time, however, they tend to darken the wood slightly.

Feeders also soak into the wood, producing a soft shine and providing protection against moisture. Like oils, feeders tend to darken wood. Certain woods, such as cherry, are more sensitive than others to this darkening effect.

Regardless of which cleaner-polisher you choose, always use the same type on a piece of furniture. Surfaces that are accustomed to one type won't accept another. An oil or a feeder won't soak into a finish that has been previously waxed, and a wax will break up if placed on a finish that has been treated with an oil or a feeder.

If you don't know what type of cleaner-polisher has been used on a piece, apply small amounts of an oil, a wax and a feeder on an inconspicuous spot. One of the three should be accepted by the wood.

How often you need to clean and polish your antiques depends on several factors, including the type of heating and cooling system in your home, your geographical location, and the type of cleaner-polisher you're using.

Generally, a spray of liquid wax should be applied weekly, while a paste wax is more durable and can last as long as four weeks. To tell if another layer of paste wax is needed, buff the old finish with a soft cloth. If this fails to restore shine and smoothness to the finish, it's time for a new coat of wax. Apply oils or feeders to antiques as often as you clean other wood furnishings.

Other preventive measures can help keep antique wood furnishings and their finishes in good shape. Provide the proper environment for your antiques, paying close attention to heat, humidity and light.

Room temperatures should be kept as constant as possible. When your heating system is in use, place pieces away from heat sources. Direct heat can damage the finish and rob the wood of vital moisture.

It's also important to maintain a relative humidity level of about 55 percent at 65 degrees, especially during winter months, when central heating removes much of the moisture from the air.

Direct sunlight and artificial light are enemies of fine antiques. Shield your wood furnishings from over-exposure to both.

You can refinish the piece yourself. If you've never refinished furniture in the past, begin by reading books on the subject. Also talk with expert refinishers of antiques to find out what products and techniques work best for them.

Filter ashtrays are smoky

By the Editors of
Consumers Reports

Trapping cigarette smoke at the source sounds more efficient than cleaning the air in an entire room.

So the Smoke Trapper and the Pollenex Smoke Grabber claim they head the problem off at the pass.

Priced around $20, the two unusual ashtrays billed for their smoke-eating properties use a small, battery-powered fan to pull smoke through a filter.

The Smoke Trapper is a cylindrical device with the fan on top and a hood to direct the filtered air. Burning cigarettes are placed in an opening at the base of the unit.

The Smoke Grabber has the ashtray portion on top with the fan on the bottom of the device.

Each device was tested separately by Consumer Reports' engineers in a smoke-free room.

A lit cigarette was allowed to burn down in each ashtray. Then nine staffers who are nonsmokers were asked to enter the room a few minutes later and sniff the air.

As controls, the engineers ran the same test using a plain ashtray, and in a room that had been cleared of cigarette smoke.

The panelists had no difficulty telling the difference between a smoke-free room and a smoky one.

But they judged that a cigarette left in either of the smoke-removing ashtrays made the room just as smelly as a cigarette that burned out in a plain ashtray. Their noses couldn't detect a difference.

TEEN SUICIDE

Tough teen years no breakfast club

A vulnerable period plagued by pressures

By Jeff Peterson
In Focus Editor

In the searing soul-searching which follows any suicide, the questions most asked by survivors surely must be: "Why here?" and "Why now?"

The answers are not easy to come by. By its very nature, suicide is spurred by a swirling cacapohny of psychological, social and emotional factors. It has been blamed on everything from acid rain to red dye No. 7. It may have its roots in heredity or genetics. It may be plain bad luck.

As Dr. Jacobs points out, "We just don't know."

Dr. Pamela Cantor of Chestnut Hill is president of the American Association of Suicidology and vice-chairwoman of the national Committee on Youth Suicide Prevention. She agrees that explanations for the increase in teen suicide must be "all speculation" at this point. But after 14 years of working with troubled youth, she offers a number of possible answers.

"Kids are having to grow up much too soon and much too quickly," Cantor says. "They are asked to take on the roles of adults when they are psychologically still kids."

Not only are they maturing earlier biologically, she says, but younger teens are presented with role models that they are not equipped to handle.

The teen years are a vulnerable period because of many changes that are going on. For those who don't have the strength to deal with it, these years can be a very painful time.

In a social context, this period is often beset with other serious problems identified as barometers of social stress — including drug and alcohol abuse, delinquency and crime.

According to Dr. Herbert Hendin, director of the Center for Psychosocial Studies at New York Medical College, there is "convincing evidence" that one source of stress among young people relates to the increased percentage of young people in the population between 1955-1980. Young people face tougher odds in competing with each other for a limited number of new and challenging positions. In essence, this increases the competition for the desirable adult options — college, well-paying jobs, etc. — resulting in increased stress.

According to Dr. Linda Shapiro, director of counseling services at Newton North High School, unrealistically high standards are another factor. These standards can be from overly-demanding parents — or from the teens themselves. For some, Shapiro says, anything less than an A on a report card may as well be an F.

"Most teens tend to think in terms of black and white, success or failure, champion or loser," she says.

Shapiro also feels the media must take its share of the blame for pushing images of physical perfection — lean, leggy, blond-haired beauties sporting clear complexions and Pepsodent smiles — "who look so much better than these kids feel inside."

The loss of a young love, which some adults may look back on with nostalgia, can be a deadly serious matter to an adolescent. Rock star Billy Joel, who donated the proceeds from his record, "You're Only Human," to National Youth Suicide Prevention, confessed that this was one of the factors that brought him to the brink of suicide years ago.

"Everyone gets blue and has broken love relations," says Cantor. "But you have to look at the severity, duration, and appropriateness of the response.

"One adolescent might go to bed and cry for 12 hours, then get up the next day and go back to school and be all right. Another might continue to rant and rave about throwing himself under a train. There's a difference."

Indeed there is. Another difference — and a particularly disturbing one at that — is that the recent wave of young suicides been most visible among white, middle-class teens. Not troubled youths with a history of problems, but kids from upwardly mobile families who would seem to have everything going for them.

Such cases are difficult to diagnose, since these youngesters often seldom exhibit behavoir which would be termed socially disturbing — leaving few clues about their intentions.

"Sometimes nobody notices," says Kay Tiffany, who runs a stress-depression workshop for teachers and counselors in the Winchester Public Schools. "Some kids are just very good at covering up what they are feeling."

This would fit the mold of the rash of suicides in Plano, Texas, an affluent Dallas suburb where two years ago eight teenagers committed suicide. From February to August 1983, six Plano youths killed themselves, three in one week.

It also would fit the mold of Boston's western suburbs. This area typically is populated by baby-boomers reared in what Boston University psychology professor Ron Levant calls the "era of possibility."

"These people often don't have a sense of their own limitation and consequently try to 'have it all'," Levant says. "They put unrealistic expectations on themselves and try to do too much."

And their children feel the pressure to do likewise.

"I think there's more pressure today for kids to achieve in school," Tiffany says. "There's more concern about whether they can get a job, get into a good college — just whether they can cut the mustard."

In addition to the high premium placed on achievement, the overwhelming cost of financing a private college education makes scholastic success even more cruicial.

"If a kid blows his freshman year at college he's blowing $15,000 of his father's money," Tiffany says. "So there is a lot riding on their shoulders."

Hendin, who has conducted extensive studies of youth suicide among both white and black youths, says analyses of the family circumstances in such incidents often reveal deep-rooted problems in parent/child relationships.

In many such cases, Hendin said last month at a symposium co-sponsored by the Cambridge Hospital Dept. of Psychiatry, it appears parents wanted the child but not the emotional involvement associated with children. They wanted their children to fulfill parental expectations, but gave them little incentive for doing so.

"These youngsters may make few emotional demands, but become instead withdrawn, depressed and quietly preoccupied with death and suicide," he said.

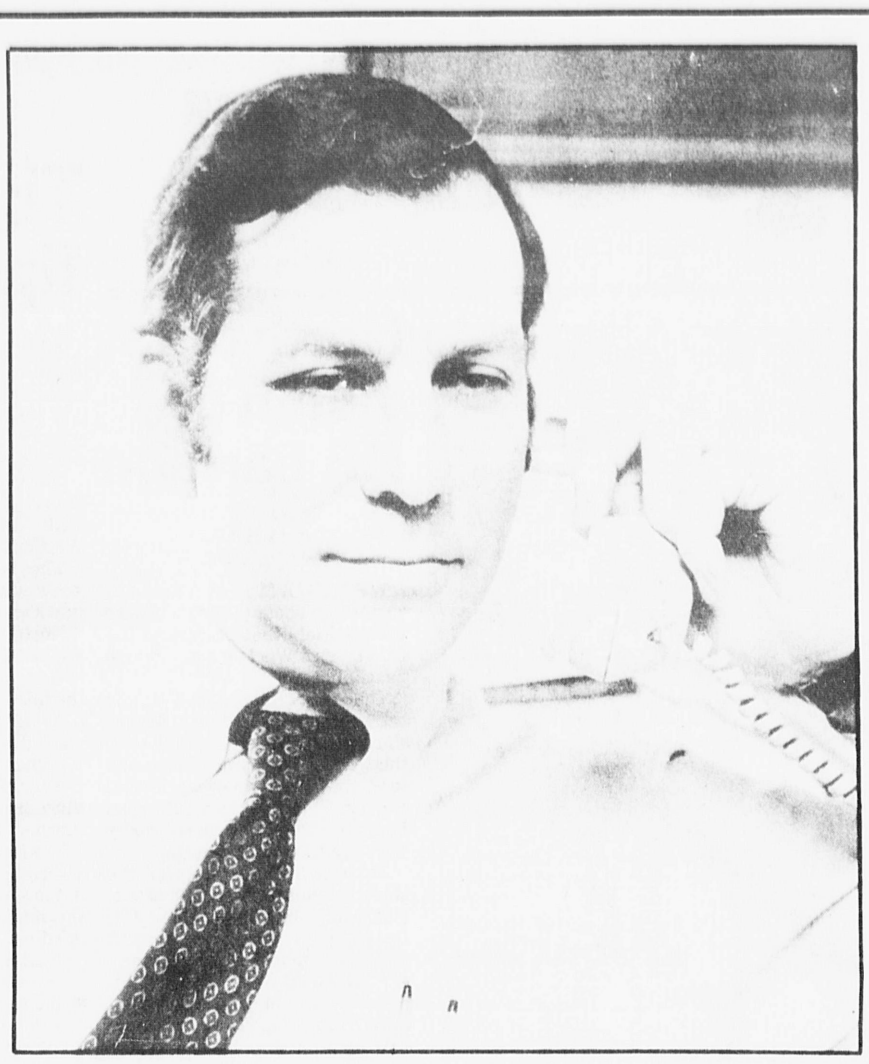
While admitting the seeds of adolescent suicide normally are sown in early childhood, Hendin says the triggering factor is often the traditional struggle for young people to separate from parents and establish their own identity as adults.

"Not to have an identity is probably one of the most frightening things a person can encounter," Jacobs says.

As tormented as suicidal youths may be, it is the fear of "something worse" — more pain, more shame, more tension, more guilt, more hopelessness, etc — that often sparks suicidal behavoir.

According to Shapiro, this is an important point in terms of suicide crisis intervention. Adolescents have difficulty seeing that their pain is temporary, and eventually will subside, while suicide very, very permanent.

"I like to call suicide a permanent alternative to a temporary problem," Shapiro says.



Dr. Douglas Jacobs counsels a patient over phone at his Newtonville office.

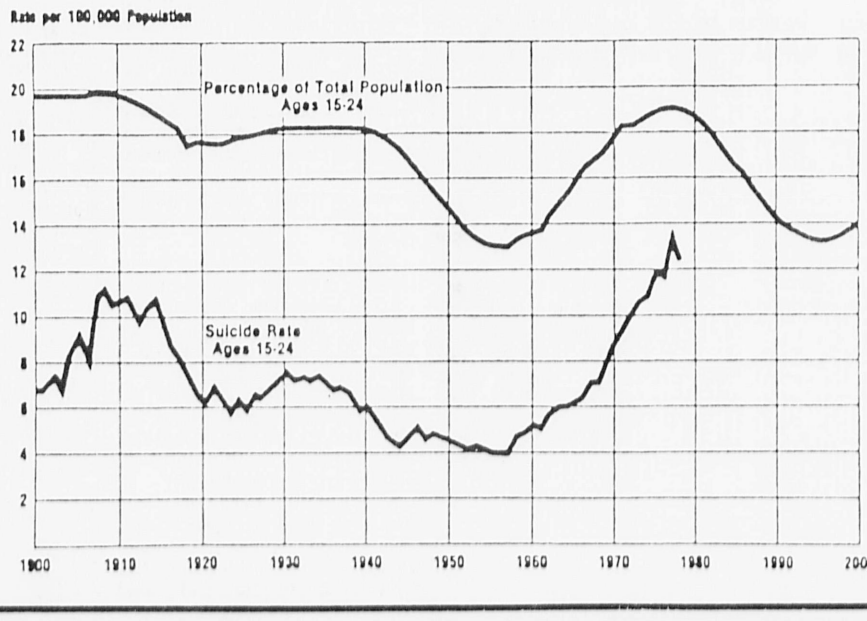
Suicide rates by age group



'A wish to die and a wish to be saved'

By Jeff Peterson
In Focus Editor

According to Dr. Douglas Jacobs, self-poisoning and wrist-slashing are the two most common methods of attempted suicide. In fact, poisoning by swallowing pills is seen in 70 to 90 percent of suicide cases.

Since most incidents involving pills are impulsive, individuals usually tend to grab whatever is available. As a result, more than one drug or substance typically is involved — and in many instances, alcohol.

From a clinical perspective, Jacobs said poisoning victims are viewed as having less serious psychiatric disturbances than those using more violent means. In other words, a person who attempts suicide by putting a gun to his head is seen as more serious than one who swallows an unspecified number of asprin tablets — and may not actually wish to kill himself

"If you shoot yourself or jump off a building there's not much you can do if your change your mind halfway through," observes Linda Shapiro, director of counseling at Newton North High School.

In virtually every case, individuals contemplating suicide exhibit an ambivalence about their fate — a wish to die and a wish to be saved. This ambivalence continues right up until the moment they pull the trigger.

"But there is also a whole group of people who don't make suicide 'attempts'," Jacobs says. "They just decide they want to kill themselves and methodically go out and do it."

Wrist-cutters, who constitute 11 percent of all suicide attempts, are more likely to be men than women, Jacobs adds. But he identified a group, which he termed "delicate cutters," which tends to be females particularly sensitive to a loss.

However there is data available which disputes these claims. Researchers at the Center for Health Promotion and Education, Centers for Disease Control, U.S Dept. of Health and Human Services and the Public Health Service in Atlanta, says suicide methods among young people have been changing since 1970.

In an article published in Educational Horizons magazine, these researchers claimed the proportion of suicides committed with firearms increased both for young males and females, while the number of poisoning suicides declined. These changes are more dramatic among females, who traditionally have opted for poisoning.

"Ten times as many girls than boys attempt suicide," Shapiro says. "But four times as many boys succeed.

Chestnut Hill psychiatrist Dr. Pam Cantor puts it even more starkly.

"Sixty-five percent of teen suicides are committed with guns," Cantor says. "If we eliminated this highly lethal weapon, the young person might not choose another one."

Among younger males, a significant number of deaths formerly listed as suicides are now being attributed to "scarfing." According to Diane Sargent, a family therapist practicing in Waltham, this phenomonon involves wrapping a cord or other object around one's neck while mastubating in an attempt to intensify the experience.

The death of an elementary school-aged boy in Westwood last month has been attributed by some as a scarfing incident.

"It's a double-edged dilemma," Sargent says. Would you rather believe your son committed suicide or died accidently as a result of (scarfing)?

"It's terrible to think anyone could be in that kind of isolation," she says.

Battista near-perfect in win

NEWTON — He faced the minimum of 21 batters, but a dropped fly ball to open the game cost Newton Catholic's Frank Battista that rarest of gems — the perfect game. Instead, he had to settle for a 3-0, no-hit victory over Sacred Heart.

The hard-throwing righty watched Steve O'Malley's fly ball get booted, leaving the leadoff man on second. Undaunted, Battista picked him off before throwing another pitch.

That was the extent of the Sacred Heart offense for the day, as the next 20 hitters went back to the bench unsuccessfully. Battista struck out 13 (seven called), without issuing a walk.

A knee-high fastball was the out pitch for the junior, as the visitors were simply unable to catch up with it.

"His location was excellent," said Coach Don Dabenigno.

The coach also praised catcher John Taylor for his share in the magnificent performance by Battista: "He did a nice job calling the game, mixing up the pitches."

Battista couldn't really relax and enjoy his dominance, because Sacred Heart starter Dave Raymondi pitched a tough game himself, allowing only two singles. He did walk four, and had two errors made behind him.

Raymondi got himself in trouble in the first, but got himself out of it with only one run. Two walks and a double steal, followed by an error, gave Newton a 1-0 lead but he retired the side.

The Lancers picked up a pad run in the third, as junior Mike Falanga got the first hit of the game to lead off the frame. A pair of fielder's choices that left everyone safe loaded the bases, and a balk made it 2-0. A double play and groundout ended that opportunity for more.

The only other hit in the contest was a single by Nick Abruzzi in the fifth.

Lancers rally in 7th

Newton Catholic shocked St. Patrick's in a league game Saturday at Cabot Park, scoring nine times in the seventh inning for a 9-7 victory.

St. Pat's starter Mike Drew as rolling along with a 7-0 lead with three outs to go when the fun started with a walk to Mike Falanga. A Frank Battista double and Chris King single made it 7-1. After Nick Abruzzi walked to load the bases, free passes to John Taylor and Mike Donnellan brought in two more. when Mark Ralto singled in a pair, it was suddenly a two-run game.

Mike Walsh's RBI single made it 7-6, and two more walks, the second to King, tied the game. Abruzzi capped the explosion with a two-run single.

NC sent eight men to the plate before the Knights could get an out, that coming when catcher Mark Driscoll picked a runner off first.

Battista pitched the bottom of the seventh in relief of Donnellan and got the side in order to preserve the win.

The Lancers, 9-6, need to win two of the last three games to get into the tournament.

Sharon Silva has been a consistent hitter for Tigers.

Tiger softballers tipped to Hawks

NEWTON — Waltham scored three runs in the fifth to break open a close game and went on to a 9-6 Suburban League softball victory over host Newton North on Friday.

The win brought the Hawks one step closer to a tournament berth with an 8-5 overall record. Waltham is 6-3 in the league.

The Tigers are still in pretty good shape with a 5-2 league mark and a 7-5 overall record.

North had just scored twice to get within a pair of runs at 4-2 before the Waltham uprising in the fifth.

A walk, bunt and error chased one run home, before Pam Vaughan singled in another. Brenda Hart came around for the third run on another Newton miscue.

The Hawks had jumped out to a 4-0 lead. They began the scoring in the second when Lynne Dempsey singled, stole second, went to third on a wild pitch and scored on Hart's single up the middle.

The Tigers made it interesting in the fourth with a pair of runs. Jen Heesch (single) scored on an error and Meg Morahan drove in a run with a fly ball.

Down by five going into the seventh, the Tigers scored a pair on a two-run single by Sharon Silva, but the Hawks escaped with no further damage.

Hart picked up the win on the mound. The senior allowed 13 hits, but had good control, walking only two. Loser Nancy Sullivan, on the other hand, struggled with her control all day, and walked 11.

The Hawks are at Cambridge on Tuesday, while the Tigers host Quincy the same day.

South loses

A five-run fifth inning killed the Newton South spirit as undefeated and highly-ranked Bedford got the best of the Lions, 13-4, in Dual County League softball action.

Until the fifth, South was in good shape against first-ranked Bedford, trailing just 6-3. With the pitching of ace Michelle Dison to fall back on though, Bedford was golden with the eight-run lead.

Dison struck out seven, althoug the Lions did bruise the Bedford hurler for nine hits. Katrina Antonellis had three of the nine, and Dede Theodore and Jennifer Olansky chipped in with two each.

Dede Theodore singled home Antonellis in the third inning for South's first run, Elaine Theodore scored on an overthrow at third base in the fourth inning, and Crovo doubled home a run in the fifth.

South, 9-6, will play second-place Acton-Boxboro this afternoon. The Lions must win three of its last five games to qualify for the tournament.

Newton South gallops past Waltham stickmen

WALTHAM — The Hawks started the game like it was a drag race, but instead it turned into an endurance test, and they ran out of gas on the last lap as Newton South took an 8-6 boys' lacrosse victory at Waltham High on Tuesday.

Though going in with a 3-7 record against the defending state champions, the Hawks roared out to a 3-0 lead in the first period. There was nothing flukey about the score either, as Waltham outshot the Lions, 17-1, in the frame. The Hawks had 14 shots before South got one off.

The other end of the game was a much different story. The home club was still tied at 6-6 after Steve Duffy's goal early in the fourth period, but the next two scores belonged to South.

Duffy created the game's final tie on a man-up situation 3:36 into the period, taking a pass from John Kavey (three goals, one assist) and bouncing a shot in.

That deadlock lasted all of nine seconds. With the ink in the scorebook still wet, Paolo Sepe came barreling down after the faceoff and drilled an unassisted score past Waltham goalie Chuck Dunne to put the Lions ahead for good.

When John Morgan added an insurance goal within a minute, the Hawks were headed for the breakdown lane. The Waltham defense lefft the sophomore wide open on Dunne's doorstep to the right of the net, and Dave Abroms found him with a pass from the middle of the box.

Within 41 seconds it was 1-0, as Steve Wright bounced a shot in from the left side past goalie Alex Levine. Shawn McNamara doubled the margin at 2:18, taking a nice pass from Bob Keane.

Waltham continued the onslaught throughout the frame, rarely even letting the Lions across midfield. One of the few times South did make a motion on the Waltham goal, the Hawks turned it into a fast-break score at the other end, as John Kavey finished it off with a bounce shot.

Another goal or two might have been enough to finish the Lions off, but the Hawks couldn't come across with the killing blow. Levine made some good stops in the South net to keep the game within reach.

A different Newton team answered the bell for the second period, scoring four times before the Hawks could react. After Dave Abroms and Matt Goldberg cut the margin to one, Judd Levine capped the comeback with a pair of goals within a minute and a half.

The first tied the game at 5:10, as he picked up a loose ball in front. Moments later he took a pass from Seth Oliver and put his club ahead for the first time.

But just when it seemed South would leave the host club in the dust, Kavey got the Hawks back on the board for another tie. Goldberg and Kavey swapped goals to keep the game that way at halftime.

South's Jon Gleason scored the only goal of the third, but the highlight of the frame was the play of Dunne in the Waltham net. He singlehandedly kept his team within reach with some sensational play in the second half of the stanza. Though the effort proved futile in the end, Dunne's play gave his club a chance into the final minutes of the game.

Lions lose in OT

Brian Sullivan scored the hat trick during regulation Friday, then added his fourth score in overtime as Hingham nipped the Lions, 9-8, in Division II lacrosse action played at George Winkler Field.

Sullivan rolled off the Newton South defense and fired a low shot past Lion keeper Alex Levine at 1:48 of the extra session, ending a contest that resembled a ping-pong game.

The teams had entered the fourth quarter tied, 5-5, before swapping leads twice. South tied it late in the fourth and had control with 10 seconds remaining in regulation, but Alex Olwine's shot went wide of the Hingham net.

South led, 5-3 in the second quarter, before Hingham tied the score at the half. Dave Abroms had the hat trick for Newton and also added two assists. Rama Malone scored two for South, and solo goals were punched home by Matt Goldberg, Judd Levine, and Olwine.

South, 7-5 overall and 6-3 in the league, must win two of its last three games to qualify for the tourney.

Heesch leads Tigers

Defenseman Aaron Heesch had a field day at attack, scoring three goals in the third period to boost Newton North's stickmen to a 10-4 victory over visiting Needham Tuesday.

Newton blew open a 5-3 halftime lead with four goals in the third frame, with Heesch making the difference. North coach Rick Clark had moved the junior from defense to the front line, and Heesch responded with the hat trick.

He punched one home off a loose ball, then took a feed from Dave Robinson for his second tally. Finally, Heesch picked the corner on an in-traffic pass from Otto Mariano.

Mark Adams scored Newton North's other third-period goal on a man-advantage situation.

"It was a nice victory to get us bak into the swing of things," Clark said after the game. "We played a good game of lacrosse — we were in control most of the way."

Junior Brian Vona started between the pipes for Newton in place of Kevin Keegan and did a great job, according to Clark. The goalie had nine saves.

WALTHAM — There's something about playing on Jake Dennis Field that brings out the best in Waltham High baseballers.

The Al Scafidi-coached troupe returned to the Nipper Maher Park bailiwick for the first time this season Friday afternoon and took the measure of arch-rival Newton North, 8-0, in a Suburban League contest to inch closer toward a tournament berth.

Three home runs featured the shutout triumph — a pair of circuit swipes by centerfielder Jeff Lazaro and a two-run job by first baseman John Logue. Sharing the limelight were winning pitcher Paul Beninati with a helping hand from ailing Dave Cristofori.

Waltham calls Barbara Yetten Field its home ballpark, but in season's past has played its neighoring rival under floodlights at Dennis Field. Friday's game was switched to daylight when Newton North decided against playing under the arcs.

With an overall record of 11-5, Waltham needs one more win to qualify for the post-season playoffs. It will be idle until Wednesday night when it faces Quincy under lights at Adams Field, Quincy. Newton North is 6-9 overall. One of its victories was a forfeit over Waltham, resulting when the Hawks used an ineligible player in the first meeting at Newton.

Beninati, a left-handed senior making only the second varsity start of his career, was doing an excellent job for Hawks until he was felled in the sixth inning. A line drive off the bat of George Maxcey struck him on the left knee. He was taken out of the game and watched the finish from the bench with an icepack applied to the injured limb.

Senior Dave Cristofori, who has been idled by a sore arm, volunteered to go to the mound. He told Coach Scafidi that he felt well enough to pitch and would throw only knuckle balls.

Cristofori hit the first batter he faced to load the bases, but got Aldo Calcagni to hit into a double play and retired Ron Coppola on an outfield fly to end the inning. Dave yielded only one hit in the seventh inning.

Beninati, posting his second wir againsr one loss, allowed only two hits, fanned six and walked one.

Lazaro, a remarkable wrist hitter, developed obviously through his extensive association with hockey, currently leads the team in homers with four. Logue is next in line with three.

Jeff put a Sid Queler pitch out of the park, leading off for Waltham in the first inning. It was a line shot over the leftfield fence. He connected again in the second with an even more lengthy blast to centerfield that almost landed in the Little Nippers Field. Mark DePass (walk) and Bill Chiasson (single) were aboard at the time.

Logue's round tripper followed. After Jerome Fuller strolled, Logue sent a high drive sailing over the left field screen. Logue extended his hitting streak through nine games via that clout. He also singled across a pair of runs in the sixth inning.

McCarthy cops net title

BILLERICA — Not many tennis players would have the intestinal fortitude to battle back from a 6-0 first-set loss in the Sectional Finals, but that's exactly what Newton North's Dianna McCarthy did on Sunday.

The Tiger junior shocked Justine Higgins of Concord-Carlisle in the next two sets, 6-3, 6-3, to earn the North championship at Billerica High School.

The winners of the South, Central and West sections will join McCarthy on June 14 to decide the state championship.

Higgins had eliminated McCarthy's Newton teammate, Lise Abrams, in the semifinals on Saturday. McCarthy defeated Christine Chiminello of Melrose in the semi's.

Sunday, McCarthy started off "a little tight," according to Coach Joe Connolly, and it cost her as Higgins cruised.

"She showed a lot of character," the coach said of the second and third sets, however. "She decided to go back to her bread-and-butter shots. ... hitting deep and playing basic tennis."

The results were impressive.

McCarthy also went to the net at several critical junctures, with good success. Higgins is another aggressive player who is not afraid to rush the net.

"They were a couple of tigers out there," Connolly said.

Saturday, McCarthy was in control most of the way in the 6-1, 6-3 win over Chiminello.

Meanwhile, Abrams played an excellent first set against Higgins but still lost, 6-4, 6-0.

Newton holds soccer signups

Registration for the fall season for the co-ed Newton Youth Soccer League will be open until May 31. Registration forms will be available in all Newton public schools — elementary and junior high, as well as at private schools and the Recreation Department.

The following five divisions will make up the fall program for girls and boys: grade 2, grades 3 & 4, grades 5 & 6, gardes 7 & 8, grades 9 & 10. Only Newton residents are eligible for the league.

A $25 fee is required for the first child in a family, and $15 for each additional child. The fee covers uniforms, team equipment, referees, team photos and trophies. Games are scheduled weekly to be played on Saturdays for 11 weeks, and will commence on Saturday, Sept. 6. Required practices will be one day a week.

The league policy is to group players together from the same school whenever possible. Private school players will be placed on a team within their public school districts. The 11 years success of this co-ed league is due to its low-key philosophy which enables all youngsters to play no matter what their athletic abilities.

For further information, call 244-1650 between 4:30 and 8 p.m.

Gheewalla earns track letter at Tufts

MEDFORD — Rob Gheewalla, a junior from Newton, has earned a varsity letter with the men's indoor track and field team at Tufts University, Coach Connie Putnam announced today.

Tufts compiled an 11-3 record this season, equalling the most wins in a single season in the school's program. Gheewalla was a consistent scorer in the middle distances. His top times were 1:22.2 in the 600 and 55.9 in the 400-meter.

All-scholastic

Carol Ventura of Newton North High School was named to the Boston Globe All-Scholastic Girls' Basketball Team. Ventura (R) accepts her award from Larry Ames, Globe high school sports editor. Carl, a forward and the Suburban League's MVP, averaged 19 points and 12 rebounds per game as the Tigers won the Division 1 South sectionals.

Superior Cambridge depth stops Newton North in track

NEWTON — Depth, and quality in that depth, proved to be the difference as Cambridge Rindge and Latin took a 104½-73½ Suburban League track win over Newton North at Dickinson Stadium on Friday.

The Tigers got a lot of good performances, but the Warriors simply had more horses.

Peter Bourland had his usual day for Newton, winning three events. The senior standout captured the triple jump, high jump and high hurdles.

Chris Rutan ran an outstanding 10.2 in the 100, but still only finished second. He came back to run the 440 in 54 seconds for second behind Karim Saunders.

A personal best by Eric Boemer highlighted the 880. He ran a 2:05.4, four-tenths of a second better than his previous best, for second place. Matt Richardson took third in the race, running a 2:07.2.

Senior Barry Logan came back and ran a courageous two-mile, finishing second in the race. Logan has been hampered by a swimming injury that requires he wear a back-brace, but the senior still competes with the track team.

Stroyman cops EMass tennis title

After knocking off Lexington's best on Saturday, it really came as no surprise to Newton South tennis coach Ed Jackson that senior Matt Stroyman could finish the job on Sunday.

Stroyman waltzed through a straight-set victory over Austin Prep's Rodney Robito on Sunday to claim the Eastern Mass. State Singles Championship held at Billerica.

Stroyman had rather easily defeated defending singles champ Radek Kocek on Saturday, beating the Lexington ace, 6-2, 6-4, to advance to Sunday's final round.

Robito went down in straight sets, too. After beating Geoff Grant of Lincoln-Sudbury in a three-set semifinals, Robito was pinned by the hot-and-hungry Stroyman, 6-1, 6-2.

"It was absolute domination from beginning to end," Jackson said of Stroyman's victory. "It was time for a new champion, and Stroyman wanted it more and was psychologically prepared."

Stroyman turned the tables on Kocek on Saturday, breaking his serve in the second set at 4-4 before serving out the match. Aggressive play was the key to victory on Sunday also, as Jackson said Stroyman "kept him (Robito) pinned at the baseline."

In two week, Stroyman will get together with the South, Central, and West champions to decide the state championship.

Stage Abramo golf tournament June 1

One hundred and forty-four golfers have been invited to tee off in the 14th Annual Abramo Invitational Tournament to be held on Sunday, June 1, at Wayland Country Club.

Participants gather together for a day of golf, camaradarie, and a renewal of friendships in a memorial tribute to deceased family members and friends.

Named after the late Nick Abramo, a former Waltham High School golf captain, a perennial club champion at both Wayland and Marlboro Country Clubs, and a decorated World War II hero, the tournament also honors the memory of the following: James Cannon, Dennis Comeau, Alfred Crane, Joseph DeGeorge, Richard Devane, Dave Donnolly, Bobby, Paul and Larry Doyle, Jim Falzone, Phil Farina, Tom Fitzgerald, George Grassby, James Harmon, John Hayes, Anthony Iagulli, Robert Ladd, Edward Mahoney, Larry McCusker, Buddy Melanson, Ted Naumes, Chet PLocharczyk, Msgr. John M. Quirk, retired pastor at St. Bernard's Church, West Newton; Paul Roche, Stephen Santa Maria, Jr., Tom Silver, Guy Tedesco and William Van Wart.

The prestigious tourney attracts many prominent sports figures, civic leaders, and outstanding amateurs in quest of top medalist and net honors. Returning this year are several past champions including Lenny Devane (1976), Jack Bellevue (1977), Jay Tedesco (1978), Dr. Mya Maung (1981-83), John Nicolazzo (1982), Tom D'Orazio (1984), and last year's champion, John McCarthy.

Foremost challengers are Fran Corcoran, Jim McHugh, Terry Frechette, Gary Mosca, Val Melideo, Robert Curtin, Jr., Joe Bartzak, Dick Lundy, Fred Igo and Tim Frechette.

Expecting to pressure the more experienced veterans are the division winners of last year's Furbush Junior Golf Classic consisting of Bent Hoyer (Westboro) and John Gilbert (Winchester), co-medalists with rounds of 71, along with John Colantonio (Winchester) and Marty Burke (Newton).

Famed blind golfer and many-time national champion Joe Lazaro is the inspiration for the rest of the field vying for net score honors, which includes past net score winners Charles Falzone, John Walsh, Richard Lewis, Bernie Coyle and Jim Tomlin. Also, Albert Carr, Joe Frullo, Al Saia, Tom Schuller, Joe Fanara, Jack Roche, John Tedesco and Jim LaCava.

Prominent public figures competing are State Rep. A. Joseph DeNucci, Waltham Mayor William F. Stanley, Rev. Gerard Barry (tourney chaplain), Second District Court Magistrate Charles Graceffa, retired State Senator Richard I. Furbush, Newton School Committee Chairman Lenny Gentile, City of Newton Comptroller Larry Marino and Waltham Fire Chief Joseph Steede.

Top prizes include a year's membership at Wayland CC to the low net (Calloway) winner, donated by club owner Bob Quirk. Also, sponsorship to the Lazaro Celebrity Golf Tournament at Marlboro CC in July, to the low gross winner, donated by George Doyle to the memory of three afore-metioned brothers. In addition to plaques and jackets, the winners will also have their names engraved on a permanent plaque displayed at Wayland CC.

Jackets also will awarded for nearest the pin on the 4th and 8th holes. Other prizes include a pair of golf shoes donated by Terry Frechette, for Footjoy, Inc.

Major support comes from three Waltham natives now residing in California. Thhey are George Doyle, Robert Joyce and Albert Larson. Dyle, more popularly known as "Scorpy" to friends including many in the entertainment world, is a denizen of Palm Springs and the tournament prize chairman. Joyce, former Waltham High School and UMass hockey and golf star, makes his home in the Los Angeles area. Larson, who interned in the same German prison in Poland as Abramo, makes his home in Balboa Island and Palm Springs. In a tribute to their life-long friend, Joyce and Larson have donated Abramo Tournament caps which will be presented to participating golfers.

Also coming from out of state is Howie Kelly from Kittering, Ohio. Kelly, a football Hall of Famer at Waltham High, starred in basketball and baseball for the Quantico Marines and in the St. Louis minor league chain, respetively.

Tournament profits and donations totaling more than eight thousand dollars ($8,745.13) have benefited 24 different charities to date. Recipients last year included: Hospice of the Good Shepherd, Inc., Joslin Diabetes Center, Waltham Lions Blind Charities, Mass. Chapter National Head Injuries Foundation, Furbush Junior Golf Program, Catholic Relief Society, and the Cosgrove Scholarship Fund. Tournament jackets are presented for cumulative contributions totaling $100.

Post 440 Musial team tryouts set for this weekend

Cultural exchange would nurture understanding

By Andrew P. McCloy
Correspondent

NEWTON — Although Israeli and American Jews share common religious beliefs and values, different cultural views often have been the source of separation between the two groups.

At Temple Shalom recently, Israeli and American Jews discussed this dilemma in a talk, "Israeli Jews - American Jews: Are We One?"

Organizer, Cindy Maggied, a graduate student at Brandeis University, said the event was held to dispel some common myths that exist between both countries.

"People felt that there was a need for interchange," Maggied said. "Yes, there is a cultural difference between the two countries, but there is still room for each of us under the sun."

About 40 people attended the talk, including six Israeli Jews, during which the views of each country were voiced.

Dr. Shmuel Robinson, a lecturer, "research messenger" and social psychologist at Tel Aviv University, and Dr. Barry Chazan, a visiting fellow at Harvard University's school of education and a professor in the Hornstein program at Brandeis University, both raised issues and proposed solutions to some of the misunderstandings between the two countries.

Both Robinson and Chazan believed that cultural exchanges would nurture increased understanding between the two countries.

The Hebrew language, long recognized as the universal Jewish tongue, is not being taught to American Jewish children, Robinson said. This lack of traditional Jewish education causes American Jews to become disassociated with their Israeli counterparts, he said.

"Within the Jewish community, there is a worry that not many American Jewish children get a Jewish education," Robinson said. "This is a concern in Israel."

Robinson, who has been in America for two years, said the survival and continued growth of Israel relies upon the involvement of American Jews in the economic, cultural and political affairs of the nation. This involvement could be manifested through cultural exchange programs between the two countries, he said.

"If we are not one, then we should be realistic about it," he said. "It is necessary that we have an exchange program. Americans can do so much to contribute to the evolvement of Israeli culture."

Israel is a refuge for all Jews, Robinson said. "It is a shelter ... an insurance policy for days we don't want to think about," he said. "If Israel is a refuge that we don't want to use, then I think the bonds between the two communities will weaken."

Exposing Jewish children to Israel, through cultural exchange programs and education, would strengthen their belief in Judaism, Robinson said.

"What does Israel mean in Jewish life?" Robinson asked. "Economic, political and cultural exchanges would be the best way for us to express the expectations of one another."

Chazan, who has lived in Israel for about 10 years, said, in essence, there is no one Jewish people.

"What has happened is that different groups have emerged," Chazan said. "The only two events that have united Jews in recent years are the Holocaust and the struggle of Israel."

Ethnic groups in Israel also contribute to the disparity among Jews, Chazan said. During election time in Israel, this polarization becomes most evident, he added.

Chazan said Jews tend to unite only during moments of crisis. The Six-Day War in 1967, the Yom Kippur War in 1973 and the invasion of Lebanon in 1982 are examples of crises during which Jews united, he said.

Throughout history there have always been divisions in the Jewish religion, according to Chazan. These divisions cause many young people to become discontented with the Jewish community, he said.

"To be Jewish in America is to belong to the synagogue," he said. "Israeli Jews have the Hebrew language. They don't need the synagogue to make them feel Jewish."

Jews can live a meaningful Jewish life in America, despite the belief among Israelis that all Jews have to live in Israel, Chazan said.

Afterward, organizer Maggied said, "Although we live in two different societies, tonight it has become evident that we share common values, backgrounds and concerns in the world."

> 'Israeli Jews have the Hebrew language. They don't need the synagogue to make them feel Jewish.'

IRA accounts still require monitoring

MONEY TALK$

Neville Frankel is Vice President of Financial Planning Associates Inc., a Boston and New York affiliate of Confidential Planning Network, an international network of more than 120 financial planning firms. Direct questions to Frankel, care of this publication.

Whether or no future IRA contributions will be allowed under the most recent tax proposal is still in question. But funds already invested through IRA accounts will still require monitoring. And over the years, that may mean transferring from one investment to another.

It's essential to keep good records and have copies of all your IRA contributions, the trustee agreements you signed with any banks, brokerage firms, mutual funds or financial management companies, records of the interest paid on any IRA contributions, and the cancelled checks for each IRA contribution — just in case the IRS decides to do an IRA audit.

Read very carefully all the IRA materials provided by your new trustee. Ask if the new trustee will accept the instruments you now own or if it will be necessary to liquidate your stock or convert other investments to cash.

Some financial products such as common stocks and money-market accounts will transfer easily. Others, including limited partnerships and special investment packages may not. Before you go into any new plan, find out how easy or difficult it will be to transfer your IRA, should it be necessary in the future.

Signing up with a new IRA trustee is pretty straightforward. If you want your new trustee to effect the transfer, fill out the form that gives the new trustee permission to request a transfer of your IRA from your former custodian. Ideally, you should never have to communicate with your old custodian. Bank transfers should take no more than two to three weeks, but even in the simplest bank-to-bank transfer, there may be problems.

There are times that you might want to take actual physical possession of the money in your IRA during the 60-day transfer period. Suppose, for example, you need to pay college tuition that is due a few days before your Treasury bills post the interest you had planned to use for that purpose, or you have an opportunity to invest the IRA money in a 30-day, high-yielding investment. (Keep in mind that any dividends earned while the money is out of an IRA account are taxable.) That's fine if you realize that there are mishaps galore that can and do occur when the money winds up in your hands.

When you take possession of the money, you automatically receive form 1099-R from your financial institution. The form shows the cash distribution and should later be reported as an IRA rollover on your tax return. If you ignore form 1099-R and neglect to indicate that the distribution is an IRA rollover, you get a letter from the IRS saying you owe taxes on that amount. You end up eternally corresponding with a faceless group at the IRS, and it's very hard to extricate yourself from that situation.

You will also lose money if you wait too long to move funds from one IRA to another. If you hold on to the money until the 61st day, the whole IRA distribution becomes taxable. It's easy to avoid these bad scenarios, however. Just never take possession of your account and have the transfers arranged directly from one trustee to another.

Seminar to examine stress in students

NEWTON — The division of Curriculum and Instruction of the Newton Public Schools is sponsoring a seminar at the Day Junior High School Auditorium, 21 Minot Place, Newtonville, to addresse the key issues confronting parents and educators on Thursday, May 22, at 7:30 p.m.

Meeting the educational needs of students in an environment charged by high parental expectations and student stress will be the seminar's focus.

Speakers that evening will include John Rosemond, family therapist and nationally syndicated columnist speaking on "Today's Children: Too Much of What We Want, Not Enough of What They Need;" Michael Jellinek, chief of Child Psychiatry at Massachusetts General Hospital and consulting psychiatrist for the Newton Public Schools addressing "Consequences of Student Stress;" and John Strand, superintendent of the Newton Public Schools will speak on "Schools and the Socialization of Children from Two-Career Families."

This is an evening for parents, school staff, and all those concerned with the dynamics of the home and school working together to maximize learning.

Visiting nurses group helps many stay at home

If love grows as the years go by, John and Margaret Gill's love for each other is immeasurable.

In June, the Gills will have been married for 51 years, and at that time, they will celebrate the happy times and remember the strength that brought them through the bad times. They will also celebrate the fact that with the help of NeWell Home Health Services, formerly in Newton-Wellesley-Weston Visiting Nurse Association, they are able to be together in their own home in Newton.

Being together has special meaning for the Gills because, for 11 months, Mrs. Gill, a victim of Parkinson's Disease, lived at the Marian Manor Nursing Home in South Boston. "When Peg came out of Newton-Wellesley Hospital, there was no question that she had to go to the nursing home," explains Mr. Gill. "She received exceptional care at Marian Manor, but you know the old saying, 'There's no place like home.'"

Mrs. Gill improved with the care she received at Marian Manor, but she worried about her husband being alone, and her desire to return home increased. One day, while out for a ride, Mrs. Gill decided she was going to return home. "I guess you can say she's AWOL," jokes Mr. Gill. "I took her out for a ride one Sunday, and when it was time to go back, she told me she wasn't going back. She felt she was ready to go home. We called the nursing home, and they were very good about it. They contacted the doctor and NeWell Home Health. Within a day or two, we were receiving services. I know Peg could not have stayed home without NeWell Home Health's help."

This was not the first experience the Gills had with home health services. Forty-six year ago, they were the victims of the great Coconut Grove fire in Boston. Mr. Gill was seriously burned, and while waiting for a series of operations, he was able to remain at home with the help of the visiting nurse. Today, it is that same kind of care which makes it possible for Mrs. Gill to remain at home. "These people who come into our home — physical therapist, nurse, home health aide — they are our friends. I have never met a more charming group of women, and I appreciate all their help," says a very quiet Mrs. Gill. Her husband, the more extroverted of the two, finishes her thought in more philosophical terms. "The care Peg is receiving has to be evaluated as a science and as an art. In some stages the medical science is paramount, but at some point it reaches the form of art — the merciful art of healing. We have been very lucky to be able to remain at home together and receive the fine and merciful art of healing from NeWell Home Health Services."

The Newton-Wellesley-Weston Visiting Nurse Association has provided care to the people of Newton for 88 years. To provide a greater continuity of care, the agency last year affiliated with NeWell Health Corporation, parent company of Newton-Wellesley Hospital, and changed its name to NeWell Home Health Services.

NeWell Home Health remains a non-profit agency located at 1589 Beacon St. in Waban. Payment for services is provided by Medicare, Medicaid, Blue Cross/Blue Shield, private insurers, private pay, and funds from the United Way for free care.

The health professionals provide a variety of skilled services to homebound people, such as nursing, physical, occupational, and speech therapy, home health aides, social services, nutrition counseling, and an assessment program called R.E.A.C.H. Because of the services provided by NeWell Home Health, many Newton residents, like the Gills, are able to recuperate from an accident or illness in the comforts of their own homes surrounded by their loved ones, their pets, and their cherished possessions. For information on services call NeWell Home Health at 964-4920.

Handmade paper show at library gallery

NEWTON — "Paper as a medium for artistic expression has reached a new level of sophistication in American Art," says Beverly Sky, whose work is included with that of Claudine Bing, Marilyn Pappas, and Judy Ziegler in the new show "Works of Paper" in the Newton Free Library Gallery through May 29.

The artists will be available to discuss their work, techniques and applications of handmade paper in the gallery, Monday, May 5, at 7:30 p.m.

"Paper has been transformed from a recipient surface to an integral part of a work of art, now that so many artists are making handmade paper, and using this art form in very contemporary and expressive ways," Sky continues.

The four artists represented in the library show produced their work at Rugg Road Handmade Paper Studios in collaboration with internationally-known artists and teachers of papermaking, Bernie Toale and Joe Zina.

Marilyn Pappas exhibits collages of handmade paper and mixed media which she combines to create personal images based on actual and imaginary cartographic configurations.

She is fascinated with the idea of collage as a visual format for rescuing, preserving and infusing memories with a new life. The resulting works are emotional and symbolic in character.

Pappas is a professor of art at Massachusetts College of Art, and has received a Massachusetts Artists Fellowship, a Bunting Institute Fellowship at Radcliffe and a National Endowment of the Arts Fellowship.

Judith Ziegler came [illegible]

weaving and printmaking background to papermaking. She works primarily in white on white, embossing geometric and abstract designs on the paper. Her work has been shown nationally and includes local shows at the Clark Gallery, Tufts University, Pine Manor College and the Brockton Art Museum.

Claudine Bing teaches at Massachusetts College of Art and has work in the collection of the DeCordova Museum and Tufts New England Medical Center. Her work has been shown at the Helen Shlien Gallery, the Baak Gallery, and Boston University's Gallery.

"A lot happens by accident or at the moment," says Beverly Sky whose impressionistic landscapes are built up with thin wet layers of pigmented pulp. She makes the shapes she wants by beating the pulp and squirting colors, or by using her hands to pull away the pulp she doesn't want.

Sky was originally trained as a weaver and printmaker and has been working with handmade paper for two years. She lived in Japan for seven years, where she studied weaving and dying techniques.

Main Library hours are from Monday to Thursday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.; Friday, from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.; Saturday, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; and Sunday, from 1 to 4 p.m. The library will be closed on Memorial Day, Monday May 26. For more information, telephone 552-7145.

Springfest '86

The annual Springfest, sponsored by the Cultural Affairs Commission, was held at City Hall this weekend. This year's event was dedicated to the the city's youth. The festival was highlighted with public school ensembles, craft and food booths. The warm weather added to the enjoyment of the hundreds who participated. From left, are Karen Sullivan painting Jacob Mnookin's face, aerobics dancers performing for the crowd, and Luke Spencer and his father playing "Shoot the Fruit."

Four traffic safety officers honored

NEWTON — Four Newton Police Traffic Supervisors were honored by their co-workers, relatives and friends at a dinner held at the Off The Cuff restaurant in Wellesley.

The four traffic supervisors served a total of 106 years and supervised the safe crossings of upwards of 5 million children without an accident.

Mrs. Margaret Hart served 36 years and was one of the 20 pioneer supervisors who took over the supervision of school crossings June 1, 1950, and was one of the first uniformed women assigned this responsibility in the United States. Hart spent most of her career taking care of children attending the Newton Catholic elementary school.

Also in attendance were Mrs. Alberta Morrison, another of the original traffic supervisors, and Mrs. Valerie Boynton, currently the only traffic supervisor of the original 20 to remain on active duty.

Mrs. Ruth Dunn served 30 years as a supervisor and also as a parking control supervisor (meter maid). She served at Claflin, Carr, St. Jeans and Lincoln-Eliot crossings.

Mrs. Mary Magliocca served 22 years and also served as a parking control supervisor. Her service was principally in Auburndale supervising crossings at the Burr School.

Mrs. Marie Quinn served 17 years most of which were at the John Ward School.

Each were presented with framed certificates of appreciation signed by Mayor Theodore D. Mann and Chief William F. Quinn and were presented by Chief Quinn after giving the history of each of the honorees.

In addition, each honoree was presented with a Paul Revere Bowl by Association President Lorraine DePasquale.

Other awards of plaques for 25 years service were presented to Mrs. Mary (Bette) Grenier and Mrs. Angeline Henes, and five year pins to Mrs. Anita Braceland and Mrs. Judy Notartomaso.

Retired Lieutenant, Charles E. Feeley was Master of Ceremonies.

Firemen take oath

NEWTON — Mayor Theodore D. Mann recently administered the oath of office to eleven new firefighters and two lieutenants.

Lieutenant Bruce Proia, a lifelong resident of Newton, is married to the former Sharyn Blauer and is the father of two sons, Nicholas and Michael. Proia is the son of Fred and Doris Proia of West Newton. His father retired from the Newton Fire Department in 1981 after serving the department for 29 years.

After graduating from Newton North High School in 1952 Proia attended Massachusetts Bay Community College and received a degree in fire science engineering. Proia has been assigned to the Fire Prevention Bureau at Fire Headquarters. The new lieutenant fills the vacancy created by the retirement of Lieutenant Albert Moore who recently retired after years of service.

Lieutenant John Clisham, a resident of Natick, is married to the former Mary Ellen Gannon and is the father of Kristin.

Clisham is the son of Mary Clisham of Newton and the late Newton firefighter Walter Clisham. Clisham attended Newton public schools and graduated from Newton High School in 1962. He received an associates degree in business administration from Newton Junior College from which he graduated in 1964.

The new Lieutenant has been assigned to Engine One in Newton Corner with direct responsibility for supervision of personnel and apparatus. Clisham fills the vacancy created by the retirement, after 32 years of service, of Lieutenant Donald King.

The new firefighters, after attending an intensive basic firefighting training program, have been assigned to fill presently exisiting vacancies in the Department.

The eleven new firefighters are: Arthur H. Boyd, Robert E. Cadman, James F. Dangelo, Jr., Joseph S. DelGizzi, Kevin M. Fitzgerald, Gino Luchetti, Kevin F. McCabe, Lorne R. Tabb, Patrick K. Vardaro, George J. Wansiewicz, and Salvatore C. Yerardi.

Aquino foundation raises $8,000 with lottery

NEWTON — Over $8000 was raised by the Benigno S. Aquino Memorial Foundation of Newton at the conclusion of its annual lottery drive. Winning raffle tickets were drawn May 2 at Foundation headquarters, the former "house in exile" of President Corazon Aquino of the Philippines and the late Senator Benigno Ninoy S. Aquino, Jr., which BSAMF was able to purchase a year ago.

The first prize winner of a round trip to the Philippines was Reverend Martin Porter of Newton. Reverend Porter has spent over 17 years in the Philippines and will now be able to return to the island once more. The winning ticket was drawn by Zza Zza Lichauco, niece of President Aquino.

Second prize was drawn by Maria Consuela Tabejo, a Fulbright scholar from the Philippines who is studying for a master's degree in special education at Boston College. Blind since childhood, she is the first Filipino handicapped scholar to hold a Fulbright. The lucky winner of a 19-inch color television was Angelos de la Cruz of Matawan, New Jersey.

Third prize, a video cassette recorder, was won by Mr. Monty Monibog of Los Angeles, Calif. His prize was drawn by Tina Ticzon of Providence, the wife of BSAMF's Rhode Island representative.

We have just been asked by Harvard University to establish a Benigno S. Aquino Memorial Fellowship in government at the center for international affairs, announced Steve G. Agular, president of BSMF, and these proceeds will be directed towards this goal as well as for maintaining the foundation's home which now serves as a visitors center where Aquino memorabilia and books on the Philippines are kept.

The lottery drawing was the first of scheduled events by the Benigno S. Aquino Memorial Foundation for the spring and summer. On May 18th a reception was held for Cardinal Sin, Archbishop of Manila, at St. Ignatius in Chestnut Hill," Dr. Agular reminded the crowd. "This is to be followed by our June 14 Philippine Independence Day celebration and in August by the Benigno S. Aquino Memorial mass."

Help locate stolen sign

NEWTON — The Carroll Center for the Blind, 770 Centre Street, Newton, has recently discovered that its sign was stolen over the weekend of April 26-27.

The sign is very large, approximately 3 ft. x 4 ft. and constructed of wood. It was recently repaired and repainted costing the center several hundred dollars during its recent remodeling drive.

It was apparently removed from its hook and eye support over the weekend. The sign extremely important for identifying the Carroll Center to the many people who visit the center daily.

Carroll Center Director Rachel Rosenbaum said she hopes it might be found in some inconspicuous place and is asking Newton area residents to be on the lookout.

The Carroll Center is a private, non-profit organization providing rehabilitation services to newly blinded adults. If anyone does locate the sign please call the Carroll Center for the Blind at 969-6200.

Schools raise $5,000 for the mentally ill

NEWTON — The Newton Teachers Association recently sponsored its annual Read-a-thon to raise money for the Massachusetts Associatin for Retarded Citizens (MARC). MARC is a volunteer organization of parents and advocates striving to make a better life for people who are mentally retarded. The Read-a-thon involved students reading books to raise money. Participants secured pledges for each half hour block of reading during the Read-a-thon period.

This year, the amount contributed to MARC through the efforts of the NTA and the City of Newton's elementary school children was $5,003 — a record sum. The ongoing support of MARC in conjunction with the effort of the NTA allows the continuance of the work of helping mentally retarded citizens to live more independently and to become contributing members of society.

For further information, please contact Anne Clancy, Memorial-Spaulding School, 552-7561.

NW Hospital appoints new chief of medicine

NEWTON — John T. Harrington, M.D., a resident of West Roxbury, will become Newton-Wellesley Hospital's new chief of Medicine on June 1, 1986. The Chief of Medicine has clinical and administrative responsibilities for all inpatient and outpatient internal medicine services at the hospital.

Harrington will also be responsible for directing the medical education program for all physicians in the Department of Medicine at NWH, including attending staff, house staff, residents, interns and medical students.

Most recently, he was chief of the general medicine division in the Department of Medicine at Tufts New England Medical Center Hospitals. He held that position since 1981. Other positions held by Harrington at NEMC include director of the Hemodialysis Unit from 1971-1981 and administrative director of the Intensive Care Unit from 1973-1981.

Harrington graduated from Holy Cross in Worcester in 1958. He is also a 1962 cum laude graduate of Yale University School of Medicine. His internship, junior residency and senior residency were completed at North Carolina Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill, North Carolina in 1965. Harrington then completed a clinical and research fellowship in medicine at Tufts University School of Medicine in 1968.

After three years on staff at University Hospital in Boston, he rejoined the Renal Division at New England Medical Center Hospitals in 1971. He is currently a professor of medicine at Tufts University School of Medicine.

Harrington has co-edited several medical publications and been a member of the editorial board of the New England Journal of Medicine since 1982, and is active in numerous medical societies.

Harrington was born in Fall River, Massachusetts, and is married to the former Gertrude Hargraves from Fall River and has seven children.

Norwood BRL Jansen race tightens up

John Jansen Division

Don & Wally's Giants 6, Morrill Insurance Brewers 5

A seventh inning comeback by the Brewers fell one run short as the Giants held on to a 6-5 victory. Bill Gurley scored three times for the Giant. Bill Jacobs, John Carpenter and Mike Raymond had two hits apiece. For the Brewers, Paul Ryan had two hits. Jeff Towne scored twice and Tony Fruci and Joe Gugliotta each had a hit and a run scored.

Norwood Tire Cubs 9, Morrill Insurance Brewers 5

Two hits each by John Crimmins and Mike Joyce and the pitching of Mike Tashjian earned the Cubs a 9-5 win. Brian Needham, John Costa and Tashjian all had a hit for the Brewers. Derek Grudinskas had a homerun. Jeff Putnam scored twice and Bill rosetsky and Jeff Towne had a hit and run each.

Can Connection White Sox 8, Norwood Tire Cubs 5

The combined pitching effort of Jamie Weber, Todd Newman and Scott Heine and three hits by Mike Buckley lifted the Sox past the Cubs, 8-5. Newman and Heine had two hits each as did Jay Ferrari and Mark Slade. Dave Troilo, John Crimmins, Mike Joyce, Paul Menyo and John Costa all had hits for the Cubs. Troilo and Tim Tierney scored two runs each.

Can Connection White Sox 18, Norwood Co-op Blue Jays 3

Three hits apiece by Todd Newman (homerun), Brian Alty, Mark Slade and Jay Ferrari powered the Sox past the Jays, 18-33. Jeff Mahoney and Jamie Weber added homeruns and Shayne Dacko scored two runs. Bobby Irons hit a homerun for the Blue Jays. Dan Regan had a hit and run scored and Mike Connolly also scored a run.

John Jansen Division Standings

Guild Variety Dodgers 7-3, Can Connection White Sox 5-4, Norwood Co-op Blue Jays 5-5, Don & Wally's Giants 5-5, Norwood Tire Cubs 4-5 and the Morrill Insurance Brewers 3-7.

Westwood youth baseball tryouts

WESTWOOD — All Westwood boys, 13-16 years of age, who are interested in playing summer baseball on the junior and senior all-star teams are urged to sign up at the high school or junior high or at the High Street Fire Station at 10:00 a.m., Saturday May 24.

Joe Steeves Notches 15 K's in Brewer Victory

Soko's Pizza Brewers 11, Bennett's Plumbing Angels 4

Joe Steeves was brilliant on the mound tossing a four run four hit game with 15 K. The Brewer win puts them in a first place tie at 7-3 with the Angels.

Nick Pungitore led the offense with three hits and three runs. Mike Brown and Neil Canaday each had two hits and two runs and Mike Noe also scored two runs and made a great running catch on the warning track in left field. Mike Riley and Chuck Jenkins had a hit apiece and Carl Allendorph and Jim Connelley scored one run each.

Daeco Electronics Pirates 13, Local 103 Cardinals 3

Mike Duggan pitched a two hitter with seven K's and Jim Weber's three hits and three runs took the Pirates to a victory. Rusty Groh added three runs for the Pirates and Dave Tropeano had two hits and also scored three times. Matt Hebner scored twice for the Cards and had one hit and Bill Plasko had a hit and Mike Lind scored the other Cardinal run.

Columbo Braves 11, Local 103 Cardinals 4

Paul Barnes was the winning pitcher and helped his own cause with a hit and a run scored as the Braves beat the Cards, 11-4. Nick Hallik had two hits and two runs. Pat Callahan and Tim McNamara each scored two runs and Steve McCue and Eric Harribine each had one hit and one run scored. The Cardinals were led by Matt Hebner's three hits. Mike Lind held two hits and Pat Dougles and Bryan Comite had a hit and a run.

Bud Williams Division Standings

American League: Soko's Pizza Brewers 7-3, Bennett's Plumbing Angels 7-3, Elks Red Sox 5-5, and the Rotary Club Indians 3-7.

National League: Day St. Sports Shop Expos 9-1, Daeco Electronics Pirates 4-6, Local 103 Cardinals 3-7, and the Braves 2-8.

Bennet's Plumbing Angels 14, Rotary Club Indians 13

The Angels upped their record to 7-2 with Kevin Riley earning his second win in relief. Riley helped himself by scoring four runs. Carl Allendorph had two hits and four RBI and Steve Lesperance had two hits and two RBI. For the Indians, Rob Nee, Matt Sinicola and Jaideep Malhotra each had two hits and two runs scored.

Soko's Pizza Brewers 6, Elks Red Sox 3

Soko's Pizza won their fourth straight behind the three hit, 12 K performance of Sean Oldham. Nick Pungitore, Glen Kreger and Oldham all had a hit and run scored. Mike Brown, Joe Steeves and John Fleming chipped in with base hits. Frank Luongo had a hit and run scored for the Red Sox. Chris Johnston and Mike Hansberry had one hit each. Hansberry also pitched very well allowing just six hits and striking out 10.

Day St. Expos 17, Daeco Electronics Pirates 9

Scott Deflaminio and Ken Danti had three hits each and combined for five runs to power the Expos to their eighth victory of the year. Jon Anderson and Scott MacLeod had two hits each and added seven Expo runs. Sean MacDonald led the Pirates with three hits, Dave Tropeano had two hits, Jim Weber scored a pair of runs and Mike Duggan scored four times.

Day St. Sport Expos 13, Columbo Braves 2

An 11-run fifth inning broke open a 2-2 game and enabled the Expos to improve their record to 9-1. Ken Danti pitched a three hitter and had two hits of his own, scoring three runs. Scott MacLeod had three hits and two runs scored. Ken Groh and Doug Sulkala had two hits each and John Palumbo scored two runs. Eric Harribine, Scott Parsons and Paul Barnes had the hits for the Braves and Tim McNamara and Steve McCue scored the runs.

Norwood Little League

Norwood Elks Pirates, edged Union Warren Braves, 1-0, on just two hits. Mike McMahon and A.J. Grant hooked up into a pitching duel Monday, May 12 as the Braves lost a heartbreaker to the Pirates, 1-0. This was the second straight win for the Norwood Elk's team. The Pirates, a record of 3-3 and moved into second place in the National League. The Pirates scored their winning run in the first inning on two hits.

This was all Braves pitcher Mike McMahon would allow, for the entire game as he shut out the Pirates after that. Pirate pitcher A.J. Grant shut out the Braves on just four hits picking up his first win of the season, for the Pirates. The Braves out hit the Pirates, 4-2. Mike McMahon had two of the four hits, one was a double. This was a tough loss for McMahon, the Brave pitcher, who allowed one run on just two hits for the entire game.

The Pirates got their run in the first inning when A.J. Grant singled to start the inning. Brain Chisholm, doubled in the winning, after the next two batters had made outs.

Dodgers off the fast start

The Norwood Firefighter Dodgers, after two weeks of play in the season, have jumped out in front of the National League, by two full games. The Dodgers, 6-1, are the only team in the National League with a record of over 500. The Dodgers now are the strong favorite, not only in the National League but in the entire league, to beat. The American League, the big surprise with all five teams with 500 or better records, are all one game from first place. The Royals are on top with a 3-1 record. The American League looks to be up for grabs with the Royals probably a slight favorite. The Yankees, another strong contender, have yet to show it and have played poorly but are only one game behind the Royals with a 2-2 record.

The surprise has to be the Red Sox (4-2), Twins (4-3) and the Brewers (3-4), all of the American League. The Pirates stopped the Brewers from taking first place by crushing them 24-1 Thursday night. On May 8, Justin Taylor won his second game of the season for the Pirates and looks to be one of the better pitchers in the major league. Taylor hit his second homerun to take over the lead in the majors in homeruns with two. The National League has three top pitchers in Montesano for the Dodgers (2-1), Taylor for the Pirates (2-1) and McEachern for the Phillies (2-0).

Pirates maul Brewers

The Norwood Elk Pirates defeated the Mason Clark Electric Brewers Thursday night, May 8 by a football score of 24-2. This was the second win of the season for the Pirates against three losses. The Pirates sent their ace right hander Justin Taylor to the mound. Taylor picked up his second win of the season against one loss. Taylor also led the Pirates hitting barage with four hits, one his second homerun of the season, which leads the major leagues in homeruns.

The loss to the Brewers knocked them from a share of first place in the American League with the Royals, 3-1. The Brewers are now 3-2 in the American League. The Pirate victory moved them into third place in the National League wit a 2-3 record. The Pirates had a fantastic third inning against the Brewers in which they scored 21 runs on 13 hits. The game went only four innings because of the long third inning and was called after four innings of play.

Dodgers win again

The Norwood Firefighter Dodgers defeated the Norwood Elks Pirates Wednesday night, May 14 by a score of 3-0, on the strength of Joe Montesano. Left-arm Montesano, en route to his third win, struck out 12 Pirate batters while shutting them out on just one hit. Montesano now is the first pitcher in the major league with three wins with a record of 3-1. The Pirates, ruined Montesano's bid for a no-hitter in the last inning with a single by Justin Taylor. The Dodgers scored all their runs in the fourth inning on two homeruns. Gary LaFlamme led the inning off with a homerun. Joe O'Neil doubled and Dave Mooreshed hit a two run homer which accounted for the three Dodger runs that inning. Gary LaFlamme's homerun, his second of the season, tied him with Justin Taylor of the Pirates, with two each, for the lead in homeruns in the majors. The Dodgers now have four different players who have hit homeruns in the majors. The Dodgers are the only team in the National League over 500. The Dodgers now lead the National League by three full games with a record of 6-1 over the second place Columbo Giants who have a record of 3-4.

TOYOTA SERVICE EXCELLENCE AWARD
1983
1984
1985

We'll do it right the first time.

CLAIR TOYOTA SERVICE & PARTS EXCELLENCE AWARD WINNERS

1986 marked the third year in a row that Clair Toyota of West Roxbury won the Toyota Service Excellence Award. This Award is presented to the Best Dealerships in the New England Region. They are accompanied with the following letter from Toyota Metro Sales U.S.A.

"Dear Mr. Clair:

You and your entire service staff are to be congratualted for your accomplishment on achieving the distinguished honor of being a Toyota Service Excellence Award winner for 1985.

Your commitment to total customer satisfaction through quality service has enabled you to develop customer loyalty and repeat service business. Most assuredly, this commitment will result in increased business throughout your dealership in increased parts, service, and vehicle sales.

The winners of the 1985 Service Excellence Award have been honored in an ad which appeared in the March 24, 1986 issue of Automotive News.

Again, congratulations for your achievement in 1985 and best wishes for your continued successu in 1986.

Sincerely,

H. A. Bracken

NOTICE OF FIDUCIARY'S ACCOUNT

To all persons interested in the estate of Irving M. Dichter late of Newton, in said County, deceased.

You are hereby notified pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. Rule 72 that the 3rd account of Arlene Z. Bloom, Paul D. Dichter and David J. Mintz as Trustees (the fiduciaries) under trust W of the will of said deceased for the benefit of Arlene Z. Dichter and others has been presented to said Court for allowance.

If you desire to preserve your right to file an objection to said account, you or your attorney must file a written appearance in said Court at Cambridge on or before the 11th day of June, 1986, the return day of this citation. You may upon written request by registered or certified mail to the fiduciaries, or to the attorney for the fiduciaries, obtain without cost a copy of said account. If you desire to object to any item of said account, you must, in addition to filing a written appearance as aforesaid, file within thirty days after said return day or within such other time as the Court upon motion may order a written statement of each such item together with the grounds for each objection thereto, a copy to be served upon the fiduciaries pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. Rule 5.

Witness, Sheila E. McGovern, Esquire, First Judge of said Court, this 11th day of March, 1986.

R_x for Flu or Chicken Pox: Kindness

Be good to yourself when you've got the flu or chicken pox. Take it easy. Get plenty of rest.

Viral illnesses such as these are usually self-limiting. Time will cure them.

Check with your doctor about using medications to treat flu or chicken pox. For children—including teenagers—medications such as aspirin and aspirin-containing products may not be a good idea. A rare but dangerous condition called Reye syndrome may develop in young people just when they appear to be recovering. Studies suggest a link between the development of Reye and the use of aspirin to treat the flu or chicken pox.

Students invited to study in Israel

NEWTON — High School students entering their junior year are invited to participate in a program enabling them to spend the 11th grade studying in Israel.

Designed and administered by the Bureau of Jewish Education of Greater Boston, the program is open to any student who has completed 10th grade with a strong academic record.

The goal of the Junior-Year-in-Israel program, according to BJE Executive Director Dr. Daniel J. Margolis, is to provide an intensive Jewish educational experience for Greater Boston teens.

These teens can then be expected to return home with an increased sense of commonality with Israel and an eagerness to take their place among Boston's future Jewish leaders.

Junior-Year-in-Israel is set on the campus of Kiryat Hatfutzot, 10 minutes outside Jerusalem.

The academic program that has been formulated will include English, American history, mathematics, physics, Spanish or French. A concommitant Jewish studies curriculum has been designed to take optimal advantage of the student's access to Israel's rich, historic setting.

The academic program, under the supervision of the Israeli Ministry of Education along with the BJE, has been carefully prepared to parallel the studies of 11th grade students at top public and private schools in Greater Boston.

In addition to intensive classroom and field experiences, students in the Junior-Year-in-Israel program will be fully integrated into Israel society. Israeli families have been enlisted with whom to match American youths for Shabbat observances, holidays and other festive gatherings. Students are also expected to participate in religious services and to observe kashrut (religious dietery laws), Shabbat (Sabbath) and holidays.

In preparation for the program, the BJE will provide in-depth orientation sessions at its Newton headquarters for both students and parents.

Upon return, students are expected to share their experiences through speaking engagements and written articles prepared for the Greater Boston community.

Throughout the year, parents of Junior-Year-Abroad students will be invited to participate in a family support program conducted by the BJE to deal with questions and concerns unique to such a venture.

Persons interested in applying to Tichon Yerushalayim should contact the BJE at 333 Nahanton St., Newton 02159. Or call 965-7350 to request a brochure and a packet of application materials.

City prepares for 300th

By Les Orsini
Staff Writer

NEWTON - The city celebrated its 100th birthday 13 years ago. A year and a half from now - on Jan. 11, 1988, to be precise - Newton will celebrate its tricentennial.

No, the city is not aging faster than time, even though it might appear Newton grew 200 years in the last 15.

In 1973, Newton celebrated its 100th anniversary as a city. In 1988, it will be 300 years since inhabitants of this area separated from Cambridge and to be incorporated as an independent town.

A long fight for independence ended on Jan. 11, 1688 when local citizens held their first meeting as an independent town. What would become Newton was then known as Cambridge Village.

According to records at the Jackson Homestead, the issues in the struggle were taxes, politics and religion.

Residents in this area found the distance to church at Harvard Square too far. It was also annoying to make that same journey to participate in Cambridge Town Meeting and train in the militia.

Cambridge, on the other hand, did not want to lose the taxes paid by inhabitants in this area.

Residents in 1673 first petitioned the Great and General Court of Massachusetts for separation, according to Duscha Scott, director of the Jackson Homestead.

They were allowed to elect their first selectmen in 1679, but it wasn't until nine years later that what had been known as Cambridge South of the River became Cambridge Village.

It is now 298 years later and a lot of water has passed under the spot where once stood the old wooden bridge that spanned the Charles River and joined Cambridge Village to its rejected sire.

The Board of Aldermen have approved Mayor Theodore D. Mann's request for $10,000 "seed money" to begin preparations for the tricentennial celebration. Mann has appointed a committee of around 50 citizens to develop a program for the festivities.

The committee will hold its first public meeting on June 3 at 8:30 a.m. in City Hall. All residents are invited to attend and participate, said Linda Plaut, director of the city's Arts in the Parks program.

The mayor has asked Plaut to organize the initial committee.

No events have been planned yet, but Mann said he hopes the tricentennial celebration will equal, if not surpass, the 100 year anniversary.

"That was sensational," the mayor said of the 1973 bash. "We would hope to be even more ambitious, given that this is the 300th year."

The mayor and Plaut envision a reenactment on Jan. 11, 1988 of that historic meeting when Cambridge Village officially became a town.

Vision of library closer to reality

NEWTON — They sat in the mayor's office looking, for all the world, like a young married couple who just heard the doctor say that, after years of trying, they had finally managed to conceive a child.

They were the principals involved in the development of a new main library facility for the city.

> 'I really believe it's going to happen now.'
> Dorothy Reichard

Some of them, like City Librarian Virginia Tashjian, had been working on the project for more than 20 years. Others, like members of the city's Designer Selection Committee and representatives of the architectural firms commissioned to draw up plans for the new library, had joined in on the project more recently.

They were all uniformly buoyed by the news that the project had finally taken shape, enthused at the prospect of its achieving maturity by 1988 and eager to tackle the task ahead of them.

The occasion in the mayor's office was the official announcement that a team of internationally renowned architects had been chosen to design a new, main library that, together with City Hall, would create a "municipal-cultural center" at the corner of Homer and Walnut streets.

The architectural team of A. Anthony Tappe and Kallmann, McKinnell and Wood was chosen because of its familiarity with the city's library building program and because of their experience in planning and designing libraries for more than 14 municipalities in New England, according to the mayor.

In their own words, the team stated, "We believe that the experience of our team on similar projects assures the City of Newton the highest possible level of consulting and design services and the best possible library for the City of Newton."

According to Joseph Michelson, head of the Designer Selection Committee, the architectural team was chosen from 25 who applied for the job.

Great day for heroes

By Andrew P. McCloy

NEWTON — Soldiers, families and friends gathered in the Garden City Monday to pay tribute to the men and women who sacrificed their lives in war to ensure that Americans may live in freedom.

The city's Memorial Day Parade proved to be an entertaining and colorful event, with marching bands playing songs and veterans marching proudly, onlookers giving a glimpse of traditions American patriotism.

In the morning, beneath a lily-white sky, about forty soldiers met beside the graves of fallen comrades to place a wreath expressing gratitude and sorrow in the Newton Cemetery Veterans lot.

"These men and women died to keep this country free," said Rev. William C. Lowe at the wreath laying. "They should be lovingly preserved and enhanced for future generations. We must remember that the peace of God passes all human understanding."

In the early afternoon, two soldiers stood before the Vietnam Veterans Memorial on Washington Street in Newton, one holding an American flag, the other a POW/MIA banner. "We must remember the brave women and men who gave their lives for our freedom," Rev. William C. Lowe said to the small crowd in front of the memorial. "It is our hope that we may be reawakened do that we all may be peacemakers. Let us be thankful for those who fought, died and suffered for our country in Vietnam."

Later in the afternoon, as the sun burned through the hazy clouds, the parade flowed up Washington Street to Newtonville Square, ending up on Commonwealth Avenue. There Mayor Theodore D. Mann, along with Congressman Barney Frank and a host of other dignitaries, observed the various floats and bands pass by.

After the last section of the parade passed by, the Mayor and Veterans' Agent Carelton Merrill joined Father Anthony Moore, of St. Bernard's parish, on the steps of the Newton War Memorial Building, overlooking the NEWTON — Some call it a boost to the city's low-income housing stock. Others call it blackmail. There is one thing, though, that opponents and proponents of the city's 10 Percent housing ordinance agree on. It is not working very well.

"I am very upset with the Land Use Committee," Mark White, an attorney and former alderman said. "I helped write this ordinance, but I do not like what has happened. I think I helped create a Frankenstein."

White is representing Ecodesign, Inc., a company that has petitioned the committee to change an existing two-family building at 120 Church Street into a three-family building. Because the neighborhood is zoned for two-family houses, White's client must receive a special permit from the Board of Aldermen before increasing the density of the structure beyond what they can do by right. In return for the density bonus, the city requires a contribution to the low-income housing stock.

The problem, according to White, is a lack of any specific requirements for the contribution.

"The neighbors are in favor," White said of the conversion. "We didn't anticipate any problem, but there was. The problem is there is no formula for dealing with contributions for developments under 10 units."

He says the board's past decisions regarding the ordinance "hurts the small developer."

"What the board has been doing is taking the average sale price of the units, take 10 percent of that, and that is what they ask for

Stolen police exam scandal hits home

By Ed Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — At least one of the city's police officers has been questioned in connection with a widening federal probe involving stolen civil service police examinations, law enforcement sources said last week.

Marilyn T. Connell, the first woman in the state promoted to the rank of lieutenant, has been interviewed by State Police investigators and subpoenaed by a federal grand jury exploring the exam scandal, according to individuals close to the case.

The sources, who requested anonymity, emphasized repeatedly that Connell, a respected 13-year veteran of the force, has not been charged with any wrongdoing in connection with the case.

Newton is among 10 departments linked to allegations that police officers were able to obtain civil service promotional exam questions in advance of the tests.

Officers from the Metropolitan Police, the Capitol Police and departments in Revere, Malden, Medford, Somerville Plymouth, Cambridge and Arlington are also being investigated for allegedly buying or procuring the exams.

Police chiefs in at least four of the departments also have been implicated and members of the Cambridge and Arlington fire departments allegedly have received stolen copies of other promotional tests.

Connell scored 93 percent on an April 1983 lieutenant's exam and was promoted 15 months later during a ceremony in Mayor Theodore D. Mann's office.

She was one of six police sergeants in a field of 173 who scored 90 percent or better on the exam.

Prayer breakfast stresses unity

By Kevin C. Kennedy
Staff Writer

CHESTNUT HILL — More than 2,000 eggs were separated from their shells for the 12th Annual Mayor's Prayer Breakfast, but the rest of the morning was spent putting things back together ... mending the city's diverse fabric and stressing the importance of unity and harmony in the community.

Newton District Court Justice Monte G. Basbas, with only a moment's notice that he would be filling in for traditional emcee Ben Lipson, led a crowd of 1,000 diners through a program of scripture readings and musical selections before handing the mike over to Mayor Theodore Mann with a huge bear hug.

Mann presented this year's Centennial Medallion Awards to Aldermen Robert Tennant and Wendell Bauckman and to Eloise Houghton.

Friends of Tennant who had not seen him since he suffered a stroke last fall were pleasantly surprised by his apparent health and obvious good cheer. In presenting the medallion to Tennant, Mayor Mann cited his decades of community service, including 23 years on the Board of Aldermen, and called him "a man who has served this city in every single capacity."

After long, loud applause, during which many in the crowd rose to their feet, Tennant said, "My wife said, 'Make it short or I'll kick you.'" His acceptance speech was shortened even further when the emotions of the moment caught up with him.

Bauckman, who was also cited for his years of community service, including 44 years on the Board of Aldermen — 20 as president, told the crowd he was "grateful for the opportunity to serve the city I love."

Bay State chess champs bringing home trophies

By Audrey Lum

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Proving that the state of chess is alive and well in Massachusetts, nine chessplayers from the Bay State, along with hundreds of other children from 40 states, participated in the 1986 United States National Elementary Scholastic chess championships held in Charlotte, North Carolina, in May.

It was a familiar place for those who played in the nationals there last year.

At the opening ceremony, Larry and Jill Goldberg, chief organizers of this rated event, sanctioned by the United States Chess Foundation, greeted the chessplayers. The "Today Show" was on the scene to capture the highlights of the weekend.

Stephen Doyle, president of the United States Chess Federation (U.S.C.F.) commented that this year was the largest turnout for a national tournament and that it was the strongest set of players the top seven boards were rated over 1700.

One of the local politicians looked into the eager and enthusiastic crowd and remarked. "The next world champion should come from the U.S. not Russia."

With the opening ceremony over elementary 4-6 grade) and junior varsity (under 1200) players proceeded to the ballroom to begin round one. This tournament consisted of a swiss round robin of seven games, four to be played on Saturday and three games to be played Sunday.

Primary chessplayers (grades K-3) could be seen playing their games over the TV monitors located in the lobby, since all parents and coaches were barred from the primary playing area in the ballroom.

The awards ceremony produced four trophy winners from our state with others playing exceptionally well.

Elliot Lum, age 10, from the Ward School (rating 1596) along with four other chessplayers ended up with a score of six points out of a perfect score of seven. With only 15 individual place trophies to be awarded Elliot clutched onto the two rabbit's feet his grandfather gave him. Tension mounted as the countdown began with the award to the 15th place winner.

Applause was held until all winners were announced. As the sixth place trophy was being awarded, Elliot thought for sure he would be called next. It was not until the fourth place trophy was awarded that the realized how well he had done.

Based on tie-breaker points, an elated radiant and thrilled young man from Newton came away with a shiney, huge trophy as third place national champion to add to his collection. Always a bit tense, he commented, "I knew I was going to get a trophy, but not third place." He broke out in a big smile. A veteran of previous national tournaments, he looks forward to his fourth one next spring.

Sharing his victory over frozen chocolate bananas with his fourth grade class from the Ward School, children congratulated him and asked him all kinds of questions about the tournament. One girl who thought the event was very important and special, asked, "Did you have to wear a tie?"

Lum and Paul Parsons, of west Newton were among 490 children from over 40 states who participated.

(Audrey Lum is Elliot Lum's mother

Elliot could not help put play a little 'show and tell' with the 4th graders at the Ward School.

Vision of library is closer to reality

Mayor Mann waxed poetic, on Friday, about the $12 million building he hopes will be completed in 1988, in time for the city's tricentennial celebration. After praising those in the city's Library Department who have managed to deliver the highest level of service from the ancient facility in Newton Corner ("Iron men in wooden ships," he called them.) he predicted the final product will be "a flagship for all libraries in the world."

Mann spoke of the value of putting "the cultural heart next to the municipal heart" and enthused that the new "muni-cultural center" could end up "the most outstanding building since the Taj Mahal."

Dorothy Reichard, representing the Library Trustees, who have been pushing for a new facility for several decades, was ecstatic about the announcement and the prospect of the new library's being completed in 1988. "This is an unbelievable meeting," she said in the mayor's office. "I really believe it's going to happen now." She confessed that, for years, she thought the closest she would come to a library on the Homer-Walnut site would be when she was buried in Newton Cemetery, which abuts the site.

After the official announcement in the mayor's office, the group adjourned to the Homer-Walnut site for a photo session. They kept looking back at the corner of the location, envisioning what the library might look like.

When the photographer was through and the press left, the group lingered in the middle of the open field, relishing the prospect that lay ahead for them.

The next step in the process, according to Nancy Criscitiello, head of the Friends of the Library, will be the completion of another feasibility study near the end of June.

A fundraising project, run by Ketchum Associates, will be in hire gear soon, according to the mayor, spurred by a major event planned to take place at the Newton Marriott. Besides private funding, "the new facility which will launch Newton's library system into the 21st century will be paid for by funds received from the sale of surplus properties — especially from the sale of the Warren Jr. High building," according to Mayor Mann.

The library fund is also the repository of revenues accrued through the newly levied hotel/motel tax. It now boasts some $2 million, according to the mayor.

'Teaching Artist' highlights faculty work

NEWTON — Art faculty members of the Newton public schools will exhibit their own art work in a show entitled, "The Teaching Artist" at the Newton Arts Center, 61 Washington Park, Newtonville, 964-3424. The show will run from June 13-22 with an opening reception on June 13 from 6-9 p.m. The public is invited to attend and view works of several Newton art teachers. The show will offer a full range of two- and three-dimensional art work.

Teachers exhibiting are Ray Lavin, Ellen Milan, Ron Morris, Daveda Movitz, Marie Palluotto, Lori Schill, Carolyn Shapiro, Beryl Silverthorne, Chris Small, Sandra Truant, Susan Varga, and Jeffrey Wixon. Also exhibiting is John C. Harper, Coordinator of Fine Arts, Newton public schools.

The $55 Mammogram.

A small price to pay for your health and peace of mind.

This service is offered by the Health Connection through the WalthamWeston Hospital & Medical Center.

The first to turn to when you want a breast x-ray.

WalthamWeston Hospital & Medical Center is urging all women between the ages of 35 and 40 to have a baseline mammogram, as recommended by the American Cancer Society. Between the ages of 40 and 50, a mammogram is recommended every two years, and every year after age 50.

The procedure at WalthamWeston is the most comprehensive, state-of-the-art, screening technology available anywhere. It's safe, isn't painful, and usually takes less than half an hour. It's the best chance of finding breast cancer early.

A physician referral is not necessary for a mammogram. Screenings are performed daily. Please call (617) 647-6271 between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. to schedule an appointment. Don't wait. It's a call that could save your health and peace of mind.

Seat belts saved their lives

By Ed Cafasso
Staff Writer

BOSTON — Newton resident Val Kristler believes she may never have lived to see her daughter's second birthday if she hadn't worn her seat belt that morning one month ago today.

She fell asleep at the wheel of her Toyota Corolla at 10 a.m. on Interstate 89 in New Hampshire. Her doctor said only her seat belt stopped her from being propelled through the windshield to an almost certain death.

Kristler's story of survival, along with about 70 others like it since the first of the year, was retold last week to launch the state's summertime safety belt education project, the "Make It Click Challenge."

Officials from Newton and Waltham joined Gov. Michael S. Dukakis at the John W. McCormack Building to kick off the effort in 86 communities as residents across the state prepared for the traditional long Memorial Day weekend.

Newton Police Lt. James M. O'Donnell, Waltham Mayor Willam F. Stanley, Waltham Police Safety Officer Steven D. Fogg and two dozen "seat belt survivors" like Kristler were on-hand to issue the challenge.

"The seat belt law continues to save lives and reduce serious injuries, but in the face of lower gasoline prices and reduced travel abroad, we know there are going to be significantly greater numbers of people on our highways this summer," Dukakis said.

"It is all the more reason to place special emphasis on these 101 critical days of summer from now until Labor Day," he added. "We at the state level will be working hard, bringing safety belt information to the public. I am issuing a challenge to the leaders here to get behind this life-saving effort."

Stanley said he will bring that "caring message" home to Waltham when he, Fogg and state Public Safety Secretary Charles Barry hold a press conference within the next week to 10 days.

Dukakis asked local public safety and health officials to distribute brochures, posters, bumper stickers and automobile litter bags and to stage seat belt education programs for their community.

O'Donnell, who represented Newton Mayor Theodore D. Mann and Police William F. Quinn, said Garden City officials have traditionally chosen the Memorial Day holiday weekend to issue summertime travel safety warnings.

He and Quinn were members of the state's Seat Belt Coalition before the law took effect in January. The law's popularity will be tested at the polls this November in a statewide referendum.

"As the weather gets nicer, we tend to have more accidents," O'Donnell said. "If people start buckling up, we will save more lives.

"I've seen accidents where people wearing seatbelts have come out with very little or no injuries when they otherwise would have been severely injured. A lot of times it's the difference between living and dying," he added.

Critics of the legislation say it represents an unfair governmental intrusion into the private lives of citizens, but advocates point to a 12.4 percent decrease in automotive fatalities during the first four months of this year as evidence of the new law's worth.

Kristler, 39, of 355 Lexington St., said she understands the arguments raised by seat belt law opponents, but added, "I feel like there's a greater public good to be served. The law is enforced secondarily. It's not daily intrusion."

A policy specialist for the Social Security Administration office in Boston, Kristler was on her way to Vermont when her car hit a guard rail, went out of control and drove down a 35-foot embankment

The vehicle rolled over three times and landed on its roof, but she was able to walk away with only a strained back and some bruises.

Prior to the law taking effect, Kristler knew "intellectually, it was a good idea. I just never bothered. I just never followed through.

"As I was going off the road that day, I thought, 'My God, I may be killed or crippled. That would be terrible for my family.' That's what went through my mind," she said.

Now, Kristler is convinced making it click "makes sense, law or no law. I feel like it saved my life because I wouldn't have buckled up that day if it wasn't for the law."

Firefighters may sue city

By Howard Altman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The president of the state-wide firefighters union says his organization will file suit against the city if "they insist on including drug testing language" in any new contract. Firefighters here have been without a contract for two years.

In addition, T. Dustin Alward says it is conceivable that firefighters from other departments in the state could join Newton firefighters in any job action that results from a protracted stalemate in negotiations. Newton firefighters have been without a contract for two years.

"We are already on record as being opposed to arbitrary drug testing," the president of Professional Firefighters of Massachusetts says. "If this is the first case to come through the door, we have already voted to go to file suit on behalf of the Newton firefighters."

Alward says he will challenge both the constitutionality of drug testing and whether or not a union "can bargain away an individual's rights."

"We are strongly opposed to the arbitrary and capricious nature of drug testing," he says. "Also, no one has yet decided if this is a proper subject for collective bargaining. No mayor, chief or city or town official has the right to search a firefighter's locker, home or pockets. We feel that they do not have the right to search an individual's bodily fluids, which are a much more personal possession."

Alward, a captain in the Randolph fire department, angrily charges that Mayor Theodore Mann, by calling for drug tests for firefighters, "is putting the cart before the horse."

Chief Administrative Officer Richard Kelliher disagrees with Alward's contention that drug testing violates individual rights and questions his involvement in a local labor dispute.

Legal profession needs watchdogs

Two things came out of the speeches given during Sunday's graduation exercises at Boston College Law School on Centre Street.

First, the City of Newton should be proud that such a venerable institution has sprung up in its midst. According to the school's dean, Daniel R. Coquillette, BC Law stands tall among its peers. It ranks 15th in the nation in terms of Law School Aptitude Test scores. It ranks eighth in the nation in terms of the number of applications it receives. It ranks 15th for the "scholarly production" of its faculty members. BC Law students, this year, became world champions in International Moot Court Competition.

Furthermore, the school has become known as an excellent training ground for "working lawyers," lawyers who tackle and solve the problems of everyday life and refuse to shy away from "controversial causes and unpopular clients." As Dean Coquillette commented Sunday, the school, for all its qualifications, "has no history of snobism." Testimony to his comment could be found in the plethora of minorities and women among this year's 248 graduates.

The second thing to come out of Sunday's proceedings was the shocking news that the number of lawyers in the United States doubled from 1960 to 1980 — from 250,000 to 500,000. In the past six years, 200,000 new attorneys have started up practices. By 1987, it was predicted, there will be 750,000 attorneys in this country.

Because of the startling increase in their numbers, lawyers will now, more than ever, have to make sure their professional house is in order. Organized bar associations picked up the ball in the aftermath of the Watergate scandal, in which 29 lawyers were implicated, but they still have a long way to run with it.

It may be true, as Father Robert Drinan said in his address, that more has been done to enforce the ethics of the legal profession in the past 10 years than in the previous 100, but even more mechanisms are needed for lawyers to "police their own."

We appeal to the Massachusetts Bar Association to be aggressive in it pursuit of high ethical standards. Our own late, great judge, Frank Flaschner, provides a model of professional ethics to which every lawyer could aspire. And the Flaschner Jucicial Institute provides the machinery to make sure judges are apprised of recent changes in the laws of the commonwealth.

W.C. Fields, according to Coquillette, was found standing in a cemetery once, staring at a headstone. Asked what he was doing there, Fields explained that he was puzzled by the epitaph engraved on the stone: "Here lies an able lawyer and an honest man." Fields said he was trying to figure out how they managed to bury two men under one headstone.

It's up to the individual lawyers in organized bar associations to make sure that stories like that do not multiply in the future, at something approximating the incredible growth of their own ranks. Let their own increase insure more expeditious settlement of disputes and dispensation of justice, not further obfuscation of the law.

Dems did a disservice to Evelyn Murphy

Democrats, to use a convoluted metaphor, kicked themselves in the teeth at the party convention by giving an endorsement to Sen. Gerard D'Amico over Evelyn Murphy. Rivals for the lieutenant governor nomination were virtually deadlocked, D'Amico out front by 92 votes of the 4,234 cast in what was called an upset. She deserved better.

Those delegates who put the thumb on Murphy were responding to obvious legislative nudging. D'Amico, an avowed all-out loyalist of Sen. President Bulger, had the Buddies Club rallying around him with increasing intensity over past weeks. Evelyn Murphy is an outsider to the power structure on Beacon Hill as a non-lawmaker and administrative technocrat.

Looking down the road, House and Senate members would be aware that her election to the lieutenant governor slot, a zilch job except for progression hopes, might mean a chance for corner office glory. It happened before when John Volpe left to join the Nixon cabinet and Frank Sargent inherited the governorship. Michael Dukakis could be on the 1988 national ticket, thus clearing the way for the No. 2 incumbent to move up.

How much the counter move was plotted and executed on these grounds is not to measured, perhaps, but it had to be a factor. Thwarted in a secretary of state effort, Ms. Murphy has to fight an uphill battle that will be a highlight of the September primary.

She has a lot going for her, having paid her dues in public service in two major administrative positions. A move from the environmental field in a role as the Dukakis chief lieutenant on the business front demonstrated a broad range of capability. It also has given her a statewide recognition benefit to throw into the arena. Until now, D'Amico impact has been regional. It is to the full body of Democratic voters in the primary that she will be making a pitch, rather than delegates with ties to Senate and House incumbents, so she undoubtedly will rate as an even choice, if not the favorite.

As could have been anticipated, no Dukakis support for Murphy was evident at the convention. While the governor clearly controls the party structure, it is to his own fortunes in legislation he must look to this year. Neutrality on any candidacy is understandable.

Be that as it is, the Democrats in tribal counsel could have done better by Evelyn Murphy.

Crackdown on child support dodgers nearly implemented

By Loring Swaim

One of the disgraceful aspects of our society is the cruel disdain some fathers display towards supporting their family, more specifically their own children.

Today, nationally, 15 million children live in one-parent families. In most of them, the father skipped out or is unknown. One-third of those children exist below the poverty line, either because their missing father has totally reneged on supporting his family or as in half the cases, he contributes less than he should.

Massachusetts happens to rank in the top of states collecting child support. Yet, less than 20 percent of the 137,000 single-parent families here receive all they are due (the average support order is a paltry $1800 per year,) though one in six of the absent fathers earns over $25,000 a year.

Some people call the tragic phenomenon "the feminization of poverty."

All tolled, government assistance to single-parent families costs taxpayers $20 to $30 billion.

Why such indirect abuse? Why such callous irresponsibility?

Experts believe the breakdown is a function of the permissive society and sexual revolution we have encouraged. Rising divorce rates, rampany teen-age pregnancies, out-of-wedlock births inevitably follow if our young people lack direction and purpose.

Far from tackling the fundamental causes of family breakdown, authorities are preoccupied with sheer survival, with improving the pipeline of support services just to sustain innocent children.

To compel urgency in Massachusetts, the federal government's Health and Human Services Department, its patience running thin, has threatened to cut off $21 million in child support remimbursements to the state and $200 million in AFDC reimbursements. The deadline for corrective action – already extended several times – is June 1.

In 1984, Gov. Dukakis named a 32-member Child Support Commission to review existing fragmented enforcement procedures and recommend changes "to create a child support system that is predictable, effective and fair." His Human Services advisor, Catherine Dunham, headed the effort.

Their package of reforms has been refined th elast four months in serious negotiations between judges, legislators and interested parties. House 5610, by Rep. Schur and Sen. D'Damico, embodies the changes. It cleared House Ways and Means last week and is on this week's House calendar.

With $221 million in federal bucks hanging on speed, prompt passage in both branches is assumed.

Delinquent parents beware: you'll have little escape from your responsibilities henceforth.

Among the changes, child support will be centralized in Public Welfare instead of fragmented among 153 jurisdictions and agencies as presently. If approved, a system of hearings officers will be established to assist court enforcement. New collection mechanisms will cover both AFDC and non-AFDC families. Non-support proceedings will become civil, i.e., much swifter.

In the interest of fairness, an advisory committee will be named to establish uniform guidelines for standardized dollar amounts for support orders (including medical insurance where possible,) replacing today's often arbitrary and capricious orders. Wage withholding, income assignment and the interstate exchange of information will be instituted even for out-of-state delinquent parents. There will be procedures for establishing paternity via approved genetic market blood tests.

> Whether we like it or not, we are our brother's keeper.

None of the above, of course, can make up for the emotional impact on innocent children of family discord and financial stress. Whether we like it or not, we are our brother's keeper.

Indeed, in a free society, that should be our privilege.

(Loring Swaim is a state columnist.)

GOP candidates maintaining rare silence since convention

By J.J. Smith

Governor Michael S. Dukakis must be scratching his head in puzzlement: It's been more than a month since Republicans held their nominating convention and that party's official gubernatorial nominee and his challenger each could qualify for missing person designation.

The incumbent Democratic governor, after all, did anticipate an easy race –but this easy? It seems as though GOP endorsed gubernatorial challenger Royall Switzler, the state representative from Wellesley, and his conservative opponent, Gregory S. Hyatt, have dropped from sight. Certainly, nothing meaningful has been heard from either since the convention.

Switzler, the bombastic gadfly of the Legislature known for his booming baritone and filibusting style, won party approval after two ballots and without speaking a word to the assembled delegates. Apparently he figures what worked once will work twice. At least that's what his strange and unnatural silence would suggest.

Hyatt's silence is more understandable: He probably's still recuperating from the expert mugging administered him at the convention when Beacon Hill Republicans decided he wouldn't do– and shanghied Switzler into the convention nomination nod. Hyatt must feel like he went one on one with the entire Boston Celtics lineup after that one.

But where's Switzler? His candidacy is hobbled by liabilities–a strong incumbent governor, his affiliation with a woebegone statewide GOP setup, with a much-too-late start for such an important run. Yet the man has hardly been heard from. One might well ask, "Where's the beef?"

Is this the same Switzler who was the darling of the State House news media for his savage, skillful and unrelenting gadfly role on the house floor? Admittedly, Switzler rarely won a vote, but, nontheless, he was reknowned for tiresome tirades at the speaker's podium and his badgering of the Democratic-dominated house. Even at his most tiresome, he was a legislator who often was dead on target, whose research was legendary and who dissected budget items with shrewd insight.

Now Switzler has a statewide forum–via the blessing of the GOP convention - he is exposed to a statewide audience that must grant him at least a hearing. But it seems he's bunking somewhere with Judge Crater, and not taking advantage of the opportunity.

This is the man House Speaker Geroge Keverian, a Democrat, conceded was such a pain that he made the tongue-in-cheek suggestion that he would gladly raise money for Switzler's gubernatorial candidacy just to see him depart the house.

Expectations that a Switzler on the campiagn trail would reflect the gadfly Switzler of the House floor so far have not been fulfilled. Time could be passing him by.

Meanwhile, Greg Hyatt is doing no better and he's got to get cracking soon or his hopes of upsetting Switzler in the September Republican primary will sink without trace.

Governor Dukakis, meanwhile, can't believe his good luck. The more time he has to act and look presidential without the demands of a hard campaign the better he likes it.

Reagan's lobby efforts fail in Arab arms deal

By Peter A. Brown

WASHINGTON — The furor over President Reagan's efforts to sell missiles to Saudi Arabia raises troubling questions about White House attitudes toward America's Jewish community.

The White House invited some Jewish leaders to meet with Reagan so he might try to persuade them to support the sale. Jewish leaders interpreted this public invitation as an attempt to pressure them into supporting the package — and they felt it also called into question their loyalty to the United States.

Since the White House is a strong supporter of Israel, it couldn't figure out why Jews wouldn't give them a hand in selling $354 million worth of missiles to Saudi Arabia, even though Saudi Arabia supports groups that call for pushing the Israelis into the sea.

Senate leaders said many lawmakers feared voting for the arms sale because they worried about retaliation from Jewish voters.

Lawmakers are well aware Jewish groups helped knock off former Senate Foreign Relations Chairman Charles Percy, R-Ill., in 1984 for seeking to navigate a middle course between Arabs and Israelis in the Middle East.

The idea for the meeting came from Senate Foreign Relations Committee Chairman Richard Lugar, R-Ind. He and everyone else in the GOP establishment are among Israel's staunchest supporters, so they couldn't believe anyone would question their motives on the arms sales.

So, the president's aides and Lugar figured, if the Jewish community went along, it might do the trick. And it might have, but anyone who thought that would occur is smoking the stuff Nancy Reagan is trying to get kids to kick.

Jewish organizations felt the president's efforts were lending credence to anti-Semitic stereotypes that say Jews control the government and the money.

They considered it an effort to portray the choice as either being for Reagan and therefore the United States, or being against him and therefore siding with Israel.

"I know of no instance this administration or any administration has gone to Turkish Americans to ask for arms for Greece; Polish Americans to grant Soviet trade concessions or to the Catholic Church to lobby for abortion," said a top official of a major Jewish organization.

Within the White House there were raw nerves among officials who questioned why Jewish groups were unwilling to support Reagan when he says the sale is in the U.S. self-interest.

"In their zeal to protect their Saudi friends they're seeking to put the blame on Israel and the Jews, when they should be taking a closer look at Saudi Arabia," one official said.

The reality is that the package is unpopular for many reasons.

There are legitimate concerns that U.S. weapons might wind up in terrorist hands. There is much resentment towards the Saudi ability to influence oil prices. And the fact the Saudis criticized Reagan's strike against Libya didn't help either.

Within the White House there were raw nerves among officials who questioned why Jewish groups were unwilling to support Reagan when he says the sale is in the U.S. self-interest.

If the package does get a go-ahead when it comes up for a vote in early June it will be only because Reagan backed down and agreed to delete from the package shoulder-held Stinger missiles that would be a terrorist's delight.

Opponents suggested to the administration months ago that the easy way to get the package through was to delete the Stingers, but White House officials thought they could force it through. In the same way, they thought they could bully the Jewish community into doing what it perceived to be against its self-interest.

The White House argued that if America is to look after its own self-interest in the Middle East it must keep open the lines of communication with moderate Arab states.

There are few — even among Israel's strongest supporters — who disagree with that premise.

The problem is the way the effort on Saudi Arabia's behalf was handled. Whether intended or not, the White House made American Jews scapegoats for the president being unable to get his way with Congress.

The scholarship fund gap

To the editor:

Over the years I have read, with enjoyment, many of the letters sent in by the ubiquitous Andy Marshall. Thus it was with her recent letter of 14 May concerning the success of the Newton Social Science Club in providing college scholarships.

However, I would like to point out that last year's Bobby Donahue Scholarship award to a graduating senior member of the Newton North High School football team was for $1,600. This year's winner, John J. Flynn, will receive a scholarship for $2,000.

Since 1979, we have awarded 10 scholarships worth a total of $7,500.

'Why not to drink and drive'

Editor's Note: The following letter was sent as an entry in a television essay contest on drinking and driving. The child's grandmother, who lives in Newton, sent the letter in for publication.

"Why not to drink and drive"

I think you should not drink and drive because you act stupid. You lose your common sense. You could hit a little child walking home from school. You could hit a man or a lady in a car. How should they know that someone was drunk on the road? A mother who raises a baby and loves that baby and tucks that baby in bed every night, she wants that baby to have a long life. Then she takes that baby out for a ride. How short the baby's life can end. The mother will never feel happy again. She will always have that pain that she lost her baby because some person did not think and drove drunk.

I think you should not drink and drive because you could get hurt and so could other people. And you hurt your friends feelings, you can call them names and they don't like you anymore.

If you do drink, call someone to pick you up or have someone call for you. If you are home alone and your're drunk, call a friend and ask if he or she could come over for a little bit till your parents come home. If they can't, call an aunt or uncle and see if they can come over. I'm sure they won't mind. I think the best thing is not to drink.

Swedenborgian clarification

To the editor:

The Swedenborg School of Religion very much appreciates the feature article published in the April 9th edition of the Newton Graphic . We are sure that there are many people who have driven by our building and wondered about the school. We are glad to have had the opportunity to make a connection with the community and to share our sense of meaning and purpose.

The article was well-researched, and showed an excellent understanding of many important issues. However, there is one very crucial point that needs to be clarified. The Swedenborg School of Religion does not see the writings of Swedenborg as a "Third Testament" alongside the Old and New Testaments. The general convention of Swedenborgian Churches, with which the Swedenborg School is associated, holds the view that Swedenborg's revelation, as expressed in his written works, is not a part of Holy Scripture. This a central tenet of the general convention's belief system. Swedenborg's works are seen as guides, but do not have the same status as the Old and New Testaments.

In this country, there are, in addition to the general convention, two other Swedenbogian groups, each of which takes a different view of the status of Swedenborg's writings. The general church believes that Swedenborg's writings are the internal sense of the Bible, while the Nova Hierosolyma believes that Swedenborg's writing have the status of scripture and that they themselves have an internal sense.

We thank the Newton Graphic for its interst in our organization and for publishing the article about SSR. We would appreciate your publishing this correction.

Special piano teacher sought

Talented people with retardation are looking for a piano teacher to volunteer a couple of hours per week at the Charles River Association for Retarded Citizens.

Through the generosity of Mr. Raymond Chubbuck of Needham during the past ten years, interested clients attending the Charles River Day Programs developed the skills to play the piano. His departure has left several students requesting to continue with their lessons.

If any of your readers play piano and are interested in teaching someone with a developmental disability they may call me at 444-4347.

Women drivers increase, sales pitches change

By Rusty Brown

There's a story about this couple who went car shopping. The salesman spent all his time talking to the husband, totally ignoring the wife. She got so annoyed, she stomped out and the salesman didn't even notice. He just continued sweet-talking the husband, who finally said: "No deal. The checkbook just went out the door."

The anecdote is told by Lynn St. James, professional race-car driver and consumer adviser to Ford Motor Co., to illustrate what car salesmen should not do.

She knows women are in the driver's seat as much as men these days. A recent Conde Nast Publications survey showed that 45 percent of the cars sold last year were bought by women. Beyond that, another survey reported that women cast the deciding vote in 81 percent of all car purchases.

No wonder auto companies are generating marketing programs and ad campaigns aimed at women customers. Likewise, car dealers are retraining their sales forces to be more attuned to women buyers. A Chevrolet dealer in Denver went so far as to redecorate his showroom: mauve carpeting, color-coordinated sofas, soft lighting and, on Saturdays, free coffee and fruit-and-cheese platters.

Others are warning salespeople that women don't buy high-pressure sales pitches or being talked down to. Chrysler is holding consumer seminars at auto shows where women can ask questions and share their views on cars. Chevrolet has initiated a women's marketing committee to work with its advertising agency.

All this makes me think I'd like to get in my two-cents' worth about some pet peeves. At the risk of sounding like a squeaky wheel, I'd like to complain about:

— One-heel drive: Why can't auto makers realize that women often wear high heels while driving? At present, we seem to have only two options: let the right heel wear a hole in the carpeting just below the gas pedal; or, engage in a constant tug of war with a protective floor mat that continually inches forward under heel pressure. My floor mat often gets bunched up under the accelerator pedal and shoots me into high gear, until I can reach down to pull the mat back in place. Very dangerous.

— Tiny hands glove compartment: I hate midget-sized dashboard drawers. I want something that will carry the necessary car papers and maintenance receipts, and also hold a normal-sized flashlight, extra glasses and cosmetics, maps, gloves, notebook and a means by which pens will not roll to the back and become unfindable.

— Wheel spinning: Why do tires have to be designated by ridiculously meaningless long numbers, such as 175/1OR-13 or P255/7GR-15, and even worse, 33 25OR-16.5D. What jibberish!

Certainly car manufacturers can come up with sizes we can relate to. How 'bout AA, 36D or 42 long?

— Drop seat: How many times have you reached for the seat adjuster under the driver's seat and had to grope through greasy rags, old candy wrappers or somebody's wet Kleenex? I vote for an easy-to-see seat adjuster knob that glows day and night — or, at least will be in the same spot on all makes of cars.

Take note, Lee Iacocca and Roger Smith, I'd also like to have: a hand grip above the passenger window as featured in many European cars; mandatory see-through panel trucks for a clear view ahead; easy-to-reach shoulder straps suitable for non-contortionists; and a return to the old-style scissor jack that lifts one side of the car, instead of these spindly bumper jacks resting on one wobbly leg and scaring me to death.

And — like the other 2000 women surveyed by Conde Nast — I want a car with good gas mileage, that is economical to operate and — most important of all — won't fail me on the freeway some dark night.

So, women behind the wheels, speak out. We've got the dollar-and-cents clout to drive home with what we want.

Governor's commitment to education well documented

By Kenneth G. Ryder

Over the past weeks there has been considerable criticism in some media regarding Governor Michael Dukakis' commitment to quality public higher education. As the president of the Commonwealth's largest private university. I have had several opportunities to review and experience directly the Governor's commitment to higher education in both the public and private sectors which renders recent criticism uninformed and unfair.

Few governors in the history of this state have been more committed to the qualitative improvement of education at all levels than Michael Dukakis as is evident in his budget recommendation for fiscal 1987.

In that document the Governor recommends a $150 million increase for the state's 27 public colleges and universities, as well as additional scholarship assistance for needy Massachusetts students both public and private colleges. Included in this proposal is an increase of over $19 million for UMass Amherst.

A major tenet of political life is the fact that funding is the true test of one's support for any program. Senator Gerard D'Amico, co-chairman of the Education Committee of the Massachusetts legislature, remarked that the Governor is "putting money where his mouth is." Senator D'Amico hailed the budget recommendation as "a very strong infusion into the public education sytem" and the strongest statement for higher education that we've seen in the last several years."

Budget recommendations and legislative appropriations, however, are not the only measure of the Governor's support for education. The facts are that Governor Dukakis has demonstrated an examplary personal concern for education at all levels. After filing an educational reform bill aimed at improving public education at the kindergarten through high school levels, he worked tirelessly both in public forums and the legislation. Owing to the Governor's efforts, the elements necessary to implement this long overdue educational reform are now in place.

At the post secondary level, scholarship assistance to needy Massachusetts college students, both public and private, has tripled, from $19 million to $57.5 million over the past three years. This year, the Governor has recommended an additional $5 million, to be used for assistance to part-time and non-traditional students. Education, both public and private, is this commonwealth's greatest natural resource. Governor Dukakis has recognized the importance of a strong system of higher education to the state's economy, and he has acted to strengthen that bond.

The Governor is correct when he asserts that Massachusetts cannot be compared to other states. Historically, citizens of California, Texas and Minnesota did not have access to education from existing private colleges and universities. By necessity, strong public systems developed. In Massachusetts, by contrast, private higher education has been the principal vehicle for post high school education.

With the passage of the G.I. Bill after World War II, the postwar baby boom, and the new national goal of equal access to higher education for all citizens, a dramatic expansion, in both quality and quantity, occurred in the public sector of higher education in Massachusetts.

Unfortunately, public perception of academic programs changes slowly. Often, there is a lag of an entire generation before academic quality is recognized. We should all be aware of the achievements of UMass Amherst, and we should also recognize the fact that the other components of the public system--the community colleges, and the state colleges, the University of Lowell, UMass Boston, SMU, and the UMass Medical School--are all doing the job for which they were created, and doing it well. I am proud of our public colleges and universities, and the valuable services they are rendering to our citizens.

Today in Massachusetts, government funding for higher education has permitted equal access for students so that the average family income of a student at Northeastern and one at UMass is approximately equal. Because of the tremendous state support to the public sector, as well as the infusion of federal financial aid over the past decades and state student assistance over the past several years, students now have the opportunity to gain access to any one of a diversity of educational institutions--public or private, urban or rural, large or small--all with strong programs in differing academic disciplines. By historical accident, students in Massachusetts have a choice unavailable to others in the nation. That is why so many students from across the country annually flock to the Commonwealth.

Unlike California, Texas and Michagan, we have a unique opportunity in Massachusetts to nurture a partnership between two strong educational sectors, public and private. We have the opportunity in the commonwealth to provide unparalleled access to the college of any student's choice, as well as to avoid costly duplication of effort by engaging in cooperative planning between the educational sectors. It is this unique system which the governor embraces, and which all of us should encourage and promote.

The challenge before the governor today is to guide educational policy so that it effectively harnesses both sectors--public and private--to serve the needs of its clients--students, parents and taxpayers. His goal and ours is to find new ways of using educational resources in a creative combination to continue to drive the economic growth in Massachusetts.

This is a task which the governor has already begun. He has supported a series of planning studies, involving curricula offered at both private and public colleges, in the fields of business, engineering and nursing. A fourth study, in education, is about to get underway. These studies, when combined with human resource needs analyses, will help determine the development of future educational programs, and their funding.

The governor has also backed an engineering collaborative program, which enables students who have completed two years of pre-engineering study at UMass Boston to enroll at Northeastern University or several other colleges to complete their degree work. This program provides assistance for tuition to these students, thereby saving millions of taxpayers' dollars which would be needed in order to construct and staff a full-fledged engineering program at UMass Boston.

The Dukakis record on education, from the consistent budget increases for public higher education to increased scholarship assistance for needy students and joint planning with the private sector of education, clearly indicates that education is one of the highest priorities of the Dukakis administration. The Governor's policy has been to improve education, at all levels and both sectors, as an investment in the state's future.

Prayer breakfast stresses harmony

Houghton, whose "persistence in the pursuit of low-income" for the city the mayor noted, urged all present to help make the Garden City "a pioneer in the cause of peace."

Dr. Max Stackhouse, professor of Christian Social Ethics at the Andover Newton Theological School, began the principal address of the event praising the annual prayer breakfast as "a remarkable thing ... in our secular society ... honoring some of those who have mediated grace" into our midst. He encouraged those gathered to pitch in to preserve "the indispensable inner quality of a humane city.

Rabbi Murray Rothman, from Temple Shalom, presented Student Community Grants to Joanne Abruzzi (Newton Catholic), Lisa Stein (Newton South) and Josephine Louie (Newton North).

Entertainment for the event was provided by the Newton All-City Elementary School Chorus. Charlotte Brumit, director, told the crowd members of the chorus, drawn from 15 schools, "didn't even know each other's names last October." She said the chorus was an example of the harmonious note that can be struck when diverse elements of the city work together.

John Harper, coordinator of fine arts for the city's school system and a moving force behind the chorus, was recognized by Superintendent of Schools John Strand for his years of "enthusiasm and high standards" on the occasion of his retirement.

Mayor Mann asked for a moment of silence to mark the passing of another bright musical light in the city, Andrew Wolf, the late director of the All Newton Music School since 1977. Mann called him "a young poet of the piano" and lamented "the loss of a great and gifted human being."

Mann fired some other kudos into the crowd. One went to State Representative Joseph DeNucci for "capturing the convention" in his bid for the state auditor's office. Another went to the ubiquitous, tireless Ed Mandell, without whose year-long, behind-the-scenes efforts there might not even be an Annual Mayor's Prayer Breakfast.

City makes plans for tricentennial

Plaut said she hopes a pageant will be written for that day. It could attempt to capture the feeling of life in the town at that time, she said.

"What were the issues on people's minds?" said Plaut. "What were they thinking about? What were the worries?"

There could also be an intensive period of celebration in May and June, "perhaps three or four weeks of really spectacular activities," said Plaut.

Community groups, in addition, could sponsor events throughout the year, said Plaut, who stressed that a program of events has not yet been determined.

Mann said he envisions religious, ethnic and cultural events, as well as an old-fashioned fireworks display and a parade.

The Jackson Homestead will also participate, said Scott. It has received $27,000 grant from the National Endowment of the Humanities so to create an exhibition called "The Evolution of an American Suburb: Newton."

With the coming of train lines in 1834, Newton became one of America's first suburbs, she said. The exhibit, which will tour the city, will examine the evolution of Newton as well as the strengths and weaknesses of suburban life.

Exam probe hits home

A resident of the Brockton suburb of Whitman, Connell could not be reached for comment. She is currently assigned to night patrols.

Boston attorney Thomas J. May, who sources say is representing her in the case, refused to comment or acknowledge that he is acting as Connell's legal counsel.

Sources interviewed independently said State Police assigned to the office of Attorney General Francis X. Bellotti questioned Connell some time before U.S. Attorney William F. Weld convened a grand jury to hear testimony on the case approximately six months ago.

They said federal investigators are moving quickly to secure evidence in an effort to issue indictments within the next two to three weeks.

Police Chief William F. Quinn said Middlesex County District Attorney Scott Harshbarger had informed him almost year ago that a member of the department was being interviewed.

Quinn would not discuss the case further except to say that he has not been contacted by any federal authorities.

"Since it went over to the U.S. attorney, I haven't heard anything but rumors," he said.

A spokesman for Harshbarger confirmed that the DA's office is continuing to cooperate in the probe, but would not comment further.

Other Newton police officers say they have heard rumors concerning Connell's possible involvement, but add that she has refused to discuss the allegations.

Connell, the first woman to graduate from the State Police Training Academy, joined the force on Aug. 5, 1973 and became the city's first female police sergeant seven years later.

The government has reportedly issued a flurry of subpoenas in the case on the basis of information provided by Gerald W. Clemente, a former MDC police captain now serving a stiff jail sentence for his role in a multi-million dollar bank burglary in 1980.

Clemente has admitted to possessing a key that enabled him to steal civil service exam papers and distribute them to friends and associates, including an aide in the state Legislature.

Joseph Bangs, a retired MDC sergeant, is also assisting the government's investigation. He was one of six sergeants who scored 90 percent or better on the same April 1983 exam taken by Connell.

Group looks for nuclear testing halt

NEWTON — Representatives of SANE, the committee for a SANE nuclear policy, will be canvassing door-to-door through Newton in June. SANE is working to gather support for a resolution being introduced in the Massachusetts House of Representatives, favoring a complete halt to the testing of nuclear weapons by both the U.S. and the Soviet Union.

The resolution, if passed, would put the legislature on record in support of a Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty (CTBT.) "In 1982 the voters of Massachusetts voted overwhelmingly in support of the Nuclear Freeze," said Steve Stephano, Director of the Massachusetts SANE office. "Halting all testing of nuclear warheads is a first step in freezing the arms race. The CTBT has been supported by every American President since Truman, except Reagan," added Stephano.

SANE is the nation's oldest and largest arms control organization with close to 200,000 members and 65 chapters across the country. Founded by Eleanor Roosevelt and a group of prominent citizens in 1957, SANE has been lobbying and organizing on nuclear weapons issues for 29 years.

Studying 'the first suburb'

NEWTON CORNER — Researchers at the Jackson Homestead have begun work on what must be the largest project they have tackled in a long time: an exhibition detailing "The Evolution of an American Suburb."

It will deal simultaneously with the American suburb as a unique species of settlement in the world and with the City of Newton as the progenitor of that species.

Asked how a project of this magnitude got its start, Duscha Scott, executive director of the Homestead, said, "It got started by a bunch of us sitting around the Homestead thinking, 'We must plan for the Tricentennial.' We thought, 'What is quintessential Newton? What is there about the town ...? What are we going to do ... John Eliot for the ninth time?'"

Trains, including the 'Newton Special,' are largely responsible for Newton's being the country's first real suburb.

Bolstered by a number of responses to the city's annual census questionnaire that requested "a big exhibit about Newton," Scott and her fellow researchers Thelma Fleischman, Susan Abele and Malinda Blustain laid the groundwork for a planning grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities. With the grant in and the planning completed, they are now working on an implementation grant from the same source.

Scott commented that the exhibit could be one of the Homestead's best. "It should be just nifty," she said. "Some of the pictures would bring tears to your eyes. They're just gorgeous!"

Homestead researchers will also rely on the expertise of some outside consultants, including Richard Rabinowitz of the American Historical Workshop; Douglas Thernstrom, an historian from Harvard University; Douglas Johnson, a geographer from Clark University, and Elliott Sclar, from Columbia University.

According to the prospectus of the planned exhibit, "This exhibition will trace the evolution of the American suburb by examining the history of Newton, Massachusetts, one of the oldest residential suburbs in the United States. Newton, as a railroad suburb, began in the 1840's, when the Boston and Worcester Railroad established the "Newton Special," one of the first commuter trains in the United States. Since then it has passed through every stage of suburban growth.

"Using photographs, maps, plans, advertisements, magazine illustrations and occasional written material relating both to Newton and to the American suburb generally, the exhibition will chronicle change and continuity in American suburban life over the past 150 years. It will be divided into three sections: The Invention of the Suburb (1834 to 1870), Building the Garden City (1870 to 1910) and The Automobile in the Garden (1910 to 1960).

"Within each of the periods, the exhibition will focus on three major topics: Transportation, Suburban Homes and Developments and Public Space. The exhibition will open with a brief portrait of Newton in 1830 and each section will conclude with a summary of the character of the city at a different point in time: 1870, 1910 and 1960.

Sticker contest winner announced

By Maureen Azzato
Staff Writer

NEWTON - She brainstormed the logo and design of her winning human rights bumper sticker "Newton - We Are Family" doodling in her math class.

Vickie Nielsen, an eighth grader at Bigelow Junior High School, was chosen from over 30 public and private school contestants bewteen grades seven and 12.

The purpose of the contest, sponsored by the Human Rights Commission, was to promote mutual understanding and respect among the people of Newton regardless of race, color, religion or sexual preference.

"The idea of the contest was to instill some interest in children on the issues of human rights and to give them an opportunity to express their ideas," member Joan Chaisson said.

Nielsen said prejudice is rampant in her school and she wanted to promote that differences "shouldn't matter in Newton." She said religious prejudice outweighs racial prejudice in Newton.

"You don't really understand it until it happens to you and you get treated badly," she said. "It hurts."

Contestants could use only two colors on their bumper stickers and Nielsen chose black and white.

"I chose them because they really have no color. That way you can't distinguish between people. At least that's the way it should be," she said.

The logo design started with Nielsen writing 'Newton' in block letters. Then she said, "I started drawing all these different looking people hanging and sitting on the letters. I didn't plan it - It just turned out that way."

She also managed to include a few animals in the design. "Well, they have rights too," she said. "Don't they? They're part of almost every family."

Nielsen said she's never won a contest before. "I had a funny feeling I would win. I don't know why. I was so happy because it's the first thing I've ever won. My brother was so jealous."

Her social studies teacher will be grading the class on their bumper stickers and she said, "I better get an 'A'".

Auditions for Newton Summer Jazz Band

NEWTON — William Jones, Musical Director of the Newton Summer Jazz Band invites saxaphone, trumpet, guitar, bass, piano, and drum players of all ages and levels to join the Newton Summer Jazz Band and explore the music of Ellington, Dorsey, and Whiteman.

Rehearsals begin July 1 and go through July 24 on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 7-9 p.m. at Day Junior High School. The Music Fee is $15.

An outdoor concert by the Newton Summer Jazz Band will be held on Sunday, July 27, at 6:30 p.m. on the Newton Centre Green.

Interested musicians should send their check for $15 made payable to Arts in the Parks, Newton Parks and Recreation, 70 Crescent St., Auburndale, MA 02166. Please indicate which instrument you play. If more information is needed, call 552-7130 or 552-7120.

for a cash contribution," he says. "If you are selling three units at $100,000 average sale price, your contribution would be $10,000. If you are building nine units with the same average price, the contribution would still be $10,000. That is unfair for the smaller developer, because it is easier to spread the cost of the $10,000 over nine units than it is to spread it over three."

After a number of motions that failed, White said the committee finally, after much heated debate and a recess to cool things down, voted to "charge" Ecodesign $17,000 for a contribution.

"They admited it was unfair," he says. "They wanted to be consistent, but what is most upsetting about this is that I was one of the original authors of this ordinance. The ordinance was not originally designed to deal with the smaller developments and giving the board the option to determine what should be contributed is like putting dynamite into the hands of children.

The city should continue to receive contributions from developers, he says, but there should be some specific guidelines they should follow.

"The board now has this feeling they can ask for whatever they want," he says. "They are forgetting about conditions of fairness, or that they will kill small developments."

White says he will not challenge the committee's decision in court, preferring instead to attempt to reverse the decision on the floor of the board.

"The ordinance is already in trouble," he says. "All the cases against it have been tried on application, not merit. It is arbitrary and capricious to pick numbers out of the air, but I helped write this and I still believe in it. I hope the board takes some kind of action to revise it."

Great day for heroes

"Living Memorial Garden."

"Today, as we again come together in honor and remembrance of those gallant individuals who answered the call, we are faced with a situation in which anger and hatred, rather than peace and mutual respect, exist in the hearts of some," Mann said.

"This anger and hatred cowers under the name of terrorism and is without compassion," he continued. "Innocent men, women and children have suffered from it."

Mann said further that less than fifty years ago another form of terorism existed in the world — Nazism. "In the grossest manifestation of man's inhumanity to man, more than 25 million people were destroyed before the Nazis were defeated," he said.

Mann said there is "a lack of willingness to act on terrorism" in America today.

"One of the lessons of history is that silence and the muting of indignation allow tyaranny to exist," he said. "In the memory of our fallen comrades, let our voices rise in crescendo to speak out against injustice — for then, truly our cry for justice and peace will be heard."

Election coverage

To assure fair coverage of the 1986 state elections, the Newton Graphic's proposed election coverage for the primaries is as follows:

- All news releases concerning "coffees," positions on issues, etc. will be run in an edited version in the Newton Graphic once a week in a campaign round-up forum.
- All candidates in contested races will be profiled in the Newton Graphic and run in the paper with a photo during the summer.
- Candidates for statewide office or congressional races will be interviewed by the Graphic's editorial board.
- Candidate nights and debates will be covered by reporters.

Art, photo studios available

NEWTON — The Visual Arts Department at the Leventhal-Sidman Jewish Community Center on the Gosman Campus has fully equipped studios in painting, jewelry, ceramics, photography, as well as many other art forms.

According to Henry Altmann, Visual Arts director, "a unique feature of the Center's Visual Arts Department is that it has one of the only printmaking studios west of Boston which still offers open studio time to its students."

The Center is equipped with a darkroom with six professional enlargers for color as well as black and white photography. A camera club is being established which will feature many noted speakers, exhibits, workshops, and darkroom rental time at camera club member prices.

Franks awaits word on Russian travel

By Ed Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON - U.S. Rep. Barney Frank (D-Newton) should know by the end of the week whether he will be allowed to accompany Soviet dissident Yelena Bonner back to Moscow on the way to rejoin her exiled husband, Andrei Sakharov.

Frank hopes Soviet authorities will grant the visa he needs to make the trip sometime during the next couple of days, his top congressional aide said yesterday.

Bonner's family, who live in Newton Centre, are counting on the Garden City Democrat to report on how Soviet authorities treat her after the six months she spent undergoing medical treatment in Boston.

"I decided to ask Barney Frank if he would accompany her because it appears the Soviets would not allow any of us to go with her. He met with Ms. Bonner two times while she was here and apparently felt he could be of assistance," Efrem Yankelevich said from his Maplewood Avenue home during a telephone interview.

Bonner is currently nearing the end of a three-day stay in France, where she met with French Cabinet ministers, Premier Jacques Chirac, President Francois Mitterand and other European officials.

Doug Cahn, Frank's administrative aide on Capitol Hill, said the congressman has already booked a reservation on Bonner's flight from Rome to Moscow, which departs at 4 a.m. EST on Monday, June 2.

Cahn would not discuss what Frank may encounter if and when he arrives with Bonner in the Soviet Union, saying he did not want to jeopardize the goals of the trip.

He said whatever decision Moscow makes concerning the visa application will be relayed to Frank's office through the Soviet Consulate in Washington, D.C..

During Bonner's stay in the United States, Frank wrote a letter expressing support for Sakharov's dissident efforts, which was signed by nearly every member of Congress.

"It was tremendous show of bipartisan support," Cahn said. "It's a rare instance to get that many signatures, both Republican and Democrat, on any initiative."

With Congress in recess until next week, Frank flew from Boston to New Orleans yesterday morning to address the American College Health Association.

Police, court briefs

Local man charged with assault, battery

NEWTON HIGHLANDS - A 29-year-old Newton man was arrested for assaulting and beating a Needham man outside of Tang Dynasty on Needham Street Saturday night. Police arrested the assailant when they found him kicking the body of a man lying face down on the ground. The injured party was taken to Newton-Wellesley Hospital and treated for facial lacerations and a neck injury.

While being transported to police headquarters, the suspect started screaming and then kicked in the passenger window of the police cruiser. He was charged with assault and battery with a dangerous weapon, malicious damage and disorderly conduct, police said.

Stereo equipment stolen out of car

WEST NEWTON - Assorted stereo equipment valued at over $1,000 was stolen from a 1982 Dodge parked in the driveway of a Smith Avenue home Friday night, police said. Entrance was gained by breaking the left rear passenger window.

Man arrested for burglary after chase

NEWTON - A 25-year-old Waltham man was arrested for burglary after breaking into a River Street home and being chased by police for over an hour Sunday morning, police said. A 17-year-old resident heard his mother scream and saw her and the intruder running from the bedroom. The youth then chased the intruder from the house.

Officers responded and checked the area on foot and apprehended the suspect near Rose Drive, police said. The youth positively identified the suspect as the man who broke into their home. Entrance was gained through an unlocked window, police said.

The suspect also has an outstanding Newton warrant for unarmed burglary and breaking and entering in the night time with intent to commit a felony, police said.

Enters innocent plea on drug charges

NEWTON - Kevin M. Healey, 33, of Brookline, pleaded not guilty in district court to charges of illegal possession of cocaine and conspiracy to violate controlled substance laws. Judge Monte G. Basbas released the defendant on personal recognizance. The case was continued to June 12.

When Healey was arrested, officers found cocaine in pharmaceutical paper and a bottle of liquid cocaine, according to court records.

Pleads not guilty of illegal possession

NEWTON - Brian S. Sullivan, 26, of Roslindale, pleaded not guilty to charges of illegal possession of cocaine and marijuana and conspiring to violate controlled substance laws. He was released on personal recognizance. The case was continued to June 12.

Store worker identifies magazine thief

WEST NEWTON - A Store 24 employee saw a man, whom she was able to identify by name, walk behind the counter and steal 15 magazines last week, police said. The suspect fled the scene in a blue limosine.

Five cars vandalized on Beacon Street

NEWTON HIGHLANDS - Five cars at the Shell gas station on Beacon Street were vandalized last weekend, police said. Two car radios were stolen, windows were broken and the interior of the cars were ransacked and damaged, police said.

Car stolen while parked on Mill Street

NEWTON CENTRE - A 1980 Buick Skylark parked on Mill Street was stolen last week, police said.

Radio and cassette deck stolen from car

NEWTON - An AM-FM radio and cassette deck was stolen from a 1983 Datsun pickup truck in a Bridge Street parking lot Tuesday afternoon, police said.

Cash, cards taken from store back room

NEWTON CENTRE - Two wallets, containing $50 in cash and assorted credit cards, were stolen from the back room of a Centre Street store last week, police said. The wallets belong to two employees who discovered their wallets missing after the suspect left the store.

Nobody witnessed the theft, but the employees told police they saw a 5-foot-7-inch black male, about 18, near the back room. The employees said they became suspicious when the suspect abruptly ran out of the store. The suspect fled the scene on a ten speed bicycle, police said.

Pedestrians hit streets

NEWTON — Police Chief William F. Quinn issued a spring advisory this week cautioning Newtonites about the dangers of spring fever. Walkers joggers, cyclists, skaters and skateboarders are hitting the pavement again.

Throughout the winter months, motorists and pedestrians alike recognized each other's needs to use the roads and each became conscious of the others presence. With sun and warmer temperatures, however, traffic patterns and, more importantly, traffic awareness seem to have decreased, he said.

By law, bicycles are required to heed the same rules of the road as automobiles, including travelling with the flow of the traffic. Drivers should be alert to the increasing numbers of bicyclists.

Joggers can best be alert to traffic around them running by against it and. when an automobile approaches, the safe jogger should move aside the chief advised. Drivers need to be on the lookout for the jogger who has entered a crosswalk or an intersection at a greater speed than that of an average walker.

As for pedestrians, Quinn explained that many walkers are now out to •enjoy the sounds, sights, and smells of the season. He cited one hazardous situation as an example — a mother who was pushing her child through West Newton in a stroller, rather than crossing the street at a crosswalk, attempted to walk between two parked cars with the stroller in front of her. She stepped off the curb before she was able to see the oncoming traffic. The frightening factor was that the child had already been pushed outside the protective area provided by the parked cars and into the direct path of moving cars.

Another concern is the trend by the adolscent community to ride skateboards on the streets and sidewalks. "Skateboarding, without a doubt, is a potential problem for all of us," said the chief. "Although there are many skilled skateboarders throughout the city, courtesy and common sense are not as noticable."

Skateboarders on the road are riding next to vehicles of all sizes yet these riders are extremely vulnerable, relying mainly on a motorist's awareness for protection. Pediatricians and orthopedic specialists have said that skateboarding is a particularly dangerous sport. Especially for the unskilled.

On sidewalks, skateboards are a threat to any pedestrian. The chief is taking a strong position on skateboards and is researching the possibility of municipal legislation to govern their use.

Chief Quinn concluded by saying that it makes good sense if motorists and foot travellers develop an awareness of each other.

How to search for a home mortgage

Searching for a mortgage that suits your needs can be time-consuming. You may have to visit many financial institutions before you find one that offers the terms and rates that interest you.

Rather than trudge from bank to bank, you might want to consider shopping for a mortgage through a mortgage-information service. Besides saving you time and effort, Consumer Reports' editors say that such services might also save you some money.

Some firms compile weekly reports on available loans. The reports are then sold directly to individuals. Other firms provide information in computerized form to real-estate agents who subscribe to their service. The agents then provide the data to their customers at no cost.

The editors examined several reports that are directly available to individuals. Most provide mortgage information that only covers certain states or areas not the entire country.

The most comprehensive mortgage information list, and the easiest to understand, was from Peeke & Associates of Gaithersburg, Md. It includes data for Southern Florida, Maryland, northern Virginia, and Washington, D.C. For $15, you get the terms and rates for either first or second mortgages in that area.

The $20 report from the Mortgage Reporting Service, Jenkintown, Pa., covers mortgages available from some 180 banks, savings institutions and mortgage companies in the Philadelphia and southern New Jersey area.

HSH Associates, Riverdale, N.J., offers mortgage information for New York, New Jersey, southern Connecticut, central Florida and Southern California. For $10, you can buy a copy of a week's listings for a single region, plus a useful "Homebuyer's Mortgage Kit."

Services that let consumers compare loan rates and even apply for mortgages in a real-estate agent's office are more numerous. In some cases, home buyers can get a lender's conditional commitment for a loan half an hour after entering an application on a broker's terminal.

But the rate quoted may not be guaranteed. So it's a good idea to ask whether the actual rate is set at the time of application, the time of approval or the time of closing.

Consumer Reports' editors say that you shouldn't assume that the computerized array of choices you get from a mortgage information service is the whole story, no matter how impressive it may look. For various reasons, a mortgage-search service's information may not reflect the full spectrum of choices in a community.

For example, it may reflect certain business relationships between lenders, brokers and the search service itself. So even if you're using a computerized mortgage search, it's still worth telephoning a sampling of lenders not listed by the service to check on their rates.

Learning the limits of stereo TV

By the Editors of
Consumers Reports

Stereo TV is being widely touted these days. More than 200 TV stations plus the NBC and PBS networks have already converted to stereo broadcasting capability. The viewing experience can certainly be enhanced by stereo sound.

But Consumer Reports' electronics engineers say that it will be some time before stereo TV broadcasts are commonplace.

Furthermore, most older TV sets can't be modified to produce stereo sound. If you want stereo for those sets, you have to rig up a separate stereo tuner plus a pair of speakers or, more likely, buy a new set.

Television sets may come either "stereo ready" or "stereo capable." TVs described as "stereo ready" merely have a jack for the necessary stereo decoder so you can plug in stereo sound later. Most such sets have built-in speakers that can be used. The decoders cost $100 to $150 extra and may have to be the same make as the TV set.

"Stereo capable" sets have the decoder and a pair of speakers built in. Stereo-capable TV sets start at about $500 to $600. Prices for stereo-ready sets are slightly lower.

The electronics engineers recently tested 18 large-screen color television sets. All have built-in stereo decoders and speakers. They're ready to deliver true stereo sound as soon as you plug them in.

But those sets aren't cheap. They ranged from $750 to $1,490. Most had 25-inch screens; the others were 26- or 27-inch models. Most were designed to handle the rigorous demands of the modern video world — cable TV, videocassette recorders and laser disc players. Most accept direct video inputs and so could also serve as color monitors for personal computers.

All of the sets tested had at least acceptable picture quality, and most had color fidelity that matched or was nearly as good as that of the laboratory-grade monitor the engineers used as a reference.

The units with the best tone quality delivered sound that was nearly what the engineers would expect from a good set of low-priced audio components.

Among the sets tested, the Magnavox RF4950AK, $899; Sony KV-2680R, $1,250; Wards Catalog No. 17737, $850 plus shipping; Philco R5883WAK, $750; RCA GLR2538P, $800; Panasonic CTG-2587R, $1,099; and JVC AV-2590, $1,100, offered very good stereo sound. (Prices listed are suggested retail. Like other electronic equipment, TVs are usually sold at discount.)

While a large-screen set may deliver good stereo sound, the electronics engineers say that the configuration of the TV cabinet can affect sound quality. They noted that the same speakers in a different cabinet might sound better — or worse.

And don't expect to get the full effect of stereo sound from speakers mounted inside a TV set. For full stereo effect, you have to use separate speakers spaced farther apart.

If you're planning to buy a "stereo capable" TV to take advantage of, say, all-music cable programming that's broadcast in stereo, check first with your cable company. Many cable-TV companies can't handle stereo yet. (C)1986, Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Mini-vacuums will handle those small jobs

By the Editors of
Consumer Reports

If the inside of your car is really dirty, you may need a full-sized vacuum cleaner to clean it. But if your car only needs tidying up from time to time, a battery-powered, hand-held vacuum can be a lot more convenient. Of course the little vacuums can also be used to pick up debris spilled inside the home.

Many of the 10 small, cordless models recently tested by Consumer Reports' engineers work quite well. The rechargeable mini-vacuums typically have sturdy, shock-resistant plastic bodies that are about 14 or 15 inches long, 3 or 4 inches high and weigh less than 2 pounds.

In addition to a charging stand, the small cleaners consist of two elements: a motor-handle element that holds the battery and a nozzle-collector element that sucks up and stores the dirt. When not in use, the vacuum belongs on its combination battery charger/holder, which can be mounted on a wall. The chargers use little electricity — less than 5 watts.

Incidentally, the engineers found that the vacuums perform better if their batteries are completely discharged and recharged now and then. The manufacturers recommend a 16-hour charge.

Good cleaning depends partly on the strength of a small vacuum's suction — the ease with which it inhales trash. It also depends on how long a vacuum cleaner can maintain suction without significant drop-off.

To test the vacuums, the engineers used each model to pick up a variety of substances, including those most often found inside cars, such as common dirt and debris, as well as household spills from potting soil, hair, cigarette butts and corn flakes.

Tests in a number of cars showed that while most of the small vacuums were effective for regular cleanups of a reasonably tidy interior, lodged gravel, hair and dried grass could be too much for the little cleaners.

Of the small vacuums tested, the Black and Decker Dustbuster Plus was top-rated. It excelled at rug cleaning and at picking dirt off hard surfaces. The Dustbuster sells for $60 but may be heavily discounted. It comes with an extra filter and handy brush and crevice-tool attachments that make car cleaning much more convenient.

The Norelco Clean-Up Machine 2, $47, scored nearly as high as the Dustbuster Plus and has the same helpful attachments. The Norelco was especially adept at cleaning car interiors and gobbling up cigarette butts, hair and corn flakes.

Don't look for prolonged cleaning power from any of the models tested. The Dustbuster Plus managed a bit more than 15 minutes of sustained effort; middle performers averaged about 10 minutes, while the least hardy of the small cleaners lasted less than five minutes.

The engineers warn that the Dustbuster Plus, the Dustbuster, and the Sears Cordless Vac, Catalog No. 17832, can eject fine particles through the air-exhaust ports with considerable force. This can be a very unpleasant experience if the vacuum is close to your face, as it may well be when you're cleaning a space as confining as a car's interior.

Don't use a cordless vacuum on wet material or in a damp area such as a patio after rain; moisture could damage the machine. (C)1986, Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Boost in home sales

By Randolph E. Schmid
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — More abundant in income than offspring, the maturing Baby Boomers are likely to boost sales of single-family homes over the next decade, but the outlook isn't rosy for apartment builders, a private population study group has reported.

The first members of the Baby Boom generation, people born in the period just after World War II, are about to enter their 40s, years of increasing affluence when people traditionally are married and seeking to move from apartments and starter homes into more costly surroundings, according to the study by the Population Reference Bureau.

"We see nothing occurring in the next decade or so that should dampen Americans' desire for the best, most spacious, detached single-family home they can afford. The increased numbers of middle-aged Americans should assure even greater popularity for this type of home," wrote the report's authors, George Sternlieb and James W. Hughes, professors at Rutgers University.

Rising costs reshaping home ownership strategy

By Lawrence Kilman
Associated Press writer

Rupert and Gillian Ingram owned a rambling, 90-year-old farmhouse near the Massachusetts coast and loved its spaciousness, its white pine floors and its pervasive smell of woodsmoke and apples.

But their fuel bills were enormous, and upkeep was a headache. When their two girls grew up and moved out, the Ingrams, then in their 50s, decided they needed a house that better suited their needs.

They built their new home at the edge of a salt marsh, and they built it underground. Nestled into a hillside, it has 16 inches of sod on the roof.

But this is no rabbit hole. The rooms, though small, are open and airy, and the south wall is faced in glass. The waving marsh grass stretches for miles, and the majestic view gives the feeling of space the Ingrams craved.

The underground home has another benefit. In their farmhouse, their annual gas bill could reach $1,700. In their earth-sheltered, sun-warmed house near Newbury, Mass., the bill is zero.

What the Ingrams did, moving from the old homestead to a smaller, more easily managed home — is a housing trend of the 1980s as costs increase and the population ages.

But other shifts in American society are changing the American home as well. Only 4 percent of U.S. families now match the traditional nuclear pattern of working father, non-working mother and two kids. Single adults are pooling their resources to buy houses together rather than be confined forever to apartments. More families have two wage earners, and some of them work at home. Growing numbers of baby boomers, already settled into comfortable surroundings, are now starting families and looking for ways to stretch their space. And with divorces commonplace, single parents are looking for good housing, too.

The 1970s was a good decade for buying a home, but the first half of the 1980s was bad. Sharply rising prices and mortgage rates kept many out of the market, especially young, first-time buyers.

Nevertheless, 64 percent of Americans own their own homes, and that includes millions of young families. In fact, 66 percent of 35- to 39-year-olds and 54 percent of 30- to 34-year-olds are homeowners. How do they do it?

Second incomes are an increasingly important factor in financing home ownership. Smaller homes, unconventional designs, inventive financing and do-it-yourself renovations on older houses are among the ways Americans are making home ownership affordable.

"At least half of those people who are going to be turning age 30 are going to have to find innovative ways to buy houses," said Kenneth Rosen, a real estate analyst and business professor at the University of California at Berkeley.

"They're going to have to have a parent help them, they're going to have to share with someone else, buy a smaller house than they would have otherwise, live in a location they don't want to live in," he said.

An old-fashioned word like prudence also helps in these modern times.

Prudence, as in getting the most for your money. Don Metz, an architect in Lyme, N.H., makes today's compact houses seem larger by eliminating walls between rooms, devoting as little space as possible to hallways and using big windows to bring the outdoors inside.

Prudence, as in demanding energy efficiency. The Ingrams, for example, rely on sunlight and a wood stove to heat their house. They have yet to use their furnace. "Even unsophisticated buyers are going to ask, 'How much insulation is in the roof?' and they'll want double-pane windows," said Metz.

For many people, making homes affordable means abandoning such middle-class standards as big backyards and formal living and dining rooms, those remnants of the Victorian parlor that are too good for daily family use.

When housing was less expensive, families insisted on living rooms, even though most of their daily activities occurred in family rooms or dens. They wanted dining rooms, but they ate in the kitchen. Such duplication is unaffordable today, and rooms are generally given multiple uses.

High construction costs have also sparked a boom in the home improvement market, because more people are buying old houses and renovating, or they're building additions to homes they own. The home improvement market topped $69 billion in 1984, and more than $38 billion belonged to the do-it-yourself segment.

That segment is growing because of people like Linda Helfet and Bill Hilliker, whose seven-room, 102-year-old house seemed to get smaller as their two children grew. The family joined the carpenters in building an addition. "The boys and I learned so much," said Ms. Helfet. "There were things we would have never begun because we didn't think we could finish it. We learned you can do anything if you just begin."

They bought the house for $38,000 a decade ago. The addition cost $41,000 and gave them a garage, a second bathroom, family room and office work space.

Financial arrangements are also changing. One of the newest ways to finance a house is through a joint ownership agreement, recently made available in all states, where parents buy part of their childrens' house and rent it back to them. The children have smaller monthly payments; the parents get a depreciation tax deduction.

About one-third of first-time home buyers get help from their parents anyway, so the new mortgage has a ready-made market, said Rosen, who developed the program.

Of course, other factors besides money are changing in the American home. The growth of non-traditional families has also spurred new ideas.

When the Minneapolis College of Art and Design announced "A New American House" design competition last year, 346 architects submitted drawings.

"Three ideas defined the competition," said its director, Harvey Sherman. "The dramatic change in households not made up of nuclear families, the high cost of housing, and the growing trend of people working at home."

Architects were asked to design six attached houses of 1,000 square feet each with a carport or garage and an office or work space for every unit.

One design included five units suggested for a married couple with no children where one spouse was a writer working at home; a single man with a small brokerage office; an architect whose college-age son assisted him; a psychiatrist with two young children; and two brothers, one of whom operated a cabinet shop on the ground floor.

Housing designs traditionally respond slowly to a changing society, and that means much change is still to come. The beginning of change is seen in projects like the Minneapolis competition, but it is also apparent when an architect abandons the "master" bedroom concept and puts equal size rooms in an apartment because he knows unrelated roomates might live there.

"There is a lot of inertia that takes a long time to overcome," said Metz. "I mean, why do they keep building these houses with the front door that nobody uses? But I think it's changing, I think the building industry is becoming responsive to these changes."

Using vintage features for your bathroom

By Country Home

Cleanliness, hygiene and hot and cold running water are taken for granted by modern Americans.

But not until the 1800s did bathing become an accepted and common practice, writes Katherine M. Knight in Country Home. Knight is the author of two books on old-house renovation.

Before germs were discovered, bathing was considered hazardous to health. Gradually, as people became aware that dirt breeds disease, bathing became fashionable. From the mid-19th century onward, bathrooms were status symbols for those wealthy enough to afford one.

The first bathrooms, or boudoirs, were converted bedrooms, usually located adjacent to the chambers of the mistress of the house. Places of luxury, they were lavishly decorated with green plants, Oriental rugs, rich silks and velvets and soft lighting.

Technological innovations in the mid-1800s brought the water heater and the toilet. Although a number of inventors share credit for developing the modern toilet, the Cretans had a version of it some 4,000 years ago.

For most of the country, however, hot and cold running water remained a dream. Until the first decade of the 1900s, only about 15 percent of American homes had plumbing. Most people bathed in rude tubs set in the kitchen. City folks could use public baths where five cents bought a hot bath complete with soap and towel.

The earliest bath fixtures, such as copper and tin tubs, ceramic toilets and marble sinks, are now rare and expensive. Later fixtures were mass-produced, and the same styles — the claw-footed tub and pedestal sink in particular — remained on the market for decades. Today they're relatively inexpensive and easy to find. As an alternative to the antiques, many companies currently reproduce old-fashioned bathroom fixtures.

If you choose antique fixtures when restoring or renovating your home, you should know a few tricks and possible problems that go along with their installation and maintenance. Even if you hire a professional plumber to do the job, the information will be helpful because most plumbers amd plumbing suppliers are familiar only with modern fixtures.

Unless an antique toilet has been religiously maintained, its insides will probably be worn out. Unlike modern toilets, you can't fix vintage water closets with inexpensive parts from the local hardware store. Most old toilets will have to be rebuilt — a major project that can cost more than $200.

First, the float ball and flush valve mechanism (known as a ball cock), which regulates the water level in the tank, cannot be repaired. Labor costs more than new components, and the old parts will continue to deteriorate.

It's also likely the old siphon-type valve will have to be replaced with a modern lever-type (Douglas) flush valve. The old down tube (the tube that leads from the toilet tank to the bowl) will be too large to fit a Douglas valve, but it can be adapted to fit with a special reduction fitting available from plumbing suppliers who specialize in antique fixtures.

The old tank liner, usually made of tin or copper, may have to be replaced. To check its condition, sponge the liner with a solution made of one part muriatic acid added to five parts water. Then examine it in the light for holes or thin spots.

The most durable replacement liners are made of fiberglass or acrylic plastic. Local plastics companies can usually custom-make them to fit your toilet tank.

Here are some pointers for installing an old toilet in your home:

— Old toilet bowls usually have a two-inch elbow (the curbed part that protrudes from the bottom of the bowl and fits into the waste drain) that is connected to a horn on the bottom of the bowl. This will not fit into a modern plastic toilet flange. To adapt it, attach the horn to the waste pipe with a 3-by-4-inch elbow and seal it with a flat-type wax ring.

— The drain for a wall-hung toilet with a two-inch flush elbow should be roughed in 14 inches from the wall. High-tank toilets can be roughed in at any distance from the wall.

— Any wall-hung toilet can be converted into an old-time, high-tank model with a special adapter kit available from some plumbing suppliers.

Plant exotic fruit seeds right away

By Marie Hammock
San Francisco Examiner

Did your pink grapefruit spit seeds as well as juice in your eye this morning? Don't curse it, plant it.

Citrus seeds newly separated from the pulp that surrounds them, should sprout in a couple of weeks, and make quite a nice addition to your indoor garden.

We have the word of California's top rare fruit grower on this, John Riley, co-founder of California Rare Fruit Growers Inc.

Any citrus seeds can be handled this way. The trick is to plant them right away — "right away" meaning within five minutes, not a half-hour later. The problem is simple: Moisture. Seeds should not be allowed to dry.

Not only is it an adventure to sow fruit trees indoors, it's also the most economical way to acquire house plants, or an entire "urban forest."

Just save the styrene foam containers from the butcher shop or a fast food restaurant such as MacDonald's, and fill them with a sterile soil mix, and you're all set to plant. Be sure to keep them moist but without standing water that will encourage seedling fungus diseases.

Riley went into some techniques of propagating rare and subtropical fruits from seed. Here is a bare bones outline:

Moisture: Irrigation water should have a pH factor between 5.5 and 7 (that's just slightly acid.) If you have rainwater available, that's great. Deionized water is okay. But never use the "soft water" that's been through residential water softeners; the ion exchange is all wrong.

Gas exchange: This is an important factor in seedling development, Riley noted. Plant growth is limited by a low CO_2, and greenhouse operators sometimes have to pipe carbon dioxide into their glass houses. (If your seedlings seem to be stunted, try breathing on them a little....) Also, the underground parts of any plant need oxygen. If you have waterlogged soil problems, pour a little hydrogen peroxide around the roots, he suggests.

Temperature: Seeds of warm tropical plants germinate at about 85 degrees F., or higher. Sub-tropical seed germination is best at 75 degrees F., or higher, while seeds from temperate zone plants will germinate at lower temperatures. So take a quick peek at your plant encyclopaedia, and find out where your plants originated.

Growing medium: There's a wide variety of materials used as a "growing medium," for sprouting seeds, and anything that works is OK, Riley said — provided it's sterile. Every effort should be made to keep all propagating equipment as sterile as a hospital surgery.

Riley himself uses a formula that's three parts perlite, one part vermiculite, one part screened sand, and a teaspoon of polymerized starch. The starch, he says, "makes lumps of jello" anyone for $2.25 postpaid, just enough to cover his printing costs in the potting mix and helps regulate the moisture content.

Ridley has published a small pamphlet, "Growing Rare Fruit from Seed," which he'll send and postage. Address John Riley, 3370 Princeton Court, Santa Clara, Calif., 95051. (Distributed by Scripps Howard News Service)

Romance returns

By Florence De Santis

Formal, traditional weddings are definitely back. The bridal gown returns in all its glory with full, shapely sleeves, sweeping skirts and detailing in embroidery. Applique and seed pearls express a romantic spring mood.

Romantic look prevails in spring and summer bridal choices.

At Alfred Angelo, designer Michele Piccione has created a special upscale group in which lace bodices are combined with flowing skirts of double chiffon or satin extending into a semi-cathedral train. Matching lace tiaras or lace-edged net veils complete the ensemble.

For the bride who would like to use her gown later as an evening dress, a strapless gown with a fitted bodice embroidered in leaves and silk flowers takes a deep embroidered caplet of lace.

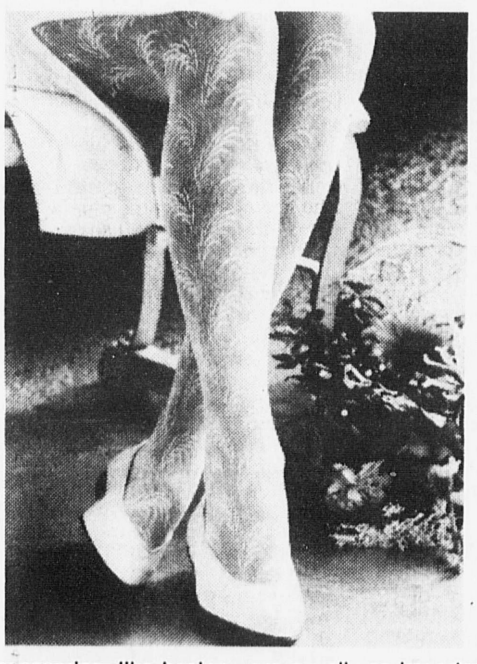
Following fashion evening trends, short gowns in the Alfred Angelo collection have scalloped or hankerchief hems, wide scoop necklines ending in puffed sleeves and a touch of pink in the satin belt and scattered flowers on sleeves and belled skirt.

Period details continue popular, as in Pat Kerr's white silk taffeta with Victorian lace-yoked high neck and flounced puff sleeves. Kerr's custom gowns are lavished with tan antique lace and beaded capelets over the squared puff sleeves or with the lace applied like applique all over the gown.

Many gowns for the younger bride are reminiscent of debutante's gowns, such as Richard Glasgow's puffed skirt caught with roses all around, with more roses edging the off-shoulder neckline. At Joelle Bridals, the bodice is shaped with graceful draping and the sleeves are romantic leg-o-mutton, all in lace that also makes the front panel of a full tulle skirt.

Bridal gowns for summer weddings are lighter and simpler, with cool lace captelet sleeves, shirred to stand out in bell shapes. Silk shantung is a new fabric for the warm weather, as in Priscilla of Boston's Gay Nineties gown in lace, net and pannier overskirt of the shantung.

For summer, the slim chemise is also seen, in antique ecru lace over peach-tone satin at Catherine Clothier and in white silk with chiffon hip swath at Yumi Katsura. Even the slim gowns are accented by the sleeves, made up entirely of bows in the Katsura gown.



Accessories, like hosiery, are equally as important on the big day.

Finger fashion

NEW YORK (AP) — The latest rage in nail looks is lavishly designed and jewelled fingernails, which can cost as much as $40 when done at most beauty salons or nail shops.

But a new at-home kit, called Ten Plus Two by Nail Art International Ltd., Inc., lets the ambitious do it themselves. A bonus, it also contains one pair of hypo-allergenic earrings with designs that match the fingernail designs.

Vin Mitchell
The Vin Mitchell Band is a professional dance music ensemble. Vin is a graduate of the Master of Music Program at the New England Conservatory of Music and an undergraduate of Berklee College and University of Massachusetts music schools. A leader of the group he is featured on guitar, mandolin, banjo, and vocals. The five piece ensemble consists of a female lead vocalist, keyboards, bass, drums, and guitar. A saxophone player is recommended for many functions, and trumpet is also available on request. All members of the band are music school graduates. Appearance is always neat and in tuxedo dress. (Tuxedos may be omitted for more casual engagements.) The band uses a repertoire of over 800 songs, learning new tunes weekly. All musical styles are prepresented: from the twenties through the eighties. The dance music is precise and very lively. Special requests for any occasion are always accepted, with sufficient notice. Background music is also available.

English-style fruitcake — Groom's Cake — is traditionally cut in small rectangles and put in white boxes as a wedding centerpiece.

Grooming with tradition

By Aileen Claire
NEA Food Editor

Engagement parties, bridal showers and more formal weddings are sweeping the country.

While some may still exchange vows during an ensemble sky-diving free-fall, most couples are saying "I do" surrounded by family and friends with their feet on the ground.

This means a revival of traditional customs, but with a contemporary twist.

An example is the use of the Groom's Cake, an English-style wedding fruitcake presented to guests to take home. The cake is cut into small rectangles and placed into small parchment-lined white boxes tied with ribbon.

This cake may be used as a table centerpiece with guests names placed on boxes. These then become place cards and are ready as take-home souvenirs.

The bride and bridegroom save a piece of the Groom's Cake for their first anniversary.

Groom's Cake

1 package (15 ounces) dark raisins
1 package (15 ounces) golden raisins
1 1/2 cups (8 ounces) pitted dates, snipped into 1/2-inch pieces
1 1/4 cups (6 ounces) dried apricots, snipped into 1/2-inch pieces
1 1/4 cups (6 ounces) dried apples, snipped into 1/2-inch pieces
4 1/4 cups unsifted all-purpose flour, divided
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon ground nutmeg
1/2 teaspoon ground cloves
1/2 teaspoon ground allspice
1/2 cup (1 stick) butter or margarine
1/2 cup packed dark brown sugar
2/3 cup honey
4 eggs
1 jar (14 ounces) cranberry-orange sauce
1 tablespoon vanilla extract
6 tablespoons bourbon, divided

Preheat oven to 300 degrees. Grease a 10-inch-by-4-inch tube pan. Line bottom with brown paper.

In large bowl, combine dark and golden raisins, dates, apricots and apples. Add ¼ cup of the flour, stirring until fruits are well coated; set aside.

In medium bowl, combine remaining 4 cups flour, salt, baking soda, cinnamon, nutmeg, cloves and allspice; set aside.

In a large bowl, beat butter to soften. Gradually add dark brown sugar, beating as you add. Add honey and beat until blended. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition. Add cranberry-orange sauce, vanilla extract and 3 tablespoons bourbon to butter and egg-sugar mixture, beat at medium speed until blended.

At low speed, gradually beat in flour mixture, then beat at medium speed until blended. Pour batter over fruit mixture and mix by hand with large wooden spoon. Turn batter into prepared pan. Bake in oven for 3 hours or until a cake tester inserted in center and near inner tube comes out clean. Cool completely.

Remove cake from pan, peel off brown paper. Sprinkle top with remaining three tablespoons bourbon, wrap cake securely in plastic wrap and then foil. Store in tightly covered container in cool place for at least two weeks. Or freeze. Sprinkle with additional bourbon, brandy or rum during storage time.

This kitchen-tested recipe makes one 6¼-pound cake, 25 (3-inchs by 3½-inchs by ½-inch) slices or 50 (3-inchs by 1¾-inchs by ½-inch) slices.

Note: If you wish to present cake whole, glaze surface: In small saucepan heat ½ cup light corn syrup to boiling, brush all over cake. Decorate top of cake with candied fruit.

The 'eyes' have it

Sometimes forgotten in wedding plans is the effect of all that white — gown, headdress, veil — on your complexion.

Applying makeup properly is a key to bridal success.

Practice with makeup or seek professional advice. If you're fair-skinned, you may need a rose-beige foundation, rose blusher and lipstick to avoid looking too pale.

Women with more vivid natural coloring should soften their makeup colors. Use eye makeup in pastel tints, as the sultry effects of brown or smoky colors look too stark against white.

The eyes have it for spring. And the makeups are deliciously colorful. But, oy, the cost. And, how in the world can I get the stuff on so I don't look like a sleepy raccoon?

The easiest of all the European-influenced eye makeups this spring is the haute couture eye of Yves Saint Laurent's.

Liner

First of all, YSL recommends lining the eyes with a soft, colored pencil which will smudge and blend nicely (you don't want a hard line). Line the upper lid along the eyelashes clear to the inside corner; the lower lid, close to the lashes about half way (to where it bisects the center of the iris). Then, fill in a small triangle of pencil around the outside corner and blend upward toward the outside end of your eyebrow.

Eye Shadow Color

YSL's "Fatale" collection uses only two colors plus a liner (whereas Dior recommends blending all of their eight "Les Colonials" colors). The YSL eye's colors are blended on the diagonal. To put on the first color, start on the upper lid at the center of the eye and stroke on the color upwards toward the eyebrow. Blend. To apply the second color (usually the highlight color), start closer to the inside corner of the eye and apply on a diagonal; blend upward. (You may also want to daub on a bit of highlight color directly under the eyebrow on the outside of the eye. No lines of delineation should be seen if you've blended it all correctly.

This spring's eye colors have been combined in an outrageous fashion with lavender and gold worn together or hyacinth blue and orange or teal and copper. Don't be afraid to mix and match, to experiment with teal, hunter green or pink liner pencils.

Mascara

To complete the new look, use one of the new colored mascaras that will either blend with or produce a contrast to the colors you've used on your eyelids. (Black or dark brown is definitely out, however. If you choose to use either first, let them dry completely before coating on the lighter, more vivid colored mascaras. The black or brown underneath intensities the other colors, by the way.)

Finishing Touch

To keep your brightly colored eye makeup from fading, dust it with a loose, neutrally colored powder and brush off the excess with a huge, poufy blender brush.

Makeup Tip

Keep your hands and fingers clean and use clean sponges and brushes wherever you can. That way, your colors stay pure and your eyes, which are very tender, will stay clear.

Service with style

By Carol Ann Campbell
Scripps Howard News Service

You enter a hair salon and the stylist sends you straight to the sink for a shampoo.

Is that good service?

No, say Gordon Nelson and Andrew Gilquist, master hairstylists for Regis Corp. The two offered points to distinguish a superior stylist from a mediocre one:

• A good hair stylist will examine your hair while it's dry — to see how it falls and curls. The stylist will examine your facial structure and ask you about your life. Do you swim? Jog? Work in a bank or a restaurant?

• The stylist will offer definite opinions and offer choices. Be wary of the stylist who offers no clear ideas or options about what hairstyles would be best for you.

Latin dims South tourney hopes

By David Cuddy
Sports Correspondent

NEWTON — The view behind the eight ball isn't too pretty, nor very relaxing for Newton South softball coach Larry Caranfa. His Lions dropped a 5-4 decision to visiting Boston Latin Monday, and Newton South must now win its final game of the regular season to slip under the 59-percent wire and into the State Tournament.

"We're backed into a corner now," Caranfa said after his Lions bashed out 14 hits against Latin but could only produce four runs. "I really thought we would win this one."

South has been punching its way out of a corner for the past week. In their last two games, both wins, the Lions have needed late-game heroics to pull off victories over Wayland and Concord-Carlisle.

Monday, South again staged a seventh-inning comeback, but the day would end as it had begun — with the Lions leaving runners in scoring position.

South stranded a total of 17 runners on the day and three times left the bases full. With 14 hits, all singles, Caranfa said he was pleased with the firepower, but disappointed that it didn't amount to anything more.

"We had enough to win, we just didn't test them (Latin) the way we should have," the second-year coach said. "We hit the ball well, we just hit it right at people."

South literally stole a run in the first inning — Jen Lerman scored on the back-end of a double steal with Dede Theodore — and pitcher Julie Blankstein would no-hit Latin for three innings to hold the slim lead.

But it was three-run Latin fourth inning, compliments of an error in the outfield and two wild pitches by Blankstein, that forced South's back against the wall.

Newton did rebound to tie the game, but the Lion rally didn't come until the sixth. Latin hurler Kristen Luewen escaped fourth and fifth-inning jams without a scratch, then delivered five South singles in the sixth.

Katrina Antonellis and Laura Baumberg opened the Lion sixth with back-to-back singles, but both were forced out at third on grounders to shortstop Mary Costello. With two outs and runners still on first and second, Elaine Theodore lined a single to left, her third hit of the game, to load the bases.

Blankstein then stepped up to have her say. The petite pitcher drilled a single right up the middle to score a run, pulling South within one run. Ana Otero then tied it, singling past short to score Maria Crovo, but Joanne Chao would lace a soft liner to short to end the threat and leave the bases loaded.

Blankstein had struck out the side in order in the sixth, and the lefty still looked like a million bucks when she smothered a bouncer to her left to open the seventh, throwing out Siovan Rohan at first by a nose.

Then the roof fell in as Tracy McCarthy walked, Tina Fabiano singled to left, and Dawn Sullivan brought them both home with her second double of the game, a liner to centerfield.

Blankstein K'd Jen Dragoni and forced an infield pop-out to send the Lions into the last of the seventh trailing, 5-3.

In the seventh, Antonellis ripped a one-out single to left and took second on a bumbled relay back to the mound before leftfielder Fabiano made a nice running catch in foul grounds to retire Baumberg for the second out.

Antonellis raced to third on a Luewen wild pitch, and after Dede Theodore walked to set runners at the corners, South pulled off the same double steal that had worked in the first inning.

Trailing by one now, Crovo grounded to Costello at short, but the infielder bobbled the ball to put the winning run on first base. Luewen, however, would have none of that, and the Latin pitcher caught Chao looking at a third strike to end the game.

Jody Rogers slugs

Jody Rogers missed hitting for the cycle by only a single on Monday, slamming a double, triple and homer as Newton North pounded Quincy, 22-4, in Suburban League softball at North.

The freshman left fielder drove in five runs with her two-run homer and bases-loaded triple.

Those two hits just happened to be the key blows in the two big Tiger innings. Down, 2-0, going into the bottom of the second, North tallied eight times. The Tigers came right back for 10 more in the third.

Robin Silver gave Rogers hand, driving in four runs on three hits, including a round-tripper. Megan Morahan chipped in three RBIs.

Liz Speliotes, Morahan, Silver and Marie Farrar all drove in runs in the second, in addition to Rogers' homer.

In the third, Silver and Wendy Rogers each had two-run singles, while Jen Heesch added an RBI hit.

Nancy Sullivan went five innings for the win, with Silver making her pitching debut in relief.

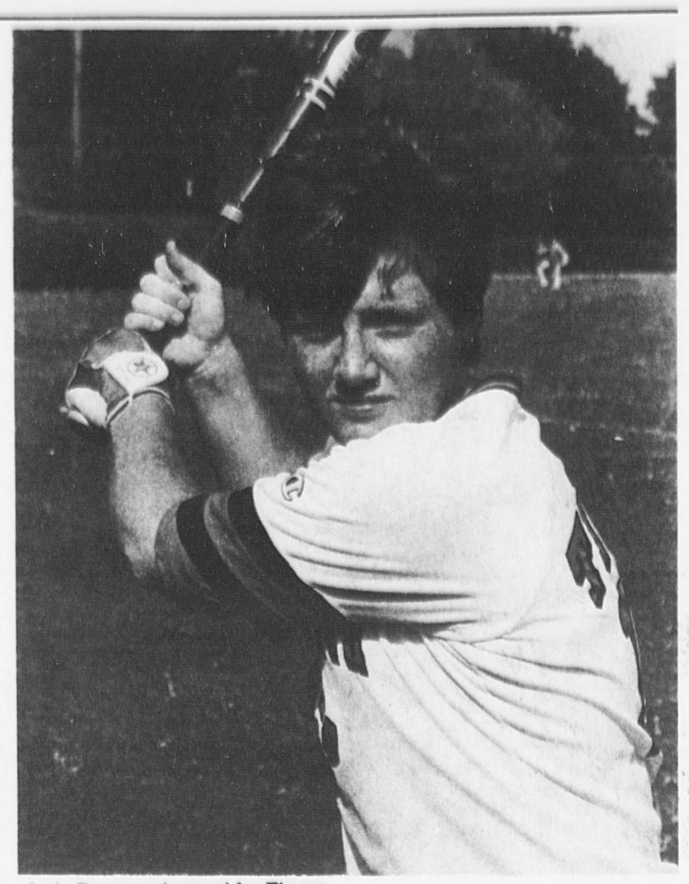
Lancers dumped

Newton Catholic made 11 errors, six in one inning, in an 18-13 Catholic Suburban League loss to Ursuline.

The score was tied at 10-10 going into the bottom of the sixth, when the Lancers suddenly got generous and gave away eight runs in the big inning. Ursuline had only three hits in that frame.

The Lancers battled back with three in the seventh, but the late rally fell short.

Ann Kling drove in three runs for Newton, two coming on a double in the fifth. Joanne Abruzzi added three hits and two RBIs.



Jody Rogers slugged for Tigers

Cohen's single breaks deadlock for South boys

CONCORD — Judd Cohen drove in the winning run and Chris Pappas plated the insurance as Newton South snapped a 9-all tie in the top of the sixth Wednesday, beating host Concord-Carlisle, 11-9, in Dual County League baseball.

With one gone in the sixth, Cohen ripped a one-bagger to right-centerfield to score Craig Albert with the eventual game winner. Pappas then followed with a liner just over shortstop to score Cohen for the 11-9 final.

The Newton South Lions had exploded for an eight-run fifth inning to delete a 4-1 deficit, but Concord answered with a mini explosion of its own in the bottom half, scoring five runs to tie the game.

Catcher John Doherty keyed the South attack in the fifth with a bases-loaded triple to right-center. P.J. O'Toole plated a run with a single in that inning, Pappas and Tom McGary both drew bases-loaded walks to force in runs, and Cohen was hit by a pitch with the bags full.

Righty Mark Loughlin took the win in relief for Newton, pitching a strong one and two-thirds innings. The junior pitcher allowed a hit in the fifth inning, then settled down to keep Concord occupied.

Newton South improves to 9-8.

Quincy sinks North

Quincy's Tom Logan placed a bases-loaded single just past the outstretched arms of second baseman Brian Scales, scoring the tiebreaker in extra innings as the Presidents nipped Newton North, 7-6, Monday in Suburban League baseball played at Adams Field.

Walks and mental mistakes cost the Tigers the victory as Newton North drops to 3-5 in the league and 6-10 overall.

Southpaw reliever Sam Lookner, pitching well in his first-ever varsity ball game, walked Jay Lespasio to lead off the bottom of the eighth, but it was a risky cut-down attempt at third base by Scales that set the winning run up.

Lespasio had advanced to second on a wild pitch before Dan Biagii rifled a hard one-hopper to Scales at second. Instead of going to first for the sure out, Scales threw to third, where Lespasio slid in for the all-safe fielder's choice.

Lookner intentionally passed Dave Tocchia to load the bases, then Logan drilled the grounder just past Scales to the second-base side — a perfect double play ball if it had been inches closer to the fielder's glove.

"It was a bad play," Newton North coach Dick Walker said of Scales' decision to go to third instead of first. "As much as I would have liked to nail the runner at third, we didn't get the out."

Newton North led, 4-1, after two and a half innings, but three straight walks in the bottom of the third set-up back-to-back Quincy doubles that gave the Presidents the 5-4 lead.

Newton North took the lead back with two runs in the fifth inning. Aldo Calcagni singled to leadoff, then stole second and moved to third on a throwing error. Ron Coppola walked and took off for second base, with Calcagni scoring when the pickoff attempt flew into centerfield.

Coppola continued to third, and with Jim Giddon batting and Walker contemplating a suicide squeeze, Quincy pitcher T.J. Stern threw a pickoff attempt away at third base to bring home the go-ahead run, 6-5 Newton North.

Sherman sweeps top honors

By Roy LeBlanc
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Sometimes an event's significance depends upon your perspective. Driving to the store is big with a capital B for a 16-year-old with a newly acquired license. For the 33-year-old who's been driving for years, it's just another chore in a day.

Athletic banquets can be the same way. An athlete in his or her first year of competition views the banquets one way, a four-year performer another. An athletic director who's seen seven or eight of them go by brings yet another perspective, but he's still a lot more enthusiastic than the people serving the food or cleaning the tables.

But Wednesday night at Newton's American Legion Post 440, there was a banquet that everybody knew was a little different. There was an extra spark to the night, a moment worth capturing.

For every once in a great while, an athlete comes through a school and does things that people are still talking about years later.

Sometimes that athlete doesn't receive his proper due until too much time has passed, but in Jeff Sherman's case, the Newton Catholic faithful wanted to make sure he realized how much he's meant to the athletic program over the past four years.

Sherman walked off with the Most Valuable Player Award for basketball, and the male version of the Outstanding Athlete Award, but the tribute paid to him went well beyond that. After all, every year there is an MVP and an Outstanding Athlete.

But there isn't a jersey retired at every banquet, nor is there the presentation of a basketball which sailed through a hoop for someone's 1,000th point.

With 1,152 points, Sherman is the only basketball player in Newton Catholic history to crash that magic barrier. It's only fitting then, that he became the first Lancer athlete to have his number retired. No one will ever have to deal with the pressure of wearing number 50 and trying to live up to the standards he set.

Athletic Director and basketball coach Don Dabenigno made the presentation. On the field of battle, he knows Sherman as well as anyone, having coached him for four years in basketball and three in baseball.

"This is the easiest choice I've had," Dabenigno said of his pick for hoop MVP.

The points are always the most visible thing in basketball, but Sherman did it all for the Lancers. He holds no less than 16 individual game, season and career records, covering just about every offensive category. He led the Catholic Suburban League in scoring two straight seasons, and was the Most Valuable Player as a senior.

The team's 16-2 record and berth in the North Division 3 semifinals this year were the best in school history.

In baseball, the 6-5 Sherman led his club to a tournament berth last year, and made the All-Star team. He's a virtual shoo-in to repeat this year, despite making the transition to the outfield midway through the year. An outstanding defensive first baseman, he agreed to the switch in order to strengthen several positions on the team.

Just in case his hitting and fielding weren't enough, Sherman has been one of the club's two aces (with Frank Battista) on the mound. The hard-throwing lefty is among the league leaders in earned run average and strikeouts.

Sherman's female counterpart in the Outstanding Athlete category was Joanne Abruzzi, for her work in softball and volleyball. She was the MVP of the latter squad, which won the league championship.

A four-year starter, two-year All-Star and league MVP as a senior, Abruzzi was called "our most consistent player," by Coach Rose Bertucci.

Ironically, Abruzzi is half of another NC family tandem, as her brother Nick plays for the baseball squad.

The third of the major trophies, which were saved for the end of the festivities, was the Scholar-Athlete Award. Cheerleader Patricia Flaherty was the recipient of that unique honor, given annually to the senior athlete with the highest grade-point average. Flaherty ranks third in her class.

Also on the academic side of things, Maura Prince was given the annual Shirley Leger Scholarship, awarded to a senior girls' basketball player who is going on to college. Prince was also the basketball team's Unsung Hero.

Mahoney accepts golf position in Minnesota

Dan Mahoney won't be back on the area golfing circuit this summer. The professional golfer from Waltham has just taken a new position at Madden's Resort on Gull Lake in Brainerd, Minnesota.

His new duties will include serving as golf director and director of recreation. The popular resort has 45 holes of golf, including a par three layout.

The former Waltham High School and Fordham University basketball star will still maintain his position as one of the teaching pros at Thunderbird Country Club in Palm Springs, Calif. This past winter he worked with two Greater Boston pros, Bob Crowley of Pine Brook and Dan Callahan of the The Country Club.

Dan started wintering in Southern California six years ago where he met his wife, Sally. They have a son Brian David, who will be two years old at the end of the month.

Dan formerly served as assistant pro to Ken Campbell at Newton Commonwealth Golf Club. Although he has won a number of minor tournmanents during his career, he posted his first major victory in July, 1983 when he captured the New England PGA Seniors Championship at Lake Sunapee CC, N.H. Dan edged Henry Trepses of Longmeadow in a single hole playoff.

In past years, Mahoney played in the Abramo Tournament at Wayland CC while he was visiting in the area. His wife is also a standout golfer and they oftened partnered up on the fairways. In the fall of 1981, they won the New England PGA Lady-Pro at Vesper with a 2-under-par 72.

Dan, telephoning from Southern California this past week, wanted to be remembered by all his Waltham and Newton friends.

Armian rescues Lions in lacrosse, 8-6

NEWTON — Neda Armian scored two goals in less than a minute Tuesday, putting the final touches on a second-half comeback as the Newton South Lions sneaked up on Acton-Boxboro, 8-6, in girls' lacrosse action.

The Lions trailed, 5-2 at the half, before sticking it into overdrive. South scored three straight goals to tie the game before Acton scored its only goal of the second-half to go up again by one.

Armian stepped in to tie the game once more, on a pass from Kathy McBride. Within a minute Armian had the Lions ahead, this time to stay.

Lucy Ketterer closed out the scoring with an insurance goal.

South's only two scores of the first half came off the sticks of McBride (from Phonechann Xayxanevethy) and Lucy Ketterer (from sister Jenny).

Gates paces North trackmen

NEWTON — Senior David Gates broke open the mile relay Tuesday, lifting Newton North to a skin-tight victory over Brookline, 77-68, in the final Suburban League dual-meet of the season.

The 5-1 Tigers needed the victory in the final relay to post the win, and it was Gates' speed in the third leg that made it possible. Gates sprinted in and exchanged the baton with Chris Rutan about 25 yards in front of the Brookline runner.

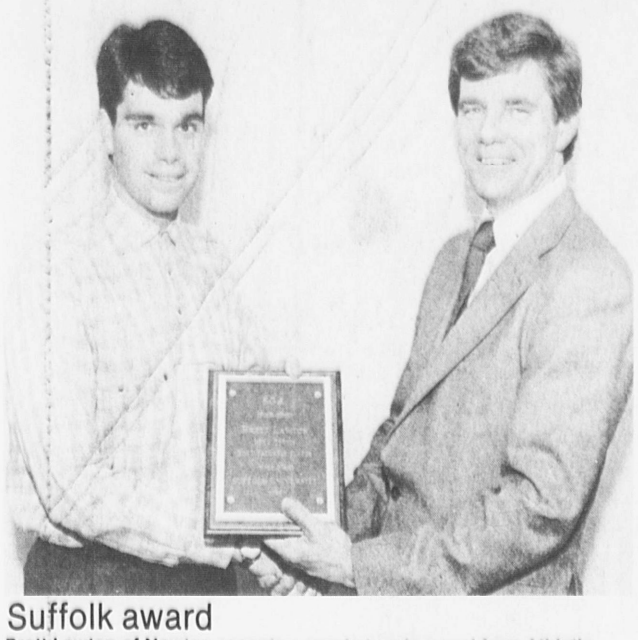
North finshed in 3:37.8 while Brookline came in at 3:45.

Personal bests for Newton included Dimitri Diatchenko in the discus (115-6), Bill Osgood in the pole vault (9-6), Rutan in the 220 (23.3), and Peter Bourland in the 100 (10.6).

Newton's Creimens tops golf tourney

NEWTON — Cailan Creimens of Newton Country Day School of the Sacred Heart turned in the low net at the first annual Independent School Golf Classic at Woodland Country Club on Monday.

Two other players from the school took second and third gross. Winchester's Kim Croston was second, while Heather Gallagher of Waban was third.



Suffolk award

Adams fuels North stickmen

SUDBURY — Mark Adams figured in the tying and winning goals as Newton North edged closer to a berth in the boys' lacrosse tournament with an 8-7 victory over host Lincoln-Sudbury on Tuesday.

The Warriors had taken a 7-6 lead 3:08 into the final frame when Jay Fitts tallied on a pass from Tim Walker.

Adams won the ensuing faceoff, and 23 seconds later, Dave Robinson tied the game on an inside shot.

The score stayed that way until only 3:38 remained. The Tigers made an adjustment on offense, and it paid off when Adams took the ball left, swung right and fired from the outside.

"Adams played a great game," said Coach Rick Clark.

The Tigers now move into sole possession of second place in Division 1 South. They are now 5-3 in the league, with L-S falling to 4-4. In addition, the Warriors still have to play league leader Weymouth North, while the Tigers are done with that club.

The finish may have been flashy, but the game itself wasn't. Clark said it was won "in the trenches. ... We played with our hearts and our legs, but we didn't play with our minds."

The mental mistakes began 17 seconds into the game, when two Newton North defenders went after one Warrior on a fast break, leaving another open for the goal.

The Tigers led after one, thanks to a pair of goals by Josh Carpenter.

The teams swapped goals in the second, and the Tigers led by the same one-goal margin at the half, 6-5.

Colantuono (his third), and Walker (two) scored for L-S, while Ottoa Mariano, John Flynn and Robinson answered for North. Adams assisted on the latter two scores.

"We were very sloppy," said Clark. "We were lucky to come out with our lives."

Lincoln's Tim Weaver got the only goal of the third quarter, called "one of our poorest" by Clark. "Every time we got the ball we threw it away."

Goalie Matt Keegan (15 saves), Zafar Khan and Josh Field also earned the coach's praise.

Lions slump

A lackluster performance against Bedford on Tuesday has Newton South facing a must-win situation the rest of the way. The Lions dropped a 5-3 decision to the Buccaneers and face elimination from any tournament consideration with another loss.

Considering the position they were in, South coach Paul Murphy was extremely disappointed with the effort his players turned in against the Bucs. The Lions, now 7-6, could have pulled within one win of a tournament bid with a win over Bedford, which raised its record to 4-10.

South still has to play Wayland, mired at the bottom of Division 2 South, on Friday at home. If the Lions get over that hurdle, they must face Acton-Boxboro in the finale. The Colonials won't be going to the tournament, but they are only one spot behind South in the standings and can't be taken lightly.

Tuesday, South's offense was virtually non-existent. The Bucs ran up a 5-0 lead before the Lions managed three scores in the final period.

Bedford, which pretty well dominated play throughout, took control of the scoreboard in the second period, scoring three times.

Bill Gellately, Pete Johnson and Rich Scheick put their club ahead.

Scheick upped the margin to four in the third period, Brian Meffan tallied Bedford's final goal early in the fourth.

Jon Gleason finally broke the string with a Newton goal three minutes into the fourth quarter. Judd Levine and Dave Abroms added tallies to close out the scoring.

North gains revenge on Brookline in tennis

BROOKLINE — The rain cheated Newton North out of a chance at a full measure of revenge in Wednesday's girls' tennis match against Brookline. The Indians are the only team to score against the Tigers this year, losing a 4-1 decision earlier.

The second time around, North wanted to erase that memory with a 5-0 win. Well, Brookline didn't get to score another point, but the Tigers didn't get their 5-0 either, because the rain washed out the deciding set of the first doubles match, leaving North with a 4-0 victory.

That doubles spot was the only point that went to Brookline last time out. This time around, the Indian tandem of Amy Goldberg and Kara Dukakis had taken the first set, 7-6, and the Tigers' Laurie Katz and Liza Moore the second, 7-5, before the rains came. With the match already decided, the third set was called off.

None of the other matches took more than two sets. At number one, Dianna McCarthy wiped out Rachra Dhanda, 6-0, 6-1. Lisa Amatangelo and Catherine Saunders also swept to straight-set wins.

At second doubles, Marcie Plotkin and Nancy Green had a little trouble in the second set but still took a 6-2, 7-6 decision.

With an 11-0 record, the Tigers travel to Brockton on Tuesday. That is their last match before the state tournament begins.

C-C stifles Lions

There's no stopping the talent-steeped Concord-Carlisle team this spring.

The undefeated Patriots, who won the state championship the last two years, dispatched Newton South, 5-0, for their 13th victory of the current season.

Newton South, which is 10-4 for the campaign, showed overall improvement despite the loss. Concord freshman Erica Ehlmetz, who hadn't lost a single set this year, was pushed to three sets by Lisa Hausman, also a freshman. In the first meeting, Hausman was blanked, 6-0, 6-0, by Ehlmetz.

In the second doubles, Newton South's Amy Freedman and Lisa Teuscher played very well and pushed their opponents to three sets.

The summaries:

Newton North 4, Brookline 0

Cowens fights back for Central Giants, 14-9

NEWTON — Bill Cowens got slapped for nine first-inning runs Monday, but the 12-year-old right-hander did all the slapping for the next six innings.

Cowens hurled shutout ball the rest of the way, allowing just two hits while striking out 14, and the Giants pulled off a miraculous comeback, taking the Phillies by surprise, 14-9, in Newton Central Little League action played at Cabot Field.

Arlo Lation had a hand in the comeback, hitting two home runs for the Giants and driving in a total of five runs. Matt Jakuboski had three hits in four tries.

Newton East

Andy Gregory bounced a single off the first baseman's glove in the bottom of the sixth inning Sunday, snapping a 1-1 tie to boost the Dodgers past the Orioles, 2-1, in Newton East Little League action played at Richardson Field.

Dodger's pitcher Danny Finkelstein and Orioles' hurler Steve Elliot were engaged in a scoreless war until the top of the sixth when Oriole Skyler Coppedge roped a two-out double, the first hit off Finkelstein.

Earlier, Davis ripped four hits and drove in three runs as the Dodgers bumped off the previously unbeaten Newton Central Giants, 17-6, at Newton Centre.

Newton South

Beau Burlingame pitched the complete game, striking out 15, as trhe Padres beat the Cardinals, 19-4, in Newton South Little League played Monday at Richardson Field.

Burlingame pitched four-innings of one-run ball as the Padres built a 14-1 lead into a 14-7 victory over the Cubs Saturday at Richardson Field this weekend.

Alex Ross turned in a four-hitter, striking out 12, as the Orioles beat the White Sox, 11-5. Ross swung a heavy bat, too, hitting 2-for-3.

Thursday, the Padres clipped the Orioles, 13-6, powered by Bender's two doubles and two singles.

Arrythmia

Arrythmia is any irregularity or abnormality in the rhythm of the heartbeat. An abnormal rhythm, or arrythmia, usually starts somewhere other than the normal pacemaker cells in the heart. Arrythmias may be caused by disease or injury to the heart or elsewhere in the body, by drugs such as caffeine and by anxiety or nervousness. Arrythmias may occur without any sensation at all and usually must be identified by recording the heart's activity on an electrocardiogram. Often, no special treatment is necessary to treat or prevent arrythmia.

Why you should wear designer eyeglasses.

For one thing, they can make you feel special – give you a lift that comes from wearing the latest styles and colors. For another, they cost less than you might think. Our prices for leading designer eyeglasses are often less than what "they" charge for regular eyeglasses.

Starting at $59.95, complete for frames & lenses in most single-vision prescriptions, you can choose from Christian Dior, Optyl, Viennaline, Adensco, Calvin Klein, Liz Claiborne, Metzler, Terri Brogan, Stetson, Zele, Anne Klein and Charmant. And our selection is made up of the most popular current styles – no close-outs, seconds or discontinued models.

So why not treat yourself to something special and get the best value for your dollar at New England's largest family of eye doctors – Cambridge Eye Associates.

10% Discount to Senior Citizens on prescription eyewear

$25 Comprehensive eye examination. Includes glaucoma test, cataract check and slit lamp evaluation.

High plus and high minus prescriptions available at comparably low prices

To be sold unreserved- 473 Auburn St. Newton, MA.
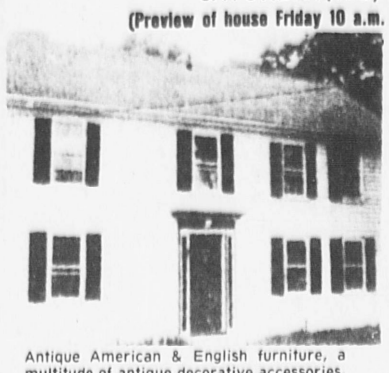
SATURDAY, May 31st, 10:00 a.m.
(Preview of house Friday 10 a.m. all day - 8:30 day of sale)



Already 50 years old when the first shots were fired at Lexington, The Robinson Homestead (c. 1726), subsequently known as Nathaniel Whittemore's Tavern, has been identified as one of the likely gathering places of the Patriots. It is the oldest standing dwelling in the Auburndale section of Newton. Ten rooms, 6 fireplaces, 12,000 sq. ft. privacy-fenced lot. Grandfathered as a legal 2-family, you can live in and restore one side while the other furnishes income, should you retire. Requires extensive interior restoration. Steps to the Boston train and minutes to Boston on the Massachusetts Turnpike, this is a treasure not easily found in such a convenient location. Newton is known for its fine schools and services.

Antique American & English furniture, a multitude of antique decorative accessories, oriental china, primitives, paintings, prints, old estate oriental rugs. 1969 Datsun Roadster.

TERMS OF REAL ESTATE PURCHASE- $15,000 down, cash or certified check at time of sale. Additional amount equal to 20% of bid price due within ten banking days. Balance due in 30 days. Sale subject to confirmation.

PERSONAL TREATMENT. PROFESSIONAL CARE.

At Newton-Wellesley Hospital, we believe in - and utilize fully - all the advanced medical technology available today. And to that, we add what we believe is also a critical component of superior health care. It's a simple matter of treating people as individuals, of remembering what the word care really means. So while we're proud to employ sophisticated technology, we're even prouder to employ sensitive people. And right now, we're looking for more of them in the following areas:

Second Secretary, President's Office

Please contact us if you are well-organized, with excellent typing and transcription skills, and [illegible]e an interest in greeting and assisti[illegible]ospital staff, officials and the public.

Join the President's support team. Report to the executive assistant and enhance the basics which you obtained in a secretarial educational program. Assist in addressing the complex demands of providing excellent health care services in a professional manner.

Outpatient Department Secretary/Receptionist

We are seeking a full-time secretary/receptionist with past work experience in a medical environment. You will work in a busy department with a diversity of responsibilities including answering phones, greeting patients, typing, transcribing and filing. If you have good secretarial skills, knowledge of medical terminology, and a pleasant and patient manner, we would like to talk with you about this position.

Switchboard Personnel

Do you find yourself with spare time each week? Would you like to re-enter the work force, but need some training? We are seeking dependable individuals who enjoy lots of public contact. As a member of our switchboard team, you will be at the center of our communications network providing the critical link between the public and the hospital. Part-time positions with flexible hours are currently available.

If interested in any of the above positions, please call Leslie Blachman at 243-6481 or come by and complete an application.

We offer a competitive salary and a full range of benefits including Earned Time, dental insurance and free parking. NWH is a 350-bed teaching hospital located near the Woodland MBTA station on the Riverside Line. Newton-Wellesley Hospital, 2014 Washington Street, Newton, MA 02162.

If you won't read these 7 signals of cancer... You probably have the 8th.

1. Change in bowel or bladder habits.
2. A sore that does not heal.
3. Unusual bleeding or discharge.
4. Thickening or lump in breast or elsewhere.
5. Indigestion or difficulty in swallowing.
6. Obvious change in wart or mole.
7. Nagging cough or hoarseness.
8. A fear of cancer that can prevent you from detecting cancer at an early stage. A stage when it is highly curable. Everyone's afraid of cancer, but don't let it scare you to death.

Career opportunities

General — Business — Medical Professional — Sales — Management

You Can Take Credit For Your Own Success.

Or you can take Mortgage. BayBanks Credit and BayBanks Mortgage – the two dynamic subsidiaries of BayBank Norfolk that handle credit and loan operations for the entire BayBanks network – have challenging, non-degreed opportunities for ambitious people.

Loan Processing Clerks
Full-time

Loan Collectors
Full-time, part-time

Customer Service Clerks
Full-time

Whether you're looking for a full-time or evening position, you'll find the flexible schedule to suit your lifestyle. Best of all, we'll provide the training you need and a work environment that will support your career goals. And with BayBanks' annual growth rate of better than 30%, opportunities for advancement keep getting better all the time.

The Benefits of Success.

For both full and part-time people, benefits include health and life insurance, profit sharing, tuition reimbursement, free employee checking, paid holidays and vacation and more – plus salaries competitive with any in the Boston area, without the frustrating downtown commute.

Yours for the taking.

To explore these opportunities, call Ellie Bridge at 329-7618 or stop by 858 Washington Street, Dedham, MA to fill out an application.

"LARGE ENOUGH TO SERVE - SMALL ENOUGH TO CARE"

Safety Officer League installs new president

WATERTOWN — Officer Frank Poirier a 22-year veteran of the Belmont Police Department was elected President of the Massachusetts Safety Officers League and installed in office at a meeting held at the Watertown Elks Hall, where he is a past exalted ruler.

The organization composed of over 200 safety officers, registry officials, meets monthly to promote safety in all aspects through the principle approach of school safety programming.

Poirier who had been a safety officer for nine years prior to a reassignment to patrol was elected a member of the board of directors for seven years and was elected president under suspension of the rule that the office could be held only by an active safety officer.

The League felt Poirier was entitled to serve for his past and continued service and was so elevated.

Poirier is a North Cambridge native, graduated from our Lady of Pity High School in Cambridge, and saw service in the Intelligence service in the U.S. Army receiving his training at the A.S.A. School at Fort Devens. Following his discharge he married Virginia Bennett of Belmont, and they have one daughter, a clerk in the Probation Department of the Waltham District Court.

Frank Poirier received an Associate Degree in Law Enforcement and was a member of the first graduating class of Middlesex College in Bedford.

As a member of the board of directors, he chaired committees of school safety, pedestrian, bicycle, and driving safety. In addition, he introduced a program of alertness and recognition of child abuse and molestation prevention.

David Carrier conducts the Newton Choral Society.

Choral society to end season

NEWTON — After drawing sell-out crowds at two concerts earlier this season, the Newton Choral Society, David Carrier conducting, will conclude its tenth-year anniversary celebration with a spring program. The June 1, 7:30 p.m. concert also marks the society's Boston debut at The Old South Church, Boylston and Dartmouth Streets, at the Copley "T" stop — a plus for those unable to travel to the Newton concerts.

The society prides itself on performing a combination of major and lesser-known choral works, and this upcoming concert is no exception. The program will include the ever-popular Faure "Requiem" as well as Faure's "Cantiques de Jean Racine" and Poulenc's "Litanies a la Vierge Noire," the latter to be sung by the women's chorus.

Accompanying the society will be soprano soloist Emily Raymer, who brings to the group her special interest in French music. Locally, Raymer has premiered works by Boston composers on the "Extension Works" and "Omnibus" contemporary music series, and she has also performed for audiences in London and Dublin. Baritone Paul Houghtaling, whose solo performances include appearances with the Fall River Symphony Orchestra, the Mastersingers, and the Bach Society of Worcester, will also appear.

Tickets for the June 1 concert will be available at the door for $6 ($4 for seniors and students). For more information on the program, call 527-SING.

Adventure '86 is in July

The Needham Park and Recreation Department is co-sponsoring Adventure '86 with Boston University's Sargent Camp July 21-24 this summer. Adventure '86 is a unique outdoor program which offers boys and girls ages 10-15, the opportunity to learn outdoor camping and survival skills and to challenge themselves physically and emotionally through participation in adventure-based outdoor experiences.

Sargent Camp is located 1½ hours from Boston in Southern New Hampshire's Monadnock Region. It's 850 acres of field and forest surround a 60 acre pond, small river and floating glacial bog. An extensive trail system is maintained for hiking, winter ski-touring and nature study.

The fee for Adventure '86 is $155 which includes everything except $5 fee for bus ride up and back. Registration is ongoing in the Park and Recreation office weekdays 8:30 a.m.-5 p.m.

Welcome To DOM'S

About a decade ago, DOM'S introduced Northern Italian food and fresh home-made pasta to Boston. Now that these innovations have become benchmarks of quality in local Italian restaurants, we are introducing a new aspect of Italian food, regional cooking, representing each of the provinces of Italy. Come savor some of the finest Italian cuisine to be found outside of Italy.

When Opportunity Knocks...

It's hard to know just when opportunity will knock. It may come when we least expect it or are least prepared for it. That comes under the category of chance.

If you're in business, you know full well that you can't run a successful business on chance or happenstance. Your responsibility as a business manager is to make things happen...when you want them to...in adequate numbers...and from the consumers who can and will buy your product or service.

That's called promotion. And, when you couple proper promotion with in-depth market knowledge you are on the road to successful sales action.

This is where Transcript Newspapers knowledgeable advertising representatives can lend a helping hand. We are experts in market knowledge and advertising promotions. Coupled with our professional art department we can help you create an advertising message that will be read, remembered and acted on. That's what will make your sales register ring.

Give Transcript Newspapers a call today...and ask to speak to one of our professional advertising representatives. We'll make your business life easier and happier.
